CRASH IN THE NIGHT

A Steamer Plunged Into by a Four-Masted Schooner.

BOTH SINK TO THE BOTTOM.

Men, Women and Children Perish on the Sinking Vessels.

Nearly One Hundred Lives Lost off Barnegat—Twelve Seamen Rescued While Clinging to Rigging—Graphic Description of the Collision by One of the Survivors—Grief for Lost Friends.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Six short miles off Barnegat, on the Jersey coast, on Thursday evening, was the steamship Vizcaya, on her way to Havana. Near by was an unknown and probably unseen schooner. The night was clear—the moon shining brightly, the sea smooth. The hour, 8:30.

Seven minutes later both vessels were at the bottom of the sea, and with them sank eighty-one of their passengers and crews.

In those seven minutes a collision and death struggle with the waves had taken place; a scene had occurred which even the dozen survivors cannot give the details of without stopping to make sure that it is not all a horrible dream.

The entire lot of passengers of the Vizcaya were lost. Their names are: Senor Juan Pedro, a partner of the firm of J. M. Ceballos & Co., of this city, and one of the owners of the lost steamship; M. A. Calvo, wife and son; M. Purr and two children; Mr. A. Ruiz, Jose Acabia, Ramon Alvarez, Juan F. Hedman; Oscar Islam; Ligui Pellon and Jose M. Garcia.

Twelve of the crew of seventy-seven were saved from the steamship. The fate of the crew of the schooner is still unknown.

The first news received of the disaster in this city was when the steamer Humboldt from Brazil arrived at her dock in Brooklyn, having on board the 12 survivors of the catastrophe, which she had picked up at daybreak yesterday.

A Cry for Help.

Captain Black of the Humboldt said that at daybreak his ship was off Barnegat Light. Suddenly, from off their port bow, came a cry for help. Peering in that direction through the mist of the early morning the officers saw three masts sticking out of the water, and clinging to the yards and rigging people were seen. Quickly a boat was lowered and rowed to the unfortunate people. There were 12 of them, all sailors, clinging to the spars, and their joy was unspeakable when they were taken into the boats. They all belonged to the steamship Vizcaya and were chilled to the bone from their exposure to wind and wave, and could hold out but a little longer.

They were taken on board the Humboldt, brought to this city, and taken at once to the office of J. M. Ceballos & Co., 90 Wall street, the owners of the Vizcaya.

They could not talk English, and for some time it was impossible to obtain from any of them a correct account of the wreck. From Dr. Rico the best account was obtained. Dr. Rico said:

A Survivor's Account.

"Everything was working nicely. The weather was fine, the moon shone bright and the sea was smooth. It was about 8 o'clock when I was on deck and took a few turns back and forth while smoking an after-dinner cigarette. I didn't see any vessel near us. The ship was in charge of the first officer, who was on the bridge. I went down to the saloon then, and there met Mrs. Calvo. We sat down and began talking. Suddenly, I heard the gong in the engine room ring the stop signal. Before I could even wonder what it was for, there came an awful shock, a crashing, scraping sound on the deck over our heads, and the steamer rolled over on her port side.

"Everybody in the saloon was thrown down. All was excitement—men, women and children shrieking for help.

A Terrible Scene.

"Mrs. Calvo seized my hands and begged me to find and save her boy. I told her I would. I started up to the deck to find him. When I got to the companionway, a terrible scene met my eyes. The bridge, deck house and fore-rigging were all torn away, there was a great gash in the starboard side just abaft the coal bunkers, and through this opening the water was pouring in. Close by on our starboard side beam was a big four-masted schooner, her bowsprit and fore-rigging gone and her bow stove in. She too, was filling rapidly. Men were running here and there all over our decks, shouting all kinds of orders, and I can remember seeing the crew of the schooner doing the same thing on their vessel.

Sinking of the Vessels.

"The next thing I knew the water was making over our decks. The steamer was fast sinking. With a wild idea of saving ourselves, several of the crew and myself scrambled up the port fore-rigging. Down, down went the steamer and up we climbed. We reached the fore-gallant yard, and just then the hull reached the bottom. There were 12 of us on the yard. Some of our crew had tried to reach the schooner, but she had sunk almost as quickly as had the Vizcaya and as far as we could see not a soul but ourselves was in sight.

A Night of Suffering.

"One of the men on the yard said that while climbing the rigging he had seen a boat lowered from the schooner and seven men get in and row away. We looked all around but couldn't see anything. Then, in hope of attracting the attention from some passing vessel or some one on the shore (we were only six miles off the coast), we cut the tarred ropes on the yard into pieces a foot or two long, and lighting these, waved them in the air as long as they lasted. But no one came to our aid, and all through the long night we clung to that yard, growing colder and stiffer as each hour passed. Toward daybreak a cold fog settled on us and made matters worse.

"When one of the men on the yard said he thought he heard a steamer passing by, we all halloed as loud as our numb condition would permit us to. Then a boat made its appearance and we were taken on board the Humboldt. We could not have held out much longer."

TRAGEDY IN ELMIRA.

A Milkman Fatally Shoots a Widow Who Jilted Him.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Another of the tragedies which have won Elmira a large amount of unpleasant notoriety occurred at 57 North Main street.

Misses Hill and Decker run a dressmaking establishment there and do not enjoy a good reputation. Neither did Mrs. Foster, a widow of 30, who often visited there. She had been keeping company with William Decker, a milkman, and was going to marry him, but changed her mind in favor of a mechanic in the Bridge factory. Decker learned of this yesterday and threatened to shoot her and himself.

He called on Mrs. Foster in the Hill and Decker women's rooms last night and without any threats drew a revolver and fatally shot the woman. The ball penetrated her brain near the left temple. Mrs. Foster was good-looking. She was a widow and had a child 13 years old. Decker escaped and has not been caught. He is 32 years old.

Manslaughter in the First Degree.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—After being out all night the jury in the case of Actor Webster for the murder of Robert McNeil, who he accused of undue intimacy with his wife, returned a verdict of guilty of manslaughter in the first degree. Sentence was suspended for one week to allow counsel to make application for a new trial. The punishment is not less than ten nor more than twenty years in State's prison. The jury it is understood at first stood six for conviction in the first degree and six for acquittal on the ground of insanity, providing the prisoner would be confined in an asylum.

His Daring Cost Him His Life.

BRADDOCK, Pa., Nov. 1.—While trying to show his daring to his fellow workmen, Robert Washington, a colored man of this place, was instantly killed from the effect of an electric shock received by catching hold of a lamp. While standing in the Carnegie blast furnace young Washington laughingly said he was not afraid of electrocution, and reaching high over his head he grasped an electric lamp. Instantly he fell to the floor dead.

Copper Mine in New Jersey.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Nov. 1.—A rich deposit of copper has been discovered at Middlebush, nine miles west of this city, on the farm of Daniel Polhemus. The vein is said to run directly through the farm and underneath Polhemus's house. New York capitalists have formed a syndicate and purchased the right to mine the vein, giving Polhemus $1.50 for each load of dirt removed. The ore contains 30 per cent. of copper.

Fay Templeton Gets Her Diamonds.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—U. S. Attorney Mitchell received a letter from Secretary of the Treasury Windom releasing Fay Templeton's diamonds on condition that she pay all the court expenses incurred since the seizure by the officers of the jewels, and upon the signing of an acknowledgement that there were just grounds for such seizure. Miss Templeton agreed to the proposition of the Secretary.

Arrest of a Railroad Agent.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 1.—Charles L. Stratton, auditor and transfer agent of the Northern Division of the Boston & Maine Railroad in this city, has been arrested, charged with embezzling $4,000 of the railroad's funds, and in default of $6,000 bail was committed to jail. He is very reticent and refuses to say anything as to what became of the money.

They Want American Capital.

MONTREAL, Nov. 1.—Speaking of the proposal to impose an export duty on Canadian nickel, Prof. Bell of the Dominion Government Geological Survey, said: "Whoever made that suggestion is simply an idiot. We want American capital to help us in developing our nickel mines."

Departure of the Count of Paris.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The Count of Paris and his suite boarded the steamer City of Berlin last night and passed the evening saying good-bye to their friends. The night was well along when the last of the visitors went ashore. The steamer sailed early this morning.

Williams Beat Cornell.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Nov. 1.—Williams beat Cornell 19 to 8 at football. It was a hard fought game.

DIED FROM REMORSE

A Faithless Husband Unmasked by His Wife.

HE KNEELS AND BEGS FOR MERCY

Returning to His Home He Commits Suicide in a Horrible Way.

He Left a Touching Letter Confessing His Wrongdoing and Justified His Wife in Her Course—His Wealth Dissipated on the Woman Who Lured Him From His Home.

WEAVERSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 1.—A pistol shot at 2 a. m. attracted Mrs. Henry Irwins and her two daughters to the room of Mr. Irwins. They forced the door and found him dead in a pool of blood, with a large pistol of the cavalry pattern in his hand. The top of his head was almost blown off, and there was every indication of a most deliberate suicide.

Irwins located here about ten years ago and was regarded as enterprising, able and wealthy. He erected a number of building and secured a controlling interest in Halpin's lumber yards, the business of which he doubled. In his domestic life he was considered very happy.

A change occurred about four years ago, and, as usual, there is a woman in the case. She is handsome, of course, to all appearances a lady of culture and wealth, and made her herself a home in a neat cottage in an adjoining town. There was some mystery about her, and to this was added the scandal of an intimacy between her and Irwins that resulted in his neglect of his family and his business.

Wrath of a Wronged Wife.

Frequent absence from home on the part of her husband, sometimes for a week at a time, finally arroused suspicion in the mind of Mrs. Irwins. After preparation for a week's absence he left home yesterday noon, but was shadowed by his wife and followed to the cottage of the woman referred to. She secured admission to the cottage, cleverly disguised, and pretending to be in search of a cottage for sale or to rent. During the conversation between the two women Irwins entered the parlor where they were, but did not recognize his wife. As he entered, the woman occupying the cottage said:

"My husband might be able to direct you, but this house is neither for rent or for sale."

Mrs. Irwins was unable to control herself any longer, but rising to her feet threw off the disguise and exclaimed: "Your husband, madame!"

Quickly drawing from the folds of her dress a small cowhide she used it with a vengeance on the pair.

Prayers for Mercy.

The assailed woman fled for safety. The confounded husband knelt and implored his wife to save him from further disgrace by returning home at once, promising to follow her and explain everything to her satisfaction. She went home and in a short time he appeared before his family. His two daughters, Grace and Ellen, aged respectively 15 and 16 years, left the room where their mother was as he entered. Irwins told his wife he was not well enough to discuss the matter then, but would do so in the morning. Then he went to his room, and the sequel has already been told.

Irwin left a touching letter wherein he confessed his wrongdoing and justified his wife in the course she had taken. He had allowed himself to fall under the domination of the woman at the cottage, who had used her power over him. He had rented and maintained the cottage for her and had visited her at the time of the denouement of his evil romance to pay her $500 that she had demanded, with threats of exposure if it were not paid. The letter also hinted that the suicide was financially ruined.

A Threatened Strike Averted.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The threatened trouble between the London Dockers' Union and the shipping companies has been averted for the present. The details of the agreement are not definitely known, but it is understood that the compromise is almost as advantageous to the men as they could have desired as the result of a strike, while on the other hand the employers have staved off the loss of many thousands of pounds and a probable diversion of some of their business to other ports.

Ground to Pieces.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Noah J. Swenson was literally ground to pieces under the flying crank of the big engine in the plant of the Western Paving Supply Company during the morning. His skull was crushed, his limbs were twisted and broken and his body was shattered and torn. He was accidentally thrown under the deadly crank by a fellow employe named Henry Lundstadt, with whom he was scuffling over the greasy and slippery floor of the engine room.

TERRIBLE SCENES.

Graphic Description of the Collision by a Rescued Seaman.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—A seaman of the Vizcaya, named Juan Seyjas, tells the story of the disaster as follows:

"I have been a sailor for years, but in all my experience I never saw such a sight. Men, women and children jumped from the deck of the sinking ship, and clinging to the spars for pieces of wreckage, drifted away on the waves. It was worse than anything ever told in fiction. Men wept like women. They said good-by to wives and children and then drifted away in the darkness, no one knows where. Children were carried one way and mothers another, while all the time the ship was getting deeper and deeper under water.

"After the first crash there was a cry from the schooner which had done the damage, and then the sound made by the suction told us that she had gone down. As nearly as we could see, she went down bow first. None of her crew, so far as I know, were saved, nor do I know who or what she was.

"As the Vizcaya rapidly settled, the few men aboard made for the rigging. The water was 12 fathoms deep, and our only hope was that we were over some shoal, and that our tops would be left dry. It is useless to say that the men acted as cowards. They were as helpless as children. Every one was panic stricken and the first thought was self. The ship sank nine minutes after the collision. Ten minutes later only her main and fore-tops were above water, and clinging to the rigging were the men who were taken off with me."

OTHERS RESCUED.

The Collier Was the Cornelius Hargrave from Philadelphia.

LEWES, Del., Nov. 1.—The tug Hercules arrived here last night and reports that the schooner Cornelius Hargrave, coal laden, from Philadelphia to Fall River, Mass., was the vessel which collided with the steamer Vizcaya off Barnegat.

It was said that ten men from the Hargrave and seven from the steamer were picked up by the schooner Sarah L. Davis and were transferred to the Hercules and subsequently landed at the Lewes life saving station. The corpse of a woman is said to have been picked up.

Life Savers Looking for the Dead.

BEACH HAVEN, N. J., Nov. 1.—The crew of the life saving station have patroled the beach all day, but neither wreckage or bodies have come ashore from the wrecks. The wrecks lie off shore in about forty feet of water, and are directly in the track of ocean steamers and coasters, and it is possible that some of the crew and passengers of the steamer Vizcaya may ha ve been picked up.

Nellie Piercy Makes a Partial Confession.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Mrs. Nellie Piercy, charged with murdering Mrs. Hobbs and her young child, and whom the husband of the murdered woman acknowledged to be his mistress, has admitted that she had asked Mrs. Hobbs to visit her on the day of the murder. While the two women were talking the prisoner took offense at a remark made by her visitor and resented it. A few words then ensued between them. Here the prisoner abruptly concluded her confession with the explanation that she had better say nothing more.

Paul du Chaillu Praises Stanley.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—Mr. Paul du Chaillu, the famous traveler and author, who is now here, unsparingly praises Mr. Stanley, whose explorations, conducted under the most trying circumstances, will result in immense advantage to the civilized world, as well as to Africa itself. Concerning the unfortunate controversy between Mr. Stanley and some of his late associates, Mr. Du Chaillu said but little that is new.

Cut His Throat With a Razor.

MALDEN, Mass., Nov. 1.—Marshall L. Richards committed suicide at his mother's residence on Main street by cutting his throat with a razor. No cause can be assigned beyond apparent ill health. The deceased was 26 years of age, and was employed by the Houston Electric Light Company, from which city he had but recently returned.

A Master Architect Dead.

BOSTON, Nov. 1.—William Washburn, aged 83, an architect of high standing, is dead. Mr. Washburn, who was born in Lyme, N. H., was recognized by the profession as a master of architecture. He made a specialty of hotels, and the Fifth Avenue and Victoria, of New York, and most of the best known hotels here are monuments of his skill.

Held by a Bulldog.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 31.—Charles Bromfield of New York was taking a walk in Stonington when William Gardiner's bulldog planted its fangs in his leg, above the knee. The brute's teeth were buried in Bromfield's flesh and it required several men with clubs to make the dog let go. The village constable killed the dog.

Narrow Escape from Death.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 1.—At 1:50 a. m. fire was discovered burning fiercely in the large frame building, No. 1417 Third avenue, West Troy. There were four families who occupied the building, sleeping within, and they were only awakened in time to escape death in the flames. The building was left in complete ruin before the fire could be checked.

A Colored Murderer to be Electrocuted.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Recorder Smyth decided that Joseph Wood, the young colored murderer who shot and killed a man known as Ruffin in Shaft 21 of the new aqueduct April 18, 1889, should be executed according to law in the week beginning Monday, Dec. 1. Wood will be at once taken back to Sing Sing.

A COMPLETE CENSUS

The Declared Population of the United States.

THERE ARE 62,480,540 OF US.

The Increase in Ten Years Was Over Twelve Million.

The Last Decade Shows a Reduction in the Rate of Increase Considering the Large Immigration—Both Political Parties Close Their Headquarters at the National Capital.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The census office announced the population of the United States to be 62,480,540. These figures are exclusive of white persons in Indian Territory, Indians on reservations and Alaska.

These figures may be slightly changed by later and more exact compilations, but such changes will not be material.

In 1880 the population was 50,155,872. The absolute increase of the population in the ten years intervening was 12,324,757, and the percentage of increase was 24.57.

In 1870 the population was stated as 38,558,371. According to these figures the absolute increase in the decade between 1870 and 1880 was 11,597,412, and the percentage of increase was 30.08.

The bulletin announcing these figures is addressed to Secretary Noble and signed by Superintendent Porter. It says: "Upon their face these figures show that the population has increased between 1880 and 1890 only 727,424 more than between 1870 and 1880, while the rate of increase has apparently diminished from 30.08 to 25 47 per cent." If these figures were derived from correct data they would indeed be disappointing."

Such a reduction in the rate of increase in the face of the enormous immigration during the past ten years would argue a great diminition in the fecundity of the population or a corresponding increase in its death rate.

CLAIMS OF COMMITTEES.

Democrats Say They Will Control the House—Republicans Say Not.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Both the National Congressional Committees have closed their headquarters here. Both appear sanguine of the outcome.

The Democrats claim the next House by majorities ranging from 16 to 40, and are counting on almost a solid delegation from the South.

On the other hand, the Republican Committee asserts that the Republicans will control the next House, and that their majority will not be lower than seven. Instead of the five seats conceded by the Democrats to them in the South, they are counting on at least fifteen or twenty. The claim they will elect three each in Missouri, Virginia and North Carolina, two in West Virginia and the same number in Arkansas, one each in Louisiana, Alabama, South Carolina, Maryland and Kentucky.

Want Representation in Congress.

WASHINGTON, Nov 1.—The election for delegate in the United States Congress from Alaska has resulted in favor of Capt. James Carroll, of the steamship Queen. Such a seat does not exist as yet, but the convention recently held passed resolutions asking Congress to accord Alaska a seat in that body. It also adopted a lengthy memorial setting forth the injustice of Congress in so long denying Alaska a representative in Congress, also "that there are no means of obtaining titles to the land upon which we have built our homes, and that the prohibitory liquor law is obnoxious to the people."

CLEVELAND TALKS.

The Ex-President Interviewed About the Political Situation.

ALBANY, Nov. 1.—The Argus to-day prints a lengthy interview with ex-President Cleveland on the political situation. Mr. Cleveland wants it thoroughly understood that his refusal to go on the stump is not through lack of sympathy with the Democratic candidates.

He says the cause of the Democratic party is tariff reform, but that "the judgment of our countrymen has been so trammeled and their perceptions have been so clouded by prejudice and appeals to self interest that their apprehensions of the true province of our government has been distorted, and there can be no advance in tariff reform when these ideas prevail."

Governor Hill in Hartford.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 1.—Governor Hill of New York arrived here at 7 o'clock last night. He was met by the Democratic leaders, including Luzon B. Morris, candidate of that party for Governor of this State. After luncheon he was driven to Allyn Hall, where he was greeted by 2,000 people. He was introduced by ex-U. S. Senator Eaton. He alluded to the effect of the McKinley bill upon the interests of the laboring men and consumers of the country, and stated the position of the Democratic party on the tariff question as enunciated in the platforms of 1884 and 1888.

Failure of an Old Firm.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—In business circles there was great surprise over the announcement that Leopold Brothers & Co., wholesale dealers in and manufacturers of clothing, have failed. Their liabilities will aggregate $300,000. The firm was established in 1856 and did a business of about $1,000,000 a year. The tightness of the money market and slowness of collections are the reasons given for the failure.

TWO WEEKS TO LIVE.

Birchall Confident that His Sentence Will be Commuted.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 1.—Mrs. Birchall called at the jail and had a long interview with her husband through the bars of the corridor. Her sorrow is painful to behold. She is confident that the petitions and her interview with the Minister of Justice will obtain for her husband a commutation or a stay of sentence. After leaving the jail she left for Toronto, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. West-Jones. They will remain there a day or two to get signatures for the petition and will then go on to Ottawa to present it.

Mr. Dougall MacMurphy, who was associated in the case during the trial, had a consultation with Birchall's solicitors with reference to the "Colonel." He is to leave for Montreal to-night to interview parties there on the matter. If the inquiries are satisfactory, an application may be made for a stay of proceedings and detectives will be employed to hunt up the "Colonel" and if possible clear up the mystery.

The most unconcerned person in the whole matter is Birchall himself. He is almost confident that his sentence will be commuted, but he says little about it. He pursues the even tenor of his way quite regardless of the lapse of time and the nearness of the fatal 14th of November. He retires about 8 o'clock every morning and sleeps until noon. He has his breakfast of oatmeal mush, followed by sausages, canned salmon or chicken, and a cup of coffee. He smokes, reads the papers, spends an hour or so over his correspondence, having many a hearty laugh over the ravings of the cranks who are constantly writing to him, and spends the intervening time to supper in exercise.

In the evening he smokes, and chats with his guard until about 10 o'clock. Then he pulls himself together and starts to work on his autobiography. He writes and sketches steadily through the night until between 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning. He turns out from ten to fifteen pages of closely-written foolscap during this time, writing slowly and with great care. He then retires. There is no trace of weariness in him and he seems to enjoy his literary work.

A Chance for Queen Emma.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 1.—It is reported that the Netherland Council of State will exercise ruling powers for a month and if there is then no sign of improvement Queen Emma will be formally invested with the regency.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Congregational Church of South Granville, N. Y., celebrated its centenary.

The labor agitation in Australia has resulted in the resignation of the Victorian Cabinet.

About four and a half inches of snow fell in the vicinity of Watertown, N. Y., during the night.

William Snowden was fined $20 in Newark, N. J., for having driven a pitchfork into the head of a vicious horse.

Joseph Wood, who was to be put to death by electricity in the Dannemora prison next week, secured a respite through an appeal.

The leprous character of the disease afflicting John Anderson of Chester, Pa., has been confirmed by official medical examination.

Henry L. Parker, who for nearly forty years has been a druggist at New Haven, Conn., was last night seized with apoplexy at his store and is not expected to live.

Providence, R. I., people are indignant because, pending repairs to the base of the Mayor Doyle statue, the statue is held partially recumbent over a mass of debris by a rope around the neck.

In New York city "Spider" Kelly, "Benny" Murphy, Dominick McCaffrey, "Jack" McAuliffe, "Billy" Oliver and Mrs. Dresden, who were parties to a prize fight which was alleged to have taken place in a hall on St. Marks Place, recently, were given a hearing in the Court of Special Sessions and the Court decided the evidence insufficient and discharged the entire party from custody.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—For New England and Eastern New York: Fair weather; westerly winds and slightly warmer by Sunday morning.

For New Jersey and Delaware: Fair weather; westerly winds and warmer by Sunday morning.

For Western New York: Fair weather, except occasional showers on the lake shore; southerly winds; warmer by Sunday morning.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

The Presbyterian Synod of New Jersey recently unanimously decided to protest and vote against any Assemblyman or Senator nominated who would not pledge himself decidedly against all legislation to permit or protect race track gamblers. Consequently the Rev. Dr. Ketcham's and the Rev. Mr. Richards' people will understand that their two votes will not be cast for Mr. Rankin.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—Dr. L. S. Pocock, the only veterinary surgeon in Plainfield, has removed his office to 9 West Sixth street—Stelle's livery.

—Farmers who are doing their Fall plowing, are uncovering vast numbers of the larvæ of the rose bug, which was so troublesome last season.

—Don't forget to purchase your groceries on Monday as Tuesday is election day and legal holiday and all business places will close for the entire day.

—Edsall says something in his advertisement today in regard to all kinds of floor coverings and window furnishings that will interest those who have new residences to furnish.

—Chestnuts are this year abundant. A great crop has been produced in the mountains of Maryland and West Virginia, and New York and New Jersey furnish a moderately good supply, so that the selling price will be reasonable all Winter.

—Ed. P. Thorn caught yesterday what he has been looking for all Summer, a black bass of the Oswego species, which weighed four pounds and three ounces. The fish was viewed by many persons at Mr. Thorn's place of business, 17 Park avenue.

—The people are begining to appreciate low prices and the Pierson Hardware company are having great success in selling stoves, coal hods, housefurnishing goods, etc., at the reduced price of 10 per cent for cash. They are offering their stock of lamps at 20 per cent off their regular prices.

—The Young Men's Christian Association has secured the services of Ezra Loomis as instructor of a class in bookkeeping and penmanship. This class meets at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, every Monday evening. A two-dollar membership entitles to this and other privileges of the Association.

—The committee of which D. E. Titsworth is chairman, in charge of the music for the Mills meetings, earnestly urge those who are to sing in the chorus choir to be present at the First Baptist church on Monday evening, and to be in their seats so as to commence singing promptly at 7:45.

—The Niagara dining room that has just been opened in the Amphion Hall building, under the proprietorship of Carnell & Slater, will undoubtedly fill a long felt want in more ways than one. It will be a popular place for transients, besides being the supper room for the many balls of the season that will be given in Amphion Hall. The proprietors are men of experience and taste, know how to please, and present a choice bill of fare at reasonable prices. They will also cater for dinners, balls, weddings and picnics.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Oscar Fay Adams, son of W. F. Adams of Duer street, has an article on "The Ruthless Sex," in The North American Review for November.

Miss Alice B Spangenberg, of Nethermood, has been elected a member of the Executive Committee of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union.

The fifteen-pound daughter of Mr and Mrs. Lawrence F. Green born last week Wednesday, will be christened with appropriate ceremonies at St. Mary's church to-morrow afternoon.

Miss Annie Miller, Principal of the primary department, and Miss Emma Sipp, first assistant of the grammar department of the Chestnut Street school of Newark, are visiting Mrs. Dr. Long, of Park avenue.

Benjamin Smith, of Dunellen, Treasurer of the Convocation of New Brunswick, is a frequent attendant at St. Paul's church, Bound Brook. He has always been greatly interested in that church, and hopes soon to see the new edifice completed.

Mr. and Mrs. George M. Angleman, and Mrs. McVoy, of East Front street, together with Mrs. Hannah Curtis, and Mr. and Mrs. Abram Angleman, drove to Mine Brook, yesterday morning. The party returned last evening all tired, but having most thoroughly enjoy the ride over the mountains and through the beautiful valley of the Passaic.

George Wharton Edwards, of Madison avenue, has a profusion of characteristic illustrations in The Century Magazine for November. "A Legend of Old New York"—another interesting story from the pen of Miss Anna Eichberg King, who produced "Jufrow Van Steen," with illustrations by Edwards, a year ago—is greatly benefited by his brush, and he contributes considerable conventional drawing, in initials and tail-pieces, to the number.

Young Men Will Enjoy It.

E. L. Suffern will conduct the young men's Gospel and Song service at the Y. M. C. A., to-morrow at 4:15 P. M. The average attendance at these meetings for October has been 78, and the interest in them has been marked. Especially was this true last Sunday. Come early and join heartily in the singing which is an especial feature of these meetings.

The Rev. Dr. Jerkes, of this city, at the Baptist convention in Camden, yesterday, was chairman of a committee to protest in the name of 38,000 Baptists of New Jersey against the re-enactment of the laws to legalize pool-selling and book-making. So his congregation will know that he votes for the Hon. Fred. C. Marsh who has already gone through one fight on just that side.

An Evening With Charming Entertainers.

Seminary Hall was packed to its doors, last evening, with a most aristocratic gathering that included the best people of both the borough and city. The occasion was the entertainment arranged by the Guild of the Holy Cross church, and the programme was the varied and attractive one already announced in these columns.

William L. Saunders—to whose good taste and efforts more than those of any other one person is due the financial success of the affair—addressed the assemblage in a happy speech of introduction that captured all at the start and their interest and pleasure never lessened during the evening. Miss Jeanie May opened the programme with a Hungarian dance. It was a well-judged selection, but although a most accomplished player she lacks the strength to do the rough justice to compositions of its nature and requirements. The barcarole that she played at the close of the first part, was more within the grasp of her sex. It was rendered most creditably.

To those who, like the writer, had not had the pleasure and gratification of hearing Maude Agnes Bowers since her graduation from the Boston school of oratory, the talent and brilliancy she displayed was an unexpected and complete satisfaction. She is endowed with genius and personal magnetism, and has attained power and methods of fascination unequalled by all amateurs and unexcelled by most professionals. Her reading of the Chariot Race from "Ben Hur," was full of fire and effectiveness. There was not a fault of emphasis or gesture. Her picture of the "Ruggieses" was also perfect, and the two selections so totally different in every way, evidenced the marvellous versatility of the young reader. The audience's appreciation of her talents and loveliness, was unmistakable.

But Marshal Wilder, it is sad to note, is trimming his monologue with ruching. Now he only shows himself occasionally during the evening as the merry little companion with whom everybody has smiled. He talks with a piano accompaniment now, and when that accompaniment is not song and dance music, the people, as in the recitation of "What is a Kiss?" say one to another, "Wasn't that music lovely?" And it was—in fact it was so much better than the poem, and so much better than the reader, that no attention was accorded them. This was the case also with the rendition of VonBoyle's "Ever so Far Away." Miss Emily Thompson's singing of "Still as the Night" gained for her an encore. She was accompanied by Miss Alice Smith.

Part second of the programme was announced as a "farce," but William L Saunders' interpretation of the leading role was a reality. Those present who had never before met a man of bilious disposition, know now exactly what they must expect. The others, who had been there, recognized the too true illustration. Other parts by Plainfield amateurs in "A Bilious Attack," were filled with remarkable aptitude by Miss Annie Murphy, Mrs. George C. Evans and Walter McGee. Miss Murphy had need to be nothing but herself—a beautiful and graceful woman. Mrs Evans was a pert a maid as ever seen, and Mr. McGee so disguised himself in character and make-up that some do not yet believe it was he.

A Merry Time at Fanwood.

The recent cobweb party at the home of the Misses Pentz, Fanwood, was a delightful affair. The house was filled with invited guests.

Strings were run all through the rooms, up and down the stairs, over chandeliers, under chairs, and into every nook and corner, giving the interior of the house the appearance of a gigantic cobweb. Each guest was furnished with two strings. It was their duty to follow up the strings in their various windings and turnings, rolling them up as they went until at last they reached the end, possibly only a few feet away from where they started, although they may have first wandered through all of the rooms. At the end of each string was a handsome prize. Much merriment was caused, especially when the strings crossed and recrossed each other, and at times became tangled in a most bewildering manner. After the prizes had all been secured, came refreshments and dancing. Among those who were present were Miss Hubbard of Chicago, the Misses Bass of Plainfield, Miss May Pentz of New York, Augustine Smith of Morristown, Mr. McMahon, of Brooklyn, Mr. Stevens, and the Messrs Pentz.

The Salvation Army to Come to Town.

General Booth's Salvation Army officers have been negotiating for the use of Reform Hall during the Winter, and arrangements will soon be completed for the opening of barracks here and the establishing of a local Salvation Army Corps.

Adulterating.

Mr. Alfred Speer, of Passaic, N. J., having noted the want of a strictly pure and a first-class wine, has for the past thirty years devoted his time and capital to raising the Oporto Grape from the vine brought from the Douro valley in Portugal, with the view to supplying this want; that he has been eminently successful, the endorsements which his Port Grape Wine has received from physicians all over this country and in Europe will testify.

The Rev. Dr. E. R. Bodman, rector of Grace Episcopal church, is one of the Plainfield clergymen who signed the war note against race track gambling that was read in all the pulpits in Union county, Sunday the 19th inst. Count his vote therefore for the Hon. Fred. C. Marsh, and also the votes of Dr. Hurlbut, Dr. Lewis and the Revs. Schenck, Taylor, Dilts, Goodrich, Simpson, and Leonard it is just to suppose.

The Committee on Good of the Order. Have Engaged Three Great Attractions.

Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, should be congratulated upon being able to secure Fred Emerson Brooks, the California poet, humorist and reciter, for their entertainment which will take place on Nov. 10, in the Council rooms. Mr. Brooks is a host in himself, and frequently recites for a full evening's entertainment, but the Committee on Good of the Order, have obtained other talent as well. Brother D. W. Robertson, of Fulton Council, Brooklyn, the tumbleronicon soloist, and F. W. Isenbarth, whose performances upon the zither none can excel, will both participate,

Special Services Sunday Night.

An extra effort has been made for interesting services at the Reform Hall for Sunday evening. Mr. T. Richards, of Brooklyn, an able speaker, will deliver an address, and Mrs. Partington, of Portland, Maine, a versatile speaker, and Mrs. C. F. Woodbury, of New York city, General Superintendent of the Demorest Medal Contest Bureau, a lady who is celebrated for her talents, will also speak. This being the closing service at the club until after the series of religious meeting to be conducted by Mr. Mills, it is hoped that a large audience may attend to enjoy the talented addresses.

The Mills' Meetings.

Monday morning, at 7:30, the first Men's prayer meeting will be held in the Y. M. C. A. chapel. Each meeting will last forty-five minutes. Monday afternoon at 2:45 the first Women's prayer meeting will be held in Trinity Reformed church,

At 3:30 P. M. in the same church, Mr. Mills will hold his first meeting. In the evening at 8 o'clock Mr. Mills will preach in the First Baptist church. After Monday the Women's prayer meeting will meet in the lecture room of the First Baptist church at 2:45 P. M. each day.

A Visit From Their Newark Brothers.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, with C. C. DeCamp in the chair, entertained as guests last evening, P. C. Hitchcock, P. C. Anthony, P. C. Jacobus, P. C. Hagar and C. C. Martin, of Puritan Lodge, No. 94, of Newark, and P. C. Wm. Pfeiffer, of Henry Clay Lodge, No. 45, of Newark. There was a grand good fraternal time, and a collation after the meeting.

Her Body Ground to Pieces.

Mary Gilroy, of White House, Somerset county, and who is well-known in this city, was killed by the cars on the Central Railroad last night. She stepped out of the way of one train, near the White House station, just as another passenger train came along on another track. She was ground to pieces.

Woman's Modesty.

Many women are prevented by feelings of delicacy from consulting a physician in those disorders of her peculiarly delicate organism, and the most serious results are often caused by this neglect. To such persons Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an especial boon as it offers a sure and safe cure for all those distressing disorders to which women are peculiarly subject, while it saves a modest girl or woman from the embarrassment of a personal consultation with a physician. "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper.

WHY WOMEN TALK ABOUT IT.

THIS IS WHY.

Ontario Center, N. Y. May 7, 1890.

F. E. C. Medicine Co., Rochester, N. Y.:

For seven or eight years my wife has been troubled with some kind of kidney trouble. She tried many different remedies but all in vain. She continued to grow worse. Last fall I induced her to try the F. E. C. Remedy, and before using one bottle she began to improve, and now, after using six bottles, she is entirely cured. I have recommended it to many and it has benefitted in every case heard from.

For sale by R. J. SHAW, Druggist, Sole Agent. sod

The first letter Gov. Abbett received petitioning him to veto the bill legalizing pool-selling at race tracks, was from the Hon. Fred. C. Marsh, and written on his sick bed. Will you vote for him or for Mr. Rankin who refuses to pledge himself or say a word against the race track gamblers? Remember also, Mr. Rankin's vote was the vote that granted the license to sell liquor on the race track.

The Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, rector of Grace Episcopal church, is one of the Plainfield clergymen who signed the war note against race track gambling that was read in all the pulpits in Union county, Sunday the 19th inst. Count his vote therefore for the Hon. Fred. C. Marsh, and also the votes of Dr. Huribut, Dr. Lewis and the Revs. Schenck, Taylor, Dilts, Goodrich, Simpson, and Leonard it is just to suppose.

SOMERSET DEMOCRATS WINNING VOTES.

A Rousing Meeting in the Borough—Good Speeches by Honest Men.

The public Democratic meeting in Saengerbund Hall, North Plainfield, last evening, was a very interesting affair The hall was well filled with voters, and considerable enthusiasm was manifested The music by the band was of the most inspiring sort, and the speeches were calculated to win votes for the Democratic candidates. Wm. Pangborn called the meeting to order, and on his motion John Bodine was unanimously elected Chairman. The following officers were also chosen by acclamation, and were given seats on the platform:

Vice Presidents—Charles Dresselt, Charles Moore, Henry Kreutzfeld, Jacob Keller, John Vetterlein, Elisha Corlell, Samuel Townsend, Charles Matthews, Fred Slater and John H. Jackson.

Secretaries—John Thickstun, Charles Lyman, S. O'Shane, Henry Woodland.

Honorary Vice Presidents from Plainfield—James E. Martine, V. L. Frazee, E. D. Moffett, L. F. Wadsworth, Lewis H. Brown, Peter Lynn, Jr., S. E. Flower, Henry Liefke, Gen. W. H. Sterling F.W. Heller.

The speakers of the evening, all of whom were given unstinted applause, included Wm. J. Keys, the candidate for Senator, James J. Bergen, the nominee for Assembly, Attorney-General John P. Stockton, and Edward McDonald, who was elected to the State Senate, but who was unseated through Republican machinations.

The speech of Mr. Keys was very short. He merely said that when elected he would do his duty faithfully, but this was enough to draw forth ringing cheers.

Mr. Bergen spoke in ringing terms against the McKinley bill and other Republican treacheries, and praised Gov. Abbett for his straightforward and victorious stand on the question of compelling railroad corporations to pay their taxes and thus relieving the people of a heavy burden. Considering the race track question, he showed that every Republican would have to vote for the legalization of gambling, just as "Boss" Sewell dictated, while the Democratic candidates were all pledged as the people wished, against the iniquitous measure. The Force bill, the unseating of McDonald, and other similar things, he vigorously denounced, and after showing how the workingmen were benefited by Democratic rule he exhorted the people to vote for Keys and the other Democratic candidates as men honest and true.

Gen. Stockton in a scholarly address, and Mr. McDonald in a speech which was also roundly applauded, spread to view the dishonest methods of the Republican party to perpetuate their own power. In reviewing the disgraces of Republican history Gen. Stockton told something he had never before spoken of in public—how he too, like McDonald, had been unseated, years ago, from the United States Senate, for no cause whatever but to perfect villainous Republican schemes. Other Republican abuses were freely ventilated, and Democratic sentiments were loudly applauded. The Democratic candidates were given rousing cheers, and the meeting was considered a great success.

A Lie Out of the Whole Cloth.

(From the Elizabeth Herald.)

The current issue of the Central Times asks the following question:

Will the ELIZABETH HERALD, the Plainfield Press and the Rahway Democrat, all of whom seem to believe that Mayor Rankin's position on race track legislation is to be condemned, kindly enlighten the Times which of the candidates for Senator from Union county holds shares in a driving park association? Union county voters may be interested in this.

We have Mr. Mars's own authority for most emphatically denying that he holds a cent's worth of stock or a single share in any driving park association.

He, therefore, is not the candidate for Senatorial honors alluded to.

We hope the Plainfield Times will give as much publicity to this denial as it did to the original question.

At the same time was it not a sneaking and mean piece of business on the part of our Republican to drop this adverse insinuation into men's mind in its last issue before the election, so as to render it impossible of contradiction.

Such contemptible tactics are of a piece with those now in vogue among the leaders of the "party of high moral ideas," as the Republicans pharisaically style themselves nowadays

But would the true Republicans of Lincoln's time ever have resorted to means so dirty and base as those to which their degenerate progeny now habitually descend?

We presume it will be answered in reply that "all's fair in love and war."

We would suggest, however, that such heathen ethics hardly suit the exalted standard of morals that the party of "high moral ideas" professes to have reached.

Politics at best is a meanest business. Why should the Republican papers try to make it meaner, and to show the world that in the lowest depths there is a lower still?

You Can Gamble on It.

They say that death and taxes are the only things to count upon

As certain in this sublimary sphere we run. But here's another surety you can bet a big amount upon—

If your watch is fixed at Collier's it will be well done.

The first letter Gov. Abbett received petitioning him to veto the bill legalizing pool-selling at race tracks, was from the Hon. Fred. C. Marsh, and written on his sick bed. Will you vote for him or for Mr. Rankin who refuses to pledge himself or say a word against the race track gamblers? Remember also, Mr. Rankin's vote was the vote that granted the license to sell liquor on the race track.

OLD-TIME TRICKS OF TELEGRAPHERS.

How Night Operators on Plainfield's Railroad Used to Steal Naps When Duty Kept Them at Sleepy Towns.

The most undesirable work and the least remunerative among telegraphers is that of night operator at some lonely station on a railroad. The rules of the company require that these men shall remain awake at their posts from 7 P. M. till 7 A. M. to report passing trains and to receive and deliver such orders as it may be necessary to engineers and conductors to regulate the movement of their trains. On double track roads their presence at their posts is of great importance only in emergencies, and to be sure that they are always on hand a system of signalling is in vogue on most roads by which every operator is required to report by wire to headquarters every half hour during the night. Such a system is followed at Plainfield, Fanwood, Dunellen, and other stations of this locality.

On the Central Railroad of New Jersey fifteen years ago the headquarters of the night dispatcher were at Elizabeth, the wire signal of the office being "K. I." Every half hour in the night the dispatcher's operator would sound on the wire the signal "six, six, six, K. I.," and each operator on the line, from Jersey City to Plainfield, Somerville, High Bridge and Phillipsburg, would have to sound his office signal in turn, beginning with "J. C." and ending with "P." If all the responses came the operator at "K. I." would say "O, K." and another half hour of dreary silence would intervene.

The operator at Somerville was on terms of intimate friendship with the one at Hampton Junction, and they arranged to sound each other's signals on alternate nights so that the one for whom the other acted could sleep. Each, however, had to attend to the reporting of the trains that passed his station. The station at Somerville was between the North and South bound tracks, and the operator there invented an ingenious device by which he could go to sleep and yet be awakened whenever a train should pass. Taking two stout cords, he ran one out over the window and under the platform to one of the rails of the Southbound track to which he tied it. The other was run in a similar way and tied to the Northbound track. Inside the office he made a loop in each of the cords at a convenient height. Leaning back in his chair with his head pillowed on a shelf, he put his right foot through one loop and his left through the other, both feet being about on a level with his head. Then he slept A Northbound train came along, cut the string, and his left foot fell down with a jerky suddenness that would have thrown him out of the chair had his other foot not been tied. Then a message would go to headquarters like this: "S. O. K. I N. 6., No. 23, eng 45. 1:18" meaning that Somerville reported Northbound train No 23, drawn by engine No. 45, passing at 1:18 A. M. The string was tied to the rail again, another loop made, and the operator soon was dreaming once more. If the left foot fell, it was a Northbound train, if the right one, a Southbound, a glance at the clock showing what train was due according to the schedule.

Another operator used to fill a coal scuttle with coupling-pins, old scraps of iron and tin, and fasten it high from the floor to a string tied to the rails. When a train came along the scuttle would fall with a crash loud enough to restore the dispatcher to the wakefulness which meant safety or disaster to the people traveling on the road, and security or disgrace for himself. Thus did the operators in the sleepy town beyond Plainfield daily with the trust imposed in them.

On the Belvidere Delaware division of the Pennsylvania road, where balloon signals are used, such devices are not available, and the operators must remain awake every moment of the long night. The "Bel. Del." as it is called, is a single track road, and orders are frequent during the night to regulate the movement of trains. It is over this division that the Pennsylvania's heavy coal traffic is brought down to Trenton and to Perth Amboy. The balloon signal is an oblong hollow canopy made of red flannel, and kept in shape by circular iron hoops. By a double cord attachment connecting with the operator's table it can be lowered or raised at will. If lowered, it is a danger signal that no train dares to pass. If raised, the signal is "No orders; go ahead on schedule time." At night a white lantern is hung under the balloon which, when lowered, shows a red light through the red flannel. If raised, the white light shows signalling that everything is "all right."

The orders of the company are that the balloon must be kept down at all times, day and night, showing the red signal, and only raised when a train approaches for which no orders have been received. Thus a terrible responsibility falls upon the operator who has complete control of the signal. If he receives an order for a train and forgets it, or becomes confused and raises the signal, the result is sure to be a collision. Fortunately, the operators on that division are faithful men, who evidently never sleep on duty. Perhaps a sense of their responsibility keeps them awake. The operator at Washington's Crossing, just above Trenton, nearly a score of years ago was a young boy, who could not resist the temptation to run about to picnics and on excursions during the day. As a rule he was most powerfully inclined to sleep at night. Twice he did so, and was then discharged. The first occasion resulted in the wreck of a coal train, and the other in breaking a freight train in two. The coal train stopped on the heavy grade, seeing the signal down, and the engineer coming in for orders found the boy asleep. He woke him roughly, and in deep anger started again for his engine. Being angry, he started up too quickly and broke a coupling on the tenth car, the engine and the ten cars starting down the grade very fast. "Off brakes" had been whistled, and the second section coming on, crashed into the first, piling up a dozen cars. Almost the same thing happened to the freight, and the young operator was allowed to look for a day job—on some other road.

The Presbyterian Synod of New Jersey recently unanimously decided to protest and vote against any Assemblyman or Senator nominated who would not pledge himself decidedly against all legislation to permit or protect race track gamblers. Consequently the Rev. Dr. Ketcham's and the Rev. Mr. Richards' people will understand that their two votes will not be cast for Mr. Rankin.

The Rev. Dr. Yerkes, of this city, at the Baptist convention in Camden, yesterday, was chairman of a committee to protest in the name of 89,000 Baptists of New Jersey against the re-enactment of the laws to legalize pool-selling and book-making. So his congregation will know that he votes for the Hon. Fred. C. Marsh who has already gone through one fight on just that side.

Speaker Reed Suffering With a Cold.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Speaker Reed addressed a big meeting here last night, and talked on the McKinley bill for an hour. He was suffering with a cold and spoke with difficulty.

Charge your mind with the fact that Hires' Cough Cure is the remedy you want should you have a cough or cold. It is pleasant to take, harmless and effective. Always reliable. No opium or poisonous drugs in its composition.

A Warning Voice---Read!

Out of the flood of human misery—its infirmities, diseases and sufferings—there rises a sure rock of hope that sufferers from physical and nervous ills can again be restored to sound health and perfect vigor by using that wonderful medical discovery, Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great nerve, brain and blood invigorator. It is the greatest boon ever given to suffering humanity, and its timely use saves thousands upon thousands of weak, nervous and discouraged sufferers from those awful and fatal results—BRAIN EXHAUSTION, HEART FAILURE, NERVOUS PROSTRATION, PARALYSIS, INSANITY or PREMATURE DEATH.

Neglect is dangerous, and all who feel that their nerves are weak or their nerve and physical force, power and energies are impaired in the slightest degree, should heed the warning voice, and by using this marvellous remedy be made sound in vitality of nerve and strength of body before it is too late. Dr. Greene's Nervura, which is purely vegetable and harmless, will be found the very best remedy to save the sick from disease and death.

DR. GREENE'S NERVURA,

The Great Nerve, Brain and Blood Invigorator.

For sale by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth st., New York, the successful specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases, can be consulted by all, free of charge, personally or by letter.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

RESIGNATION.

Were there no valleys in this mundane sphere,
Then would no hills of beauty ever rise.
Were there no Calv'rys in our sojourn here,
How seldom would we mount toward the skies!

Were there no pathways marked by bleeding feet,
Then would not Heaven's pavements seem so fair.
Were here no bitter mingled with the sweet,
Less joyous were the songs that echo there.

Were there no dark Gethsemanes of woe;
Were there no changes known to earthly love;
Were there no toils, no sorrows here below,
Who, then, would prize the joys that wait above?

Be still, my soul, and know that God is good;
He doeth all things well, or here, or there.
Doubt not thy direst needs are understood,
Nor ever yield thyself to black despair.

—Rev. C. C. Cook, in N. Y. Observer.

WHAT OTHERS HAVE DONE.

A List of God's Great Commands That Have Been Carried Out.

The tendency with most Christians is to be satisfied with those duties which are simple and easy to perform. We read of great achievements by others, but it never enters our minds that our names may be written on the roll of the great as kept in Heaven, and so we live on, with no ambition to do any thing grand and sublime, satisfied to live and enjoy, satisfied to go through each day with its little round of inconsequential duties, and satisfied if, at last, we occupy the lowest seats in the palace of the King. But as Jesus commanded Simon Peter to "launch out into the deep," He calls us to lift the anchor up out of the waters of religious selfishness, and to take broader views of the possibilities of these lives. To every disciple there are deep waters of usefulness; yes, a shoreless sweep of noble service and of grand results, if he will but attempt the seeming impossibilities, in His name, relying on the promises, instead of measuring God's commands with our little tape line of human judgment.

Look through the Bible history, and see how God was always commanding His children to do what appeared to be impossible of execution, but faith never failed in its accomplishment. He commanded Abraham to leave home and kindred and go forth to possess a country in His name; an enterprise that the keenest human wisdom would have called chimerical. He called Moses to go down alone into Egypt and deliver His people from the grasp of the mightiest monarch on earth. Why, the mission was simply absurd in its wildness of purpose—one man to break the fetters that more than two hundred years had been riveting! But there was the Divine command: "Go down into Egypt." So, take the call to Israel to go forward, when the deep waters of the Red Sea rolled before them; to Joshua to overthrow Jericho's walls by marching around them and shouting; to Jonah, to bring a godless heathen city to repentance by preaching on its crowded streets; to David, to fight with Goliath, opposing only a boy's sling against an armor of steel; to one hundred and twenty poor and unknown men and women to go forth and with the despised Gospel convert a world to the religion of the crucified Nazarene. Ah, God's commands are always in their Divine scope beyond the vision of our finiteness, but with Him "all things are possible;" as one writer has said: "It is difficulties that give birth to miracles."

What Christians need to-day is that absolute dependence upon the promises which Peter had when he answered to the Master's command to let down the net: "At Thy word I will." Caleb and Joshua were not afraid of walled cities or giants, because God had said: "I will be with thee." Nehemiah built the walls of Jerusalem amid the most bitter opposition, trusting only to the word of God. David says: "Remember Thy word unto Thy servant, upon which Thou hast caused me to hope." We are weak, for we are looking at ourselves; we are discouraged because our eyes are on the difficulties; our burdens are heavy because we are carrying them alone, instead of leaning on the Divine Burden-bearer.

Christian parents, Sunday-school teachers, fasten your eye on God's Word, your pilgrim staff, and walls will fall down; mountains will be leveled to a plain; rivers will be divided and you will be strong to conquer sin, strong to do well every duty, strong to impossibilities in His name and for His glory. Stop dreaming of a higher, grander life, and taking God at His word, begin to live it.

This dying world needs your uplifting labors and prayers; a great cloud of witnesses will watch your heroic service, and failure is impossible, so long as faith grasps the promises. Attempt great things for God.—Advance.

LEAVE ALL TO HIM.

The Lord Is Willing and Glad to Help Us Bear Our Cares, Little and Big.

Do not trouble yourself unduly; for if you do so you can not remove sickness thereby, but you may even increase it. If I could do any good by worrying, I would worry away to my heart's content, but as it is useless I find it best to let it alone. They tell me that if a man were to fall into the sea he would float if he would remain quiet, but because he struggles he sinks. I am sure it is so when we are afflicted. Fretfulness results in weakening us, in hiding from us wise methods of relief, and, in general, in doubling our pains. It is folly to kick against the pricks; it is wisdom to kiss the rod. Trust more and fear less. If you have trusted your soul with Christ can you not trust Him with any thing else? Can you not trust Him with your sick child or your sick husband, with your wealth, with your business, with your life? "O," says one, "I hardly like to do that. It is almost presumption to take our minor cares to the great Lord." But in so doing you will prove the truthfulness of your faith. I heard of a man who was walking along the high road with a pack on his back; he was growing weary, and was therefore glad when a gentleman came along in a chaise and asked him to take a seat with him. The gentleman noticed that he kept his pack strapped to his shoulders, and so he said: "Why do you not put your pack down?" "Why, sir," said the traveler, "I did not venture to intrude. It was very kind of you to take me up, and a could not expect you to carry my pack as well." "Why," said the friend, "do you not see that whether your pack is on your back or off your back I have to carry it?" It is so with your trouble; whether you care or do not care, it is the Lord who must care for you. First trust your Lord with your soul, and then trust Him with every thing else. First surrender yourself to His love, to be saved by His infinite compassion, and then bring all your burdens and cares and troubles, and lay them down at His dear feet, and go and live a happy, joyful life, saying; as I will say, and close:

"All that remains for me
Is but to live and sing,
And wait until the angels come
To bear me to my King"

—C. H. Spurgeon.

THY WAY, NOT MINE.

A Never-Failing Hand to Guide One Through Life.

"All things work together for good to those who love God," and again, "No good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly." This is God's promise to us, His children. What more can we ask? And what a blessed assurance of a Heavenly Father's ruling hand and loving, watchful care over us all the days of our lives. Yes, its all things; every little, insignificant event of our lives has its own meaning, its own peculiar part, in His plan for us. Do you say: "Why, then, these trials and afflictions, these miserable failures we so often make?" How long do you think you could lead a consistent Christian character if never reminded of duty or tried by temptation? How could you possibly know how true a soldier you would make if never brought face to face with the enemy?

Suppose we had been left to plow out our own life and course through this world. What should we do? Which way could we turn in our extremity lest we make a mistake? What a rest in the knowledge that a wise, loving God has saved us from this, and planned it all for us!

When we reach that point in our lives (and it comes to us all, sooner or later) when all human planning seems at a standstill and we are hedged in on every side, not knowing, in our weakness and distress, which way to turn, then we can look to our Father to "lift up" the light of His countenance upon our pathway, to lead us safely out, as did the pillar of fire and of cloud the children of Israel, never failing, if we but follow on.

Let us, then, trust His guiding hand, praying for strength, lest, in our blindness and waywardness, we thwart His purpose.

Let us take Him at His Word and cast from us the feeling that perhaps some things may work for good, but live in the belief that every thing will work together for our good, because He has told us so.—Christian at Work.

The Life of Christ.

In Christ every one finds an object worthy of his highest powers, in His life a standard no one has ever reached, in His purity an excelence to which no one has ever attained. All who make a study of Christ's life and teachings stand in wonder and awe before the gigantic figure revealed. Renan finishes his "Life of Jesus" with these words: "Jesus will never be surpassed; His sonship will be revered without ceasing; His story will draw tears from beautiful eyes without end; His sufferings will touch the finest natures; all the ages will proclaim that among the sons of men there has not arisen a greater than Jesus."—Christian Inquirer.

CHOICE EXTRACTS.

—You can never regret saying a kind word or doing a loving act; you may bitterly regret having done neither.—Standard.

—If you can only convince people that you are alarmed about them, it won't be long before they will be concerned about themselves.—Ram's Horn.

—Deal reverently with God's word. It is wiser to confess our ignorance of the meaning of obscure passages of Scripture, than to show the greatest skill in making them support our cherished opinions.—United Presbyterian.

—Hours, once dead, can never be resuscitated. Among all the drops of dew that fall on the grave there will not be one tear of repentance. Slipping off the embankment of eternity we can never clamber back.—Talmage, in N. Y. Observer.

—We may defer an act, but we can not defer a duty. The grammar of duty has no future tense. Deferring is not always procrastinating. It may be one's duty to defer, but it is never one's duty to procrastinate. Deferring calls for wisdom. A fool can procrastinate. "Some day" may be the right time, and again it may be no time. The man who promises to do a present duty some day is often told that "some day" may be too late. But some day always is too late for what duty demands now.—S. S. Times.

—In all your Christian thinking get at the heart of things, and cultivate the most immediate relations with God's word and work. Get into close personal contact with reality. No "go-betweens," nothing between you and the Divine reality! Work on straight lines, not roundabout curves; straight to God, and straight to God's thought. Be satisfied with nothing less than this. Let your daily mental toil be simply this—thinking over God's thoughts. Away with human glosses as substitutes for the Divine verities. Let men help you as they may; let God teach you as He only can. And thus thinking over God's thoughts speak them as His.—Christian Union.

BOARDING-HOUSE TALES.

Exchanging the Compliments of the Season With the Landlady.

"What do chickens look like, Mrs. Codhooker?" inquired the bank clerk of the landlady, as he inspected the drumstick on his plate.

"Are you in earnest, Mr. Wanks?" she asked.

"Look something like centipedes don't they?" he continued, fretfully.

"Certainly not. Haven't you ever been in the country and seen the chickens scratching?"

"Well, yes, but I've drawn only legs and pin-feathers for eleven months in your house, and I've sort of lost the shape of the bird."

"Well, ma'am," said the fisherman, playfully sticking his leadpencil in the lobster's claw, "the oyster season is here."

"I'm sorry," said the landlady, regretfully.

"How so?" he asked, in surprise.

"Well, I've been servin' them big clams of yours, stewed, all summer," she answered, "and whenever one of my boarders struck a clam in the soup as big as a biscuit he'd chew on it till he was too tired to eat any thing else."

"Isn't the price of a lamb much higher than it used to be, Mrs. Codhooker?" inquired the young gentleman boarder, as he struggled with a chop at breakfast.

"Indeed it is," rejoined the landlady, earnestly, "and going up all the time."

"I supposed so, ma'am. With Harlem growing so fast, there must be a great decrease in goats."

"In all my experience," said the old gentleman boarder, as he peeled a banana, "I never knew such a famine in fruits. You must be greatly embarassed about preserves for next winter, Mrs. Codhooker."

"Oh! not at all," answered the landlady, cheerily. "I have just put up forty-nine jars of watermelon rind."

"I never can eat this dessert, Mrs. Codhooker," said the Georgia boarder, tremulously, pushing away a charlotte russe.

"I am surprised, Mr. Watson," rejoined the landlady. "Charlotte russe is regarded as a great delicacy."

"I know it—I—pardon my emotion—my mother's name was Charlotte."—N. Y. Tribune.

THE COUNT'S DESPAIR.

End of a Nobleman and Beginning of a First-Class Organ-Grinder.

"Ha! So there is no hope-a for me-a Mees Manyrox?"

"No, Count, I am sorry to say there is not. I confess I love you, but—"

"Then fly-a with me-a, my queen-a."

"You forget, Count, that I have no private income. My father opposes our union, and without his consent we can not marry, for we should have nothing to live on."

"I will plead-a with him! He must consent-a!"

"No, Count, it is useless to try to move him. He declares that unless I marry an American he will disown me and cut me off in his will without a dollar."

"This is terrible! It makes me-a—what you call desperata—it will driva me to—"

"O, Count, not to suicide! You will not kill yourself! Promise me you won't?"

"Not suicid-a! O no! It will driva me to borrow money and buy an organ and a monka!"

And the Count tore himself away from his sweetheart to put his rash resolve into execution.—Munsey's Weekly.

But Still He Never Drinks.

McJunkin—Will you join me in a glass of old rye, Colonel?

Cumso—He was a business man who did not advertise, I suppose.—The Jury.

UNIQUE ELECTRICAL DEVICES.

ONE of the latest appliances of electricity appears in the form of an electric soldering-iron. It is a hollow cone of copper containing a metallic plug, between which and the inner surface of the cone is a coil of fine wire separated from the plug and the face of the cone by means of layers of asbestos.

THE improvements which have been made in flash signaling have been most effectively supplemented by the device of Commander Percy Scott, which enables signals to be sent on the Morse system with great rapidity, and from a point where the present mechanical arrangement of shutters could not conveniently be employed. A Morse instrument can be added, so that the signals may be automatically recorded as in telegraphy.

A POCKET telephone has been introduced in Berlin. The idea upon which its use is based is that electric bells are found everywhere, and there is no reason why they should not be used for telephoning as well. The pocket telephone is to be connected to the bell wires of hotels and hospitals as well as private houses, and it is claimed that people will be able to speak to distant places by simply taking their telephone out of their pockets as they would their watch.

PERHAPS in no branch of industry have the benefits of electric welding been realized to a greater extent than in the welding of pipes for artificial ice machines, sugar refineries and general refrigerating purposes. In the old system fifteen minutes were required for each weld, which entailed the work of two blacksmiths and a dozen helpers, and frequently a serious loss of ammonia from imperfect welding. Now the weld is made in two minutes by a man and a boy, and costs two cents, instead of fifteen, as formerly.

A NEW departure has been taken in gifts intended for the edification of the public in the electric fountain which has been presented to Lincoln Park, Chicago. The fountain has over two hundred large jets, which are artistically intermingled, the highest of which throws a stream of water to a height of seventy-five feet. The fountain, when illuminated, is a most beautiful sight. The spray separates into innumerable drops, each of which reflects a glitter of the electric light, giving the effect of a shower of diamonds.

OF the novel applications of electricity there is no end. Bakers are now using the electric motor as a bread-mixer, and are thus enabled to do in four or five minutes an amount of work that would otherwise require hours of hand labor. A writer in a medical paper says he has frequently obtained much relief from facial neuralgia by applying an incandescent light to the part affected. He suggests that the lamp could also be used in poulticing advantageously. It could be laid over a flaxseed or other form of poultice and constant heat could be thus secured.

AN ingenious device, which has been successfully operated in Chicago, is a window cleaner operated by electricity. Storage batteries and an electric motor are placed in a cart specially constructed for the purpose. The motor drives a portable window and sign cleaner which consists of a buffer attached to a long flexible shaft. This enables a workman to clean a window or polish a sign very quickly, whereas the same work, if done by hand, would require considerable time. The inventor of the device is taking contracts for cleaning the windows and brass signs on buildings throughout the business district of Chicago.

FUNNY FREAKS.

A CHELSEA man put his patent incubator over a duck's egg and hatched a duckling with four eyes and two bills.

A DUCK with four feet is a curiosity owned by James Stewart, of the York road, opposite Guilford, Md. When swimming it uses one of its legs as a rudder.

WILLIAM HOFFMAN, of Sebewaing, has four pigs that beat any thing ever seen in that locality. One has no trace of hind legs, another has no hoofs, but claws take the place of the generally thought necessary porcine appendix, and the two others have claws and toes and pretty nearly every thing else that pigs can very handily get along without.

Mr. ACKOM, living in Van Wert County, O., brought a queer freak to town. Mr. Ackom is a breeder of thoroughbred Poland China hogs. In a litter of pigs farrowed recently was one which very nearly resembled an elephant. It had enormous ears, a long trunk and one tusk. It was the color of an elephant and its feet turned up in a peculiar way. The trunk started from the forehead and extended out and down over the mouth. It is one of those peculiar freaks which occasionally occur in the animal world.

OF three goats born in Cincinnati two are perfectly natural, but the other is not so fortunate. Its body is natural except the head, which is double. It has four eyes, two mouths, two tongues. Its ears are set back further than usual. While all regularly formed goats have no upper teeth, only a hard gum, this one has a set in the upper jaw of each head, making it have four sets of teeth. In the middle of the two heads there is one eye-socket, with two eyeballs. The mother actually disowns it, pays no attention to it and seems to be utterly oblivious of the fact that it is her offspring.

A PECULIAR looking reptile was captured at Cordele, Fla. It was about three feet long, of a yellow striped color, but had scales all over its body like a fish. Its eyes were exceedingly small, and an investigation of its mouth showed an entire absence of fangs, but instead small, fish-like teeth. When placed on dry land it squirmed and twisted about, but could not crawl like a snake. The conclusion of all who saw it was that it was a hybrid—half snake and half fish. Nothing like it has ever been seen before in this county, and the oldest inhabitants never knew that the waters of Gum creek contained such a specimen of the reptile creation.

Saved Her Life.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Feb. 9, 1889.
This is to certify that my mother has suffered from nervous weakness for over 20 years. We have tried innumerable remedies and physicians, she also went to Germany for her health, spending in all thousands of dollars with only temporary benefit. At last we tried Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic and Elixir of Iron, and I honestly and sincerely believe that she not only received more benefit from them than all others combined, but would have died before this without them, as she was getting weaker every day, before we began with the above medicine.

READY FOR THE FRAY

The Political Situation in Nearby States.

BOTH PARTIES FEEL CONFIDENT.

Great Excitement in New York Over the Mayoralty Contest.

The Great Battle Everywhere is for Congressmen—The New Ballot Law Bothering the Politicians in New York State—Betting is Lively on the General Results in Several States.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 3.—To-morrow Connecticut holds her regular biennial election, electing a full list of State officers, both houses of a Legislature which will elect a United States Senator, four Congressmen, and Sheriffs in eight counties.

The real issue of the campaign lies in the complexion of the Legislature, for this will decide whether Orville H. Platt is to be returned to the United States Senate. Both parties have fought hard all through the campaign, and to-day they are resting on their oars, confident of the result.

Both candidates for the Governorship are New Haven men. The Republican, Samuel E. Merwin, is the present Lieutenant Governor of the State. The Democrat, Luzon B. Morris, is a lawyer.

As to the Congressional candidates, the Republicans say they will be satisfied if they hold their own. At present they have three out of the four Representatives. The Democrats are more sanguine, and claim they will gain a member.

HOT FIGHT IN NEW YORK.

Political Leaders Figuring on To-Morrow's Battle at the Polls.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The political campaign in this city is over and the several parties are busy to-day preparing for to-morrow's battle at the polls.

Mauriee J. Power and other prominent County Democrats are talking of 20,000 majority for Scott, the fusion candidate for Mayor. Ex-Mayor Grace said that from previous experience and from what he had observed in this campaign he did not see how Scott would have less than 15,000 majority.

Candidate Scott said that he thought his prospects good, but he would wait until Wednesday to talk figures. The Republicans talked in the same strain and united in placing Scott's majority at upward of 10,000.

Tammany men like Richard Croker, Mayor Grant and Commissioner Gilroy wore an air of confidence that showed the consciousness at least of having made a remarkably vigorous fight. Mr. Croker said that the Tammany ticket will be elected by 25,000 majority, and that in addition to the organization vote a big vote will be polled for the Tammany ticket by Democrats not identified with Tammany Hall.

Betting on the result at the Hoffman House and other resorts is largely in Grant's favor. The excitement is intense and the new style of voting is bothering the politicians.

BAY STATE POLITICS.

Republicans, Democrats and Prohibitists Feel Confident of Success.

BOSTON, Nov. 3.—The managers of the various political parties in the State are making predictions upon the result of to-morrow's election. Chairman Burdett, of the Republican State Committee, is very confident, and says he expects the Bay State delegation in the next Congress to consist of 11 Republicans and one Democrat. He makes no estimate of Governor Brackett's plurality.

The Democrats also talk very encouragingly. Secretary Quincy predicts that they will carry four congressional districts, and that there will be close contests in three other districts.

Mr. McTammany, of the Prohibitionist party, depicts the third party's prospects as very promising this year.

Both Sides Claim Ohio.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 2.—The Republican State Committee estimate a Republican plurality of about 18,000, and claim the election of nine congressmen, with a possibility of eleven in case a heavy Republican vote is polled. The Democratic Committee claim their entire ticket will be elected by a plurality of 10,000. The committee estimates that 15 Democratic congressmen will be elected, though some of them may have small pluralities.

Warrants Issued for False Registration.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Five hundred warrants for the arrest of as many persons were sworn out in the United States Courts on charges of illegal registration. The warrants were placed in the hands of United States Marshal Jacobus, who placed 250 of the warrants in the hands of his marshals for execution. Arrests have been made and there is great excitement among the Democrats.

The Fight in Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 3.—The great political parties are arranged in respective positions for to-morrow's contest. Never before has this great Commonwealth been racked by the bustle of preparation for the fray as during the canvass now completed. A Governor and other State officers and members of the Legislature are to be elected.

Special Police to Watch Marshals.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 3.—The police commissioners have authorized the Chief of Police to swear in fifty extra policemen in Norfolk for duty on election day. This is to offset any influence United States marshals may endeavor to use at the polls.

The Election in Delaware.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 3.—This State will elect a Governor and members of the Legislature to-morrow. The last Legislature had a Republican majority of two on joint ballot.

Close Contest in West Virginia.

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 3.—All four of the West Virginia Congressional districts are doubtful and both parties are working hard for a big vote to-morrow.

Officers to be Elected in New Jersey.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 3.—New Jersey elects a Legislature but no State officers. The last Legislature was Democratic by 14 majority on joint ballot.

ARTHUR'S AMBITION.

The Chief of the Locomotive Engineers in Training for the Presidency.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 3.—Since the adjournment of the convention of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers some important secrets have been leaking out. The election of an assistant to Grand Chief Arthur has great political significance. It means that Mr. Arthur will be in the race for the Presidential nomination in 1892. George Cummings, delegate from Toronto, Ont., was asked what the election of an assistant grand chief meant, as there was no more necessity for such an officer now than there was three years ago.

"It means," he said, "that it was with a view to allowing Chief Arthur to retire at the end of a year that he might go into active training for the Presidential nomination in 1892."

Other delegates spoken with manifested no surprise when the subject was broached, and regarded the idea as natural enough. Delegate Rowland, of Osawaromie, Kan., said that Mr. Arthur would have the support of 80,000 railroaders. Color is lent to the report by the attitude of the convention in authorizing federation with other railroad organizations.

Looks Like a Mafia Murder.

ALTOONA, Pa., Nov. 3.—Early in the morning an engineer, when passing Union Furnace, a short distance west of this city, looked out of his engine and saw the body of a man lying alongside of the track. He stopped and picked him up, the man dying in a few minutes. His head was split open and his throat cut from ear to ear. A bloody razor was found near. His clothes were wet, as though he had been in the river near by. The authorities think he was murdered and the body laid on the track to divert suspicion. They are now searching for clues. The man is apparently an Italian. His name is unknown.

The Third Mate's Story Disbelieved.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 3.—The story of the third mate of the sunken schooner Cornelius Hargreaves, who charges the captain with cowardice in connection with the collision with the steamer Vizcaya, is generally disbelieved here by the owners of the vessel, who are anxiously waiting Captain Allen's return home. Several of the stockholders took out insurance policies during the week. One was delivered to Daniel Wilbur on Thursday night about the time the collision occurred. Hargreaves Brothers lose $13,000. A total insurance of $19,000 is held by about 19 stockholders.

Death of the "Modern Martyr."

WILLIAMANTIC, Conn., Nov. 3.—Miss Lizzie O. Smith, widely known as "the modern martyr," died at her home in this city yesterday. She was born at Eastford, Conn., December 23, 1832, and was a relative of General Keys, of Potomac army fame. She was unusually vigorous and active until she was 11 years of age, when she was prostrated by a violent cold, which developed a disease that settled in her limbs, making her a helpless invalid. She was wholly confined to her bed for nearly 45 years.

All Went Down to the Cellar.

KEYPORT, N. J., Nov. 3.—While Mr. and Mrs. Robert Emmons, with their children, a daughter of 12 and an infant, were seated about a stove at Holmdel, the floor gave way, letting the whole family drop to the cellar. The stove toppled over, falling on top of them. They were all badly cut and bruised and also burned by the hot coals. The house in which they lived is one of the first built in this section of the country. All will recover.

Cushing's Money All Up.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 3.—Jack Adler, who is backing Mike Cushing for $3,000 in his fight with Austin Gibbons, has made the final deposit with temporary stakeholder James McCormack of this city. The men will fight on Thursday next, Capt. A. W. Cooke of Boston to name the battle ground.

President Gompers Wants Statistics.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor has issued a circular to the officers of affiliated unions, asking them for statistical statements regarding the grades or branches of industry in which they are engaged.

Killed in a Collision.

READING, Pa., Nov. 3.—Two freight trains on the Reading Railroad came into collision at Rogers' Ford during the morning. C. C. Becker, fireman, of Cresson, was killed. Several cars were demolished and traffic was delayed several hours.

EXTRA SESSION TALK

Rumors that Congress Will Meet Again Nov. 19.

BIG CLAIMS OF THE ALLIANCE.

President Polk Says They Will Elect Twenty-four Members.

The President on His Way to Indianapolis—Secretary Windom Bothered Over Sites for Public Buildings—The United States Asked to Act as Mediator—An Insane Woman Visits the White House.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The President and Attorney-General Miller are on their way to Indianapolis to vote. The President will return on Wednesday.

The rumor is again out that there is the strongest probability of an extra session of Congress being convened to meet Wednesday, November 19. This would give ten clear days before the day named in the Constitution for the assembling of Congress, which is the first Monday in December. This year December 1 falls on Monday. As to when the proclamation will be issued no precise information can be obtained. Only ten days' notice is required by law.

L. L. Polk, president of the National Association of the Farmers' Alliance, arrived in the city last night. He claims that the alliance has assurances of electing 24 members to the next Congress, and that in that event they will hold the balance of power, whichever of the old parties may secure a preponderance. Chairman Flower, for the Democrats, puts the probable Democratic majority over Republicans at 30. The secretary of the Republican Congressional Committee, presided over by Mr. Belden, claims a Republican preponderance over Democrats of from 15 to 20.

Mr. Polk is sanguine in the belief that if either of these two anticipations should come any way near realization, the Alliance men will dictate the nomination of the next Speaker, and in consequence secure substantial recognition on committees.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Secretary Windom Bothered Over the Selection of Sites.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The selection of sites for public buildings is one of the duties which gives the Secretary of the Treasury more worry, with less satisfactory results to him, at least, than perhaps any other duty he has to perform. And at the present time he is in the throes and agonies of deciding on upwards of 25 sites for public buildings in as many cities and towns.

He is guided in great measure by reports of special agents who visit the cities where sites are to be purchased, and who personally inspects them with a view to selecting the one most desirable in point of cost and location. No matter what result is reached by the agent, the whole matter is fought out again before the Secretary by parties interested in disposing of sites other than those selected by the agent, and in nine cases out of ten charges of improper motives on the part of the agent are made by the real estate people who are interested in other sites.

Among the larger cities where sites will within a short time be selected for the erection of public buildings are: New York, appraisers' warehouse; Baton Rouge, La.; San Francisco, Burlington, Iowa; Newbern, N. C., and New Haven, Conn.

The United States May Act as Mediator.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The Venezuelan Government has asked the mediation of the United States to settle the disputed boundary line between Venezuela and British Guiana.

An Unknown Couple Asphyxiated.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 3.—John Brown, aged 25, and an unknown woman were found in a room at the Franklin House, in this city, last night asphyxiated. They were alive when found and were removed to the hospital. There is not the slightest chance of their recovery. They registered at the hotel at 10 o'clock Saturday night as man and wife. They were not seen until last night, when the smell of escaping gas caused an investigation to be made, with the result as above. Who they are is not known. The clothing is of good material and their features would indicate that they are not of the lower class.

Drying Sheds and Storehouses Burned.

OLNEYVILLE, R. I., Nov. 3.—Three five-story drying sheds here, belonging to the heirs of Alfred Anthony, were burned during the morning. Two storehouses were also destroyed and several dwellings nearby were damaged.

Murderer Decker Kills Himself.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Maggie Foster, who was shot by her discarded lover William Decker last Friday night, is dead. The body of Decker was found in a field near Big Flats, eight miles from here. He had shot and killed himself.

STARTLING CONFESSION.

Several Stage Robberies and Numerous Burglaries Accounted For.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 3.—George Shinn, who with Charles Dorsely, alias Thorn, escaped from San Quinton prison three years ago and were captured in Chicago by Detective J. B. Hume, made a most startling confession.

Ever since they escaped, Detective Hume has believed they were in this State and were perpetrators of numerous stage robberies which have occurred since then, but he was not able to obtain any positive evidence. Friday night Shinn was transferred from San Quinton to Folsom by special arrangements made by Warden Aull and Detective Hume. Yesterday the warden and detective interviewed Shinn for over three hours.

He confessed that he and Thorn returned to California in 1889 and camped on the American River, about three miles from this city. This was their rendezvous to which they always returned after their raids. He admits that on the 31st of July, 1889, they stopped the stage from Milton to Sonora and robbed the passengers of $50, blew open the Wells-Fargo treasure box with giant powder, but found it empty. On the 10th of September of the same year they stopped the stage between Quincy and Orrville and took a gold bar worth $800 from the Wells-Fargo box. In April of this year they held up the Forest Hill stage in Placer County and robbed the passengers. Besides these robberies Shinn confessed to numerous burglaries, garroting and robberies committed by him and Thorn.

They returned to Chicago May 30, this year, and says between that time and the date of capture they committed something like 25 robberies in the State of Illinois.

Their rendezvous on the American River has been found by Chief of Police Drew of this city, who hunted for it four weeks before he found it. He says it is an ideal robbers' roost, and robbers never could be dislodged from it.

ANOTHER OUTLAW KILLED.

Bud McCoy Found With Eighteen Bullets in His Body.

ELKHORN, W. Va., Nov. 3.—Bud McCoy, the leader of the notorious McCoy gang, was killed near Tennis Camp, Logan County, Va., on the Ohio extension of the Norfolk & Western Railroad by a man named Dempsey, of the Hatfield gang. Eighteen bullets were found in his body. Other parties are supposed to have assisted in the killing.

McCoy had collected considerable money from Contractor Tennis and was returning to his home on Peter Creek, Ky., when the murder was committed, although an old grudge rather than plunder prompted the killing.

The country is wild with excitement, and it is believed that Dempsey and his associates will be found and the death of McCoy avenged.

McCoy is known to have killed eight men, but he has always escaped punishment.

High Price for Convent Property.

DOVER, N. J., Nov. 3.—H. McK. Twombly, a son-in-law of the late William H. Vanderbilt, is endeavoring to acquire a large country estate in the most attractive part of Morris County, between Morristown and Madison. Some time ago he bought the large Danforth estate, and he has since added to it adjoining properties, aggregating several hundred acres. Upon this tract he has nearly 400 men at work laying out parks and making ten miles of driveways. Adjoining this property is that of St. Elizabeth's Convent, which includes about 400 acres and some costly buildings. For this property Mr. Twombly has offered a million and a half dollars, and the convent authorities have the matter under consideration. The property has cost them about half a million, and they would clear a round million on their investment.

Coal Miners Out on Strike.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 3.—A special from Morris, Ill., says: All operators of coal mines in the vicinity of Morris, published a statement that they had advanced the price of coal 25 cents a ton, and gave as a reason that owing to the McKinley bill prices of groceries, shoes, clothing, meat, as well as of feed for teams, had largely advanced. They proposed to pay four cents per ton of the 25 cents additional to the miners, but the latter demanded 10 cents of the 25, which the operators refused to pay, and the men all went on strike.

The Brother Hanged Himself.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 3.—Charles Fischer, a brother of the notorious Adolph Fischer, the Chicago anarchist, who was hung for the Haymarket crime, committed suicide in this city last night by hanging himself with a silk scarf. Fischer was a compositor and for some time had been suffering from ill health. Among his personal goods were found several books upon socialistic topics.

Tommy Warren and Miller Matched.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 3.—Articles of agreement for a five-ounce glove contest on November 22, before the Audubon Club in this city, have been signed by Tommy Warren, of California, and Tommy Miller, of Indiana, featherweights, at 118 pounds, give or take two. The fight will be for a purse of $1,000; $750 to the winner and $250 to the loser.

Digging for an Incendiary's Treasure.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 3.—Arthur Thompson, a colored grocer of this city, is serving a five years' sentence for arson. Since his incarceration he wrote to his lawyer, W. T. Kearns, that he had buried $400 in a tin box in the yard of his house, No. 135 Thomas street. The entire place has been dug up by men looking for the treasure, but without success.

Reward for Robinson's Arrest.

BROCKTON, Mass., Nov. 3.—The Brockton National Bank, who hold about $16,000 of C. W. Robinson's paper, among which are several forged notes, have decided to offer a reward for the arrest of the criminal.

ERIN'S ENVOYS HERE

O'Brien and Dillon Receive a Hearty Welcome.

GREETED BY GOVERNOR HILL.

What the Distinguished Irishmen Have Come to America For.

O'Brien Describes the Famous Escape of Dillon and Himself—Left Ireland in Full View of the Coast Guards—To Remain in New York Until After Election and then Visit the Big Cities.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Mr. William O'Brien, M. P., and his wife; Mr. John Dillon, M. P.; T. D. Sullivan, M. P., and his wife, and Timothy Harrington arrived here yesterday on the steamer La Champagne.

A reception committee representing the united Irish societies of New York, accompanied by several hundred members of the National League and the various Irish societies, met them at Quarantine. Upon the arrival of the steamer at her dock a reception was held on her deck, and at 11:30 the visitors were driven to the Hoffman House.

The party had scarcely reached the hotel when Governor Hill called upon them. The Governor warmly welcomed them to the city and State, expressed his hearty sympatny with the cause they represented and signed his name to the address of welcome that had been prepared by the Irish societies. Mayor Grant also called, and expressed sentiments similar to those of the Governor and appended his name to the address of welcome.

DETAILS OF THE ESCAPE.

The Exiles Sailed at Midnight in Full View of the Coast Guard.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—To the representatives of the press Mr. O'Brien related the details of his escape from Ireland, as follows:

"We delayed our trip as long as there was any chance of our being able to visit America in the interval between the sentence and the appeal. We saw that the Government was deliberately eating away that interval, and as soon as that became evident we came away.

"The plan was simplicity itself. We went out of the front door of a conspicuous house in Dublin without any disguise at all. We drove in a friend's carriage to Dalkoy, supped at the house of Mr. Healy, and that night at midnight we were rowed aboard the yacht St. Patrick, which set sail in a gale from Kingstown.

"While we were being provisioned, just before the start, the coast guards came alongside and questioned Captain Murphy. Sheriff Clancy of Dublin was with us. We escaped detection and sailed for the Welsh coast, where we lay three days becalmed within a pistol shot of the shore and in full view of the coast guards. Then we were becalmed three days more right in the course of English shipping in the channel, and if half the scrutiny had been given to us that was exercised in searching outbound vessels we would have been detected sure. We reached the French coast on the evening of the seventh day and went to Paris."

Mr. O'Brien then read a statement of the objects of the visit of himself and Mr. Dillon, which is made at the desire and upon the authority of Mr. Parnell, and predicted that a general election would occur in Great Britain in less than two years.

After remaining here until after the election, the visitors will hold meetings in Philadelphia, Boston, Newark and Jersey City. They will then hold a series of meetings here and afterward divide into two or three parties and make a tour of the country.

PARNELL WILL TESTIFY.

He Will Absolutely Deny Criminality in the O'Shea Case.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Mr. Parnell, it is said, will testify in his own defence and the defence of Mrs. O'Shea in the coming divorce suit of Captain O'Shea, and will absolutely deny criminality. It is rumored that the plaintiff has in his possession written evidence that will impair Mr. Parnell's denial.

Mrs. O'Shea will reply to her husband's allegations with counter-allegations. Altogether, the affair is about as unsavory as it can be.

It is understood that the London Times will publish a report of the trial in pamphlet form for circulation in Europe and America. The Tories, as cabled some days ago, rest great hopes upon its effect, especially among the Irish peasantry, who hold in deep abhorrence any violation of the marital pledge.

Brewer Bismarck.

BERLIN, Nov. 3.—Together with several Hamburg financiers, Prince Bismarck will establish a brewery at Friedrichsruhe. The capitalists referred to will own the brewery, paying rent to Prince Bismarck, who reserves the right for his heirs to purchase the plant and business at the expiration of 50 years.

Jem Smith Will Challenge Slavin.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Jem Smith is again going to enter the arena. His former backers believe that he can defeat Slavin according to London prize ring rules, and after the Slavin and McAuliffe affair is settled Smith will challenge Slavin to contend for the championship belt.

Chamberlain Will Oppose Churchill.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Mr. Joseph Chamberlain intimates an intention to oppose Lord Randolph Churchill's revived ambition for parliamentary leadership, owing to the latter's rejection of Mr. Chamberlain's Radical policy outlined some time ago.

Mary Anderson Ill.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Owing to illness, Mrs. Navarro (Mary Anderson) will not return to America for some time.

SECRET SOCIETIES AT WAR.

A Fraternal Congress to be Held in Pittsburg to Straighten Matters.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 3.—A fraternal congress of beneficial secret associations will be held here on November 11, 12 and 13. There will be fifty-five delegates present, representing thirty-five different orders. It will be the most important secret society event of the present year, and will probably mark the beginning of a war between two different classes of societies which have hitherto been acting in apparent harmony.

It is a well known fact that for several years the Legislatures of the different States have had bills before them at each session which provide that secret orders with beneficial provisions shall be classed as insurance companies, and as such be compelled to make sworn returns to an insurance commissioner and to pay taxes. Such a law, it is claimed, has been thought necessary on account of such orders as the Iron Hall, Solon and Sexennual League, which pay a bonus to the member himself at the end of a certain time. This is on the same principle as life insurance companies, and representatives of other orders claim they are conducting a simple insurance business under the pretext of being a fraternal society.

S. A. Will, Supreme Archon of the Heptasophs, and the only resident member of the congress, said that steps would be taken by the congress to allay the impression that the societies mentioned and those represented by such orders as the Heptasophs are of the same class. He said: "These orders which pay a bonus to members are nothing but speculating schemes. They justly create fear and endanger our liberty by attempting to create the belief that they are similar to us. They offer to pay premiums that seem impossible, and cover the business venture with a cloak of fraternity. We propose to take steps to let the public know who we are and who they are, and if legislation must be had to prevent fraud, we will make every effort to protect legitimate organizations. Next year nearly all the State Legislatures will meet, and we will appoint a committee to look after our interests."

The Knights of Honor will have an open meeting in Carnegie Hall on Wednesday evening, November 10, to receive the visiting members of their order.

RIOT AT A FUNERAL.

The Husband of the Murdered Mrs. Hogg Attacked by a Mob.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The funeral of Mrs. Hogg, whose mysterious murder has so excited the people of the London suburb, Hampstead, took place yesterday, and, as was expected, the occasion was taken advantage of by the populace for a demonstration against the dead woman's husband, who is suspected of having, in collusion with his mistress, caused her death.

It was well that an extra force of police had been ordered on duty, for otherwise violence would certainly have been done to Hogg. The carriage in which he rode as chief mourner was attacked by the angry mob, but the police charged upon the rioters and dispersed them.

After this encounter the people contented themselves with loud threats and menacing gestures, and no further breach of the peace occurred.

Mr. Hogg seems determined not to be frightened away or influenced in his actions by the threats of his neighbors. He declares his innocence of any connection with his wife's death, and the authorities have not thus far been able to find any grounds upon which to arrest him.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Count von Moltke will devote to charity birthday contributions amounting to 160,000 marks.

A divorced woman at Columbus, Ohio, was brutally murdered by a jealous lover, who then killed himself.

Dispatches from Buenos Ayres report that fresh disturbances have occurred there, and the premium on gold has gone up to 162.

It is stated that since the ascension of the present Czar, Alexander III., to the throne 27,000 Jews have been expelled from Russia.

The monster blast furnace of the Robeson Iron Company at Robeson, Pa., has been lighted after an idleness of nearly three months.

Bookmaker Carlan, whose tin box with $12,000 was stolen from the Hotel Vendome safe in New York, said he believed that Henry Cassin was wrongfully convicted of the theft, and will appeal to Governor Hill.

The American Union Bottle Company, composed of capitalists who live in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York, and who have associated with them Englishmen of wealth, will start a glass factory in Woodbury, N. J., this month. Bottles will be made by a new process.

At a crossing of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad a few miles west of Pataskala, Ohio., Mrs. Logan, aged 50 years, and Mrs. Nellie Mead, her daughter, aged 21 years, while riding in a buggy were struck by a train and both terribly mangled. They were dead when picked up.

Sister Rose Gertrude, who left England a few months ago to spend her life among the lepers of Molokai, one of the Sandwich Islands, is now a governess in the family of John Eng, superintendent of the Inter-Island Steam Navigation company at Honolulu. The report that she was engaged to be married to Dr. Lutz is unfounded.

A Church Burned.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Nov. 3.—The Dutch Reformed Church on Hudson street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, in this city, was burned at 6 o'clock last evening. It was one of the oldest churches in Hoboken. Loss about $30,000.

An Insane Woman Visits the White House.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Annie Westrick, a harmless insane woman from St. Louis, called at the Executive Mansion to see President Harrison to have him keep her husband from selling their property. She will be sent to the asylum.

The Presbyterian Synod of New Jersey recently unanimously decided to protest and vote against any Assemblyman or Senator nominated who would not pledge himself decidedly against all legislation to permit or protect race track gamblers. Consequently the Rev. Dr. Ketcham's and the Rev. Mr. Richards' people will understand that their two votes will not be cast for Mr. Rankin.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—See Ada Gray in "East Lynne" to-night, at Amphion Hall.

—During this week only, the United Tea & Coffee Grower's Association store will close at 8 P. M.

—A number of Westfield families have identified themselves with the Unitarian Society in Plainfield.

—The election returns will be read from Amphion Hall stage, Tuesday evening, during Ada Gray's performance.

—Joe Fuller's foot-ball eleven defeated Fred Fish's team on the Leal grounds on Park avenue, Saturday, by the score of 11 to 0.

—L. W. Randolph, of the City Pharmacy, is giving away sheet music containing gems from the latest operas, to his patrons.

—It cost John Gray $5 and James Allen $2, this morning, to get caught by the police while too much under the influence of liquor.

—Don't forget to purchase your groceries today as to-morrow is election day and legal holiday and all business places will close for the entire day.

—The Pingry boys of Elizabeth and the Leal foot-ball team of Plainfield didn't play their expected second game Saturday, but a "scrub" practice game was indulged in.

—The next issue of THE PRESS will give the result of to-morrow's election. Then politics will be removed from its columns and there will be room once more for general town talk and society news.

—J. M. Harper advertises in today's PRESS that he has a full line of books, games, toys, dolls, etc., suitable for holiday presents. His prices will be found to compare favorably with New York.

—The indications are that the Methodist Episcopal churches in the Middle, New England and Southern States east of the Alegheny Mountains, representing about one-third of the membership of the church, are decidedly opposed to the admission of women as lay delegates into the General Conference; and it is belived by those who have the best means of guaging church sentiment on this question that the church as a whole will pronounce against it. The voting on the question will go on during the present month. Plainfield's vote, as already recorded in THE PRESS, was in favor of admission.

OBITUARY.

Caroline Miller.

Mrs. Caroline Miller, wife of the late George Miller, died at her home on West Front street, this morning, at the age of fifty-eight. She was long a resident of this city, and had been a most successful hotel matron, having had charge of the excellent cuisine of the various hotels her husband owned in his lifetime, as well as of Laing's Hotel after her sons took charge of it. Among the hotels she and her husband conducted was the famous Sheridan House at Elizabeth and the noted "half-way house," on the road between Plainfield and Dunellen, which was burned years ago. She had been ill a long time, and was a patient sufferer. Four sons, Joseph B., George, Wallace and William, survive her, as well as two daughters, the one the wife of Charles Roberts, son of Counciliman Daniel Roberts, and the other unmarried.

Gave His Wife's Groceries to His Maudlin Love.

The spectacle of a woman and a man hugging and kissing on the public streets shocked the severe-minded people of the Fourth Ward Saturday noon. Both man and woman were intoxicated, and in the midst of their maudlin embraces they stopped to take frequent drinks, which added to their silliness. Finally reaching the corner of Front and Liberty streets, they parted with many fond expressions of regret at having to leave, and the woman appropriated to herself, while the man leered in loving approval, the heavily laden basket of groceries the man had been taking homeward to his family. When the woman was out of sight the man went, chuckling to himself, to report to his wife as best he could the absence of the Sunday dinner eatables. His boon companion in petticoats reached the neighborhood of Cutter's grocery store and spent the afternoon dozing on the pavement of the alley. She was finally picked up by the police, and after spending Sunday in jail, where she said she was Mrs Williams, an Indian woman, was released on promise of good behavior.

Watch These Pole-and-Wire Imposters.

The citizens who are submitting to the encroachments of pole-and-wire fiends under the supposition that the wires are for fire-alarm purposes, are informed that fire-alarm wires are not yet being strung, and will not be till THE PRESS gives due notice. The men now claiming to represent the city's fire-alarm system in reality represent something else.

The Rev. Dr. Yerkes, of this city, at the Baptist convention in Camden, yesterday, was chairman of a committee to protest in the name of 38,000 Baptists of New Jersey against the re-enactment of the laws to legalize pool-selling and book-making. So his congregation will know that he votes for the Hon. Fred. C. Marsh who has already gone through one fight on just that side.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. Mills was not able to reach Plainfield in time for this afternoon's meeting, but will begin his work this evening.

Miss Louise Bovey, of Somerset street, arrived home on the steamer "Aller," Saturday, after a three months tour of Europe.

Miss Ada Gray and Company, who perform in Amphion Hall three nights this week, arrived this morning. Miss Gray is registered at Force's Hotel.

J. B. Cleaver, pastor of the First Church of Christ, immersed twelve converts to his faith, in the Park Avenue Baptist church, yesterday afternoon—seven men and five women.

George A. Oakes, of Plainfield, has been chosen by his Sophomore classmates at Rutgers College, New Brunswick, Historian of the class for The Scarlet Letter, a famous college annual.

The New York World announces that to-morrow it will publish a humorous story of life on a Raritan farm from the pen of Mrs. Dora Springman of Plainfield. The title will be "Diamond Cut Diamond."

A. L. Titsworth, of Madison avenue, was suddenly stricken with pneumonia on Friday morning. The services of two physicians and a trained nurse were immediately secured, and today his condition is slightly improved.

A S. S. Institute will be held in Grace church, on Thursday next commencing at 3 P. M. The Bishop of the Diocese will preside. The Rev. Messrs. Holt, of Fordham, Bunting, of Trenton, Embury and others will take part in the exercises.

F. H. Martin starts today on the 4:08 Washington express, for Denver, Col. M M. Thorn, who goes to visit his daughter at Santa Barbara, accompanies him. Mr Martin intends looking into some lines of investment, and may eventually send for his family and permanently settle there.

The organist at Trinity Reformed church, yesterday morning and evening, was Louis Newman. This young performer is in great demand wherever a vacancy occurs, since his debut at the Crescent Avenue church some weeks ago. He has talent, and is improving every day in method and a knowledge of effects and expression.

The last of the handsome residence sites on West Eighth street, along the frontage where Messrs Runkle, Crane and Curtis have already built, has been sold. Charles I. Ames is the purchaser, and the lot is the one beyond Mr. Crane's. The sale was made through E. C. Mulford, who is the broker that has sold every one of the lots on the block from Jacob Kirkner's corner to Plainfield avenue.

At the Trinity Reformed church yesterday morning preceding the regular preaching service, the following persons were ordained as Elders and Deacons for the term of two years each: Elders—A Willet, J. H. Van Winkle, G. L. VanEmburgh. Deacons—D. VanWinkle, H. E. Gayle, A. Swalm. Following the installation the pastor, the Rev. C. Schenck, delivered an able and impressive discourse, his thoughts being gathered from the first part of the fourth verse of the second chapter of 1st Thess.

A Big Fire in the Country.

The extensive barns and stables at College Farm, the annex of the New Jersey State Agricultural College, situated about two miles beyond New Brunswick, were burned to the ground last night, with all their contents. Thirty head of cattle were destroyed, and a man named Gordon was suffocated and may die. The light of the fire illuminated the country for miles around, and on the country roads as far as Bound Brook, that at seven o'clock, just previous to the outbreak, had been very dark, the light was as strong as clear full moonlight, enabling one to see all the figures on his watch distinctly. People in Plainfield saw the reflection of the flames and thought the fire was at New Market. From various points of view just outside this city the blaze, though twelve miles distant, could be seen leaping high into the air and illuminating great volumes of smoke.

Business Men's Meetings.

Morning prayer services in connection with the Mills' union meetings, will be held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms, every day next week, from 7:30 to 8:20 A. M. The subjects and leaders will be:

Tuesday—"Compel Them to Come In."—Luke 14-23—A. C. LaBoyteaux.

Wednesday—"God's Love."—John 3-16—Seely Edsall.

Thursday—"Limiting God."—Ps. 78 41—E. L. Suffern.

Friday—"What Must I do to be Saved?"—Acts 16, 30-31.—H. R. Munger.

Saturday—"Prayer for Friends."—Job 42-10—F. H. Andrews.

Women's prayer meeting, with the same topics, will be held at 2:45 P. M., in the lecture room of the First Baptist church.

A Good Bag of Bunnies.

A party of seven hunters from Netherwood, Saturday, shot twenty-seven rabbits. They report the "cotton-tails" plentiful, and in good condition. Ernest Hand, Netherwood's crack shot, who was one of the party, succeeded in bagging eleven of the twenty-seven. Considering that there were several old hunters in the party, that was a good showing for a youth who is not yet out of his teens.

The Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, rector of Grace Episcopal church, is one of the Plainfield clergymen who signed the war note against race track gambling that was read in all the pulpits in Union county, Sunday the 19th inst. Count his vote therefore for the Hon. Fred. C. Marsh, and also the votes of Dr. Huribut, Dr. Lewis and the Revs. Schenck, Taylor, Dilts, Goodrich, Simpson, and Leonard it is just to suppose.

Truth Declared.

Like ex-Councilman Ginna, of this city, whose words on the subject are printed in full in another column, a large Republican manufacturer in Newark has openly avowed his intention of voting the Democratic ticket because of the onerous provisions of the tariff bill passed by a Republican Congress.

He declares himself to be a tariff reformer, not a tariff raiser, and believes that cheaper raw materials are essential in order to give both the workingman and the manufacturer fair compensation.

That is the Democratic plan.

The imposition of duties on foreign imports, justly laid and amply sufficient to protect American labor and legitimate enterprise, but never for the special object of enriching mercenary monopolists and piratical Trusts.

The making of crude materials as far as possible free from taxation, for the purpose of enabling American manufacturers of all kinds to compete with those of other countries in the markets of the World, and thereby vastly enlarging the field for the steady and lucrative employment of intelligent home labor, as well as capital.

That is genuine protection, Democratic protection, and to that end the people of the United States must and will eventually come, because it practically embodies equity, common sense and general prosperity.

The San Francisco News Letter clearly voices the doctrine of truth by declaring —"We believe that free wool, iron, coal, ores, dye-stuffs and other raw material, and a tariff on imported manufactures equal to the difference in the cost of European and American labor, would be the all-sufficient and the most effective kind of protection. It would certainly be ahead of the jobbery and robbery now being practised."

The Kid Glove Element Greet their Candidates.

The Republican campaign was practically closed in Union county Saturday night, when a pleasant reception was given to the Republican nominees at the headquarters of the Plainfield Republican Association. The attendance was larger than at the previous reception, since more postal-card invitations had been sent out; but the element was notably kid-gloved, and the workingmen and others who have in times past affiliated themselves with the Republican party but who were not invited to this "parlor meeting," will probably resent in an effective manner the slight which they cannot but feel. Mayor John C. Rankin, Jr., of Elizabeth, the Republican candidate for State Senator, said in reponse to questions concerning his attitude on the race-track question, that he considered it humiliating for a candidate to have to pledge himself in advance of election, but that no one need fear that he would not do the right thing when the time came. The stanch Republican who attended the meeting tried to make every one believe that they were entirely satisfied that Mr. Rankin is strongly opposed to legalizing race-track gambling. Speeches were made by Amos Clark, Jr., the Republican nominee for Congressman from the Third District, James Clark, the candidate for Sheriff, George W. Kyte, the nominee for Assembly, and James J. Bergen, ex-City Attorney of Elizabeth. At a late hour refreshments were served.

A Word for the People, to the Water Supply Company.

A correspondent asks, "Why THE PRESS has not published the news that the Water Supply Co., is going to begin to lay mains through the streets, at last."

Weeks ago the bill of sale, signed and sealed, whereby the Water Supply Co., became possessed of anything and everything belonging to the Water-Works Co., was published in these columns. Nothing has happened since to authorize any such statement as the correspondent makes. In fact the moment the water company put a pick or spade in the street, Chairman Smith of the Street Committee will stop them. They must have the Council's permission when they go so far.

As to building stacks or stand pipes on their own property, that is entirely there own business. But they must change the specifications for the completion of the pumping station so far as the roof is concerned. THE PRESS has its eye—which is the people's eye—on the Water Supply Co. President Bergen can't bluff the Plainfield public while this paper lives; and his company must do everything possible for the interest and protection of the people. Consequently there must be no wood in that pumping station roof. Make it all iron. Then there is no danger of fire stopping the pumps when they might be most needed.

—The specialty this week at the Crescent pharmacy, Park avenue and Fourth street, is imported licorice. Mr. Williams is making a "drive" in it, and selling 10 cent sticks at half that price. Now's the time to cure your cold or lay in a preventive.

—Accidents will happen, so that all will catch cold sometimes. You want to find relief by the easiest and best methods. The most effectual way is to take Hires' Cough Cure. In whooping cough and croup nothing equals it. Every family should keep this remedy in the house handy in case of emergency.

The first letter Gov. Abbett received petitioning him to veto the bill legalizing pool-selling at race tracks, was from the Hon. Fred. C. Marsh, and written on his sick bed. Will you vote for him or for Mr. Rankin who refuses to pledge himself or say a word against the race track gamblers? Remember also, Mr. Rankin's vote was the vote that granted the license to sell liquor on the race track.

—The Young Men's Christian Association convention of the Fourth New Jersey District, will be held at Westfield, Nov. 28-30. Information may be obtained from Stephen Cahoone of the District Committee, or at the Association rooms.

Don't You Know

That you cannot afford to neglect that catarrh? Don't you know that it may lead to consumption, to insanity, to death? Don't you know that it can be easily cured? Don't you know that while the thousand and one nostrums you have tried have utterly failed, that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is a certain cure? It has stood the test of years, and there are hundreds of thousands of grateful men and women in all parts of the country who can testify to its efficacy. All druggists.

The Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, rector of Grace Episcopal church, is one of the Plainfield clergymen who signed the war note against race track gambling that was read in all the pulpits in Union county, Sunday the 19th inst. Count his vote therefore for the Hon. Fred. C. Marsh, and also the votes of Dr. Huribut, Dr. Lewis and the Revs. Schenck, Taylor, Dilts, Goodrich, Simpson, and Leonard it is just to suppose.

MR. GINNA'S CONVERSION.

WITH OTHER REPUBLICANS HE HOPES FOR A DEMOCRAT'S ELECTION.

The Industry In Which Plainfield's Ex-Councilman is Interested, "Seriously Injured" by the McKinley Bill—Taxing Tinned Plate Makes the Poor Pay More for Tin Cups and Dinner Pails That the Iron Barons of Pennsylvania May Pocket $9,000,000.

Many are the Republicans THE PRESS hears of every day—and right in this little city, be it understood—who have had the honesty to denounce their party for a wilful increase of the burdens of taxation, and the courage to leave that party when it became evident it was committed to such outrageous policy merely to enrich the already wealthy at the cost of the already poor.

The most prominent of such seceders in Plainfield is, may be, ex-Councilman S. A. Ginna. He is active in church work, prominent in society, and has held an elective office by the grace of republican votes. His politics have been what are called, as an emphasis, "black." In fact so much of a partisan is he, that it was said (though this THE PRESS respects him too much to believe) he was one of the handful of "outraged citizens" who used to meet in the Art Gallery and weep tears over the policeman with the foul mouth bebause he was a "persecuted Republican."

Mr. Ginna's factory is in the Third congressional district, Brooklyn, and he has written a letter with other Republicans indorsing the candidacy of the Democratic nominee, Wm. J. Coombs. The factories of those whose names are signed to the communication are in the District, and their hundreds of employes live there. It is natural to suppose, of course, that all these employes are Republicans, because they know, of course, that "protection fills the dinner pail," and if the Republican party is not kept in power they will be cut down to the wages of the pauper labor of England, you know.

Yet to-morrow THE PRESS is constrained to believe that every man connected with those factories will vote for a Democratic Congressman. And there is also reason to believe that many Republicans in this county will join with Mr. Ginna to-morrow and vote for Jacob Geissenhainer. Read this:

Wm. J. Coombs, Esq:

DEAR SIR—In answer to your inquiry, "What effect has the advance of the tariff in the McKinley bill upon the industries of this section that use tin plate," would say that it seriously affects and is very injurious to the numerous industries of which tin plate is the material from which their goods are made. The section here of New York and Brooklyn consumes the larger part of the tin plate of this country, while the Third Congressional district in Brooklyn is either directly or indirectly connected with most of these tin plate industries, as it is well known that most of the numerous useful articles made from tin plate are manufactured and sold with strong competition at close margins of profit. It is a serious blow and very demoralizing to have our raw material (tin plate), which costs ordinarily in Wales 3 cents a pound, to have it nearly doubled by adding 2 2-10 cents per pound duty. To some close industries, where it is used in cans and containers, to be used once and then thrown away, it is almost prohibitory. The consumers, the great majority of whom are poor people, must add something more to their burden, or by denial, civilization must take a step backward, as some of the good things of this period are done up in tin cans. In these piping times of peace to inflict a double war tax on the necessaries of life and have an average duty of 60 per cent., bristling from the things we need and want, is bad, very bad; but to put a higher tax than this on tin plate is worse; it is not protecting anyone, as it has never been made in this country, but it is intended to protect a favored few to enter into its manufacture. Why this discrimination against one set of manufacturers for another? We protest against old, long established industries, with large capital invested and great numbers of people dependent on it for a living, being jostled from the path of trade by sumptuary laws made by parties in interest for the benefit of a favored few, that they may be established as an oligarchy of tin plate manufacturers.

We are told that it is to establish a new industry, and that a hundred thousand people will find employment. The fact is, about twelve thousand people in Wales the half of whom are boys and girls, make all the tin plate for the world; say we claim one-half of the tin plate made, there would only be three thousand men and three thousand boys and girls given employment, and these would be employed where iron and bessemer steel can be made the cheapest, viz: in Pennsylvania, for tinned plate [by common use abbreviated to tin plate] are thin plates or sheets of iron or bessemer steel coated with tin, the tin being a small percentage, i. e. in a Welch hundred-weight of 112 pounds, a box of tin plate, there is 3½ pounds of tin and 108½ pounds of iron. It is, then, the steel and iron barons of Pennsylvania that are to be benefited by this heavy tax at the expense of the entire community, for no one, however poor, can do without tin plate in some form. The favored few of this class will put up large works and make the $9,000,000 of profit that is guaranteed to them by this iniquitous tariff bill, every dollar of which will come direct from the pockets of those who use the wares made of tin plate. Will they pay their employes the same low wages that is paid in their other iron and steel industries? Probably.

Mr. Wallace was appealed to by us, both through letter and delegation, long before the passage of the McKinley bill, to respect these interests of his constituents. His reply was: "There are two sides to the question, and he failed to see how injury would come to these industries."

We hope that you, with your knowledge of our wants, will be our next representative in congress, and that our local industries will be given the preference, not Pennsylvania's, as under our present representative. The persons employed in this industry will readily understand how their interests are affected by the heavy tax on tin plates, and will be glad of their rights as citizens to express themselves on November 4. Respectfully yours,

GINNA & CO.,
WILLIAM VOGEL & BROS.,
S. A. ILSLEY & CO.

Dr. Ketcham Does Not Indorse Mr. Rankin.

Before the Republican reception in this city Saturday evening, Candidate Rankin visited some of the Plainfield ministers to beg them to vote for him.

He afterwards stated at the meeting that he explained his position on the race track question, to Dr. Ketcham, and the latter "assured Mr. Rankin that it was all any Christian could desire, and he would thank him to make it known that he heartily indorsed his position."

This is a falsehood. Mr. Rankin told Dr. Ketcham he would pledge himself to him privately, but he (Rankin) did not want it to be known publicly. It will be readily understood, therefore, that Dr. Ketcham never indorsed such a "position."

Rankin's record proves he is the one that is personally interested in the success of the race tracks. He does their printing and he does the printing of the railroads that carry thousands daily to the races. They have his hands tied even if he wanted to stand forth and pledge himself to vote against them if elected. But he won't pledge himself because he won't vote that way, and because he wants to catch the votes that Mr. Marsh has lost by his courageous stand—the saloon keepers, the liverymen and others of Elizabeth to whom the race track brings a big income.

Rankin's Own Organ Has Grave Fears for Him.

CRANFORD, N. J., Oct. 30, 1890.

To the Editor of the Central Herald:

SIR—I wish to make a statement relating to the two columns of abuse which the Journal has seen fit to heap upon me. After I was very reluctantly induced to send the letter to the Journal indorsing Mr. Rankin, I thought better of it, and sent word to the editor not to publish it. I sumbit that it was a breach of faith for him to do so. But I am quite willing to let the public listen to his wail in to-day's Journal, and draw its own conclusions about my position.

The Journal has made a mistatement about my open letter. The editor did read it through very carefully, and aloud, every word of it. But that is a matter of no consequence.

As the editor of the Journal has not respected my confidence in this business I may be excused for saying that in our conversation last Monday he expressed grave fears that Mr. Rankin would be defeated. Isn't the Journal shaking in its shoes? But let the right triumph!

Let me add that the statement that I ever excluded the Prohibitionists from my church is false. They never requested the use of the church for a mass meeting. I have never in my life brought politics into my church in any shape whatever. But as a citizen I claim the right to my views on political subjects like any other gentleman, and the right to give public expression to them whenever I choose.

G. F. GREENE.

In Memory of Good Old Scotland Days.

Forty Plainfield residents hailing from Scotland had a social gathering at 17 Grant avenue, Friday night in celebration, in the old Scotch way, of All Hallow E'en. It was the largest gathering of the kind that has taken place in this city for many years. The programme was a long and varied one of forty-five items, and was carried out in a manner characteristic of the "Land o'Cakes." The dances were nearly all Scotch, and were executed as only the Scotch know how. The songs were of a high quality and were sung with a national feeling that only those who are far away from their native land can understand. The games also brought back many fond recollections of bygone days. The singing of "Auld Lang Syne" brought the event to a close at 5 o'clock in the morning.

—Ada Gray and a first-class company at Amphion Hall, to-night.

Charge your mind with the fact that Hires' Cough Cure is the remedy you want should you have a cough or cold. It is pleasant to take, harmless and effective. Always reliable. No opium or poisonous drugs in its composition.

The Presbyterian Synod of New Jersey recently unanimously decided to protest and vote against any Assemblyman or Senator nominated who would not pledge himself decidedly against all legislation to permit or protect race track gamblers. Consequently the Rev. Dr. Ketcham's and the Rev. Mr. Richards' people will understand that their two votes will not be cast for Mr. Rankin.

MEDICAL OPINIONS.

The Deleterious Effects of Alcohol Upon the Human Body.

Dr. Grosvenor, in the Buffalo Medical Journal, sums up his views respecting the medicinal use of alcohol as follows:

"1. Grave responsibility rests upon the medical profession in the use of alcohol as a medicine, on account of its deleterious influence upon the system and the liability of the patient to contract the habit of using it as a beverage.

"2. Alcohol being an acrid narcotic poison, the bottle containing it should be labeled 'Poison,' as a reminder of this characteristic, and a warning to handle it with care.

"3. Alcohol, containing none of the compounds which enter into the construction of the tissues, can not properly be termed a tissue-forming food.

"4. The evidence in favor of the existence of a heat-generating quality in alcohol, is not sufficient to warrant the belief that it is a heat-producing food.

"5. As a narcotic and anesthetic, alcohol has a limited sphere of adaptation, and is much less valuable than several other narcotics and anesthetics.

"6. The stimulating effect of alcohol may be best secured by small doses frequently repeated.

"7. From the fact that its stimulating effect results from its paralytic action, alcohol is more properly called a depressant than a stimulant.

"8. As an antispasmodic and antiseptic, it may be superseded by other remedies, without detriment to the patient.

"9. Although alcohol is a positive antipyretic, and therefore useful in the reduction of bodily temperature, it is neither so prompt nor so effective as several other antipyretics.

"10. In cases requiring a remedy which will rapidly evaporate, alcohol is useful as an external application.

"11. So easy is the acquirement of the alcoholic habit, and so ruinous its consequences to body, mind and spirit that extreme caution should be exercised in its use in all cases, and its administration stopped as soon as the desired effect has been reached.

"12. Alcohol, as a medicine, should be reserved for emergencies, unusual conditions and circumstances in which a more reliable and less injurious remedy can not be obtained.

"13. Adulterations of alcoholics are so extensive and so pernicious, and their different preparations so variable in the amount of alcohol they contain, that it is best to demand pure alcohol of a definite strength in medical prescriptions.

"14. In the prescription of alcohol, the same care as to exactness of dosage and times of administration should be exercised, as it is used in prescribing any other powerful medicine.

"15. When intended to act therapeutically, alcoholics should not be prescribed as a beverage and taken ad libitum.

"16. The fact that methyl alcohol passes very rapidly into and out of the system, is an argument in favor of its more general use for internal administration.

"17. So deleterious are the effects of alcohol upon the human body, that it is eminently proper to inquire whether its harmfulness does not overbalance its helpfulness, and whether it could not be dropped from our list of therapeutic agents without any serious injury to our patients."

IN THE INDUSTRIAL WORLD.

THE latest invention is clothing made of a fabric in which fine threads of corks are interwoven with wool or silk, which renders it impossible for the wearer to sink in water.

THERE were over 8,000,000 kegs of nails produced last year in the United States, of which one-half were cut steel, less than one-fourth cut iron and more than one-fourth wire.

CRUSHED steel—made by crushing in a stamp-mill high-carbon steel quenched in cold water from an excessively high temperature—is being used for cutting stone. It is very hard, and cheaper and more effective than emery.

THE men employed in the German factories in which smokeless powder is manufactured have been provided with rubber masks to protect them from the fumes thrown off by the chemicals entering into the composition of the powder. Heretofore the men have suffered greatly from this cause.

THAT the manufacture of paper is one of the leading industries in this country is evidenced from the fact that during the past ten years it has increased over fifty per cent. It is estimated that the new census will show as follows: Capital invested, $4,185,000,000; number of hands employed, 4,050,000; wages paid per annum, $1,379,000,000; value of materials used, $4,414,000,000; product, $6,979,000,000.

A NEW wheat meal bread has been introduced in England. It is said that it has none of the grits or husks in it which are so apt to irritate a delicate stomach, yet which some think are essential to a good loaf of this description; neither is it dry and disagreeable to the palate. It is the very antipodes of all these. It has a crisp crust and a fine crumb. It is most easily digested and is most palatable.

The Rev. Dr. Yerkes, of this city, at the Baptist convention in Camden, yesterday, was chairman of a committee to protest in the name of 38,000 Baptists of New Jersey against the re-enactment of the laws to legalize pool-selling and book-making. So his congregation will know that he votes for the Hon. Fred. C. Marsh who has already gone through one fight on just that side.

HOW YOU MUST VOTE.

Condensation of New Jersey's New Ballot Law.

THE PROVISIONS AND PENALTIES.

How Nominations Must Be Made—The Printing and Obtaining of the Ballots. Casting the Ballot—How Secrecy Is Provided For.

According to the provisions of the New Jersey ballot reform law, passed at the last session of the legislature, the person of legal age who would exercise the rights of suffrage at any future elections must first see that his name and address is properly entered upon the registry books of the election district in which he resides not later than the Tuesday next preceding the day of election. The board of registry must first meet and organize on the Tuesday four weeks next preceding the annual election, and within the week terminating on the following Saturday the board must make by canvass or otherwise a complete list of all legal voters in said district. This list must be posted in handbill form in at least two conspicuous places in the election district, where it may be scrutinized by all. Final corrections will be made on the Tuesday preceding the day of election, and the revised registry list must be filed with the clerk of the city or township not later than the Thursday following.

PREPARING THE BALLOT.

The county clerks must publish in not more than six papers in each county, divided as equally as possible as to politics, for at least two weeks preceding the meetings of the registry board, a notice setting forth the days and hours of said meeting for each election district in the state. Personal presence on the part of the voter is not necessary. Affidavits from any voter in the district, duly setting forth the fact as to any other voter's rights to registration, whose name has not already been entered, are sufficient. Any person who shall register falsely, or procure a name to be registered falsely, may be imprisoned five years and fined $1,000.

Candidates for office must either be nominated at some convention of voters representing a political party which at the preceding general election polled at least 5 per cent. of the total vote cast in the state, or by a "petition" of legally qualified voters signed by at least 1 per cent. of the entire vote cast at the last preceding election for members of the general assembly in the state, county, district or other division in which the nominations are made. All certificates and petitions nominating candidates for state offices must be filed with the secretary of state forty days previous to election. General assembly and county candidates must file their certificates of nomination with the clerk of the county in which they are to be voted for twenty days prior to election. Other certificates of nominations must be filed with the clerks of the respective municipalities fifteen days prior to election.

All ballots are to be printed at public expense, and are to be provided by the clerk of the county if for county or state offices, and if otherwise by the municipal clerk. The nominations of each party or group of petitioners shall be printed on separate tickets, underneath the title or name of the party, on plain white paper of uniform size, quality, thickness and type, and on the back of each ballot shall be printed the words, "Official Ballot for ——" (designating in the blank the election district for which the ballot is prepared), the date of the election and a facsimile of the signature of the county or municipal clerk. Two hundred and fifty ballots shall be supplied for every fifty votes cast by such party at the preceding election for members of the general assembly.

In case of nominations by any party or petitioners that cast no votes at the preceding election, the number of ballots to be provided at public expense shall be equal to one-half the total vote cast in the election district or precinct at the last preceding election for general assembly.

The same clerks are required to provide for each election district a quantity of what are called "official envelopes," equal in number to double the number of votes cast in said districts at the preceding general election. These envelopes must be of a uniform quality of plain white paper, 3½ inches in length by 2 inches in width, with ungummed flaps. On the back of each envelope shall be printed the words, "Official Envelope for ——" (designating number of district), with date of election and fac-simile of the clerk's signature.

RECEIVING THE VOTE.

The law further provides that at each of the polling places booths or compartments, one for not less than seventy-five votes cast at the preceding election, shall be provided, in which voters may, if they so desire, procure and prepare their ballots secretly and screened from the observation of others. The door, when closed, must be so arranged as to show some part of the person standing in the booth, and the compartments must stand within a railed inclosure, to which no outsiders are admitted except the voters in the exercise of their privileges, and the officers conducting the election. The ballot boxes must be so situated that the voter may deliver his ballot to the election officer before leaving this railed inclosure. The general arrangement of the polling place must be substantially in accordance with the following diagram, which forms a part of the law:

The chairman of the county committee or the municipal committee of any political party having candidates for public office to be voted for may appoint two agents for each polling place, who shall act as challengers for their parties. Candidates nominated by petition, who may have no party organization, are also entitled to appoint two agents to represent them at each polling place. These agents are not permitted within the voting enclosure, except when a person is challenged and when the vote is being counted. They may, however, remain at all times within the polling room, together with the candidates of the various parties and the officers present to preserve order.

No electioneering shall be permitted within any polling place, and none publicly within 100 feet of the same. The voter, as he enters the railed inclosure, will be furnished by a member of the election board, stationed in close proximity, with one of the official envelopes, and he shall also be provided with at least one of the official ballots of each party. These ballots he may have secured before entering or he may find them in the booths. Having the ballots and the official envelope he must enter one of the compartments, close the door, and remain there a sufficient time (not exceeding five minutes) to inclose the ballot he desires to vote in the official envelope. He must make no mark or designating device upon the ballot or envelope, and on emerging from the booth he must hand this envelope to a member of the election board, who must deposit the same in the ballot box in presence of the voter.

Any voter who declares under oath, and establishes to the satisfaction of a majority of the election board, that by reason of any physical disability he is unable to prepare his own ballot, may take a friend, whom he may select, to the booth, whose duty it shall be to assist the voter in preparing his ballot.

Should the voter in any manner spoil his first official envelope he can obtain a second one, but no more. While the law provides that any voter can purchase of the county or municipal clerk as many official ballots as he can pay for, and the same may be distributed before election day, the official envelopes are confined exclusively to the polling room. In counting the vote the envelope containing the ballots shall be opened, the ballot removed, the names on the ballot counted and recorded, and the ballot must then, before another envelope is opened, be returned to the original envelope, and ballot and envelope shall be numbered and strung, as under the old law. If any envelope shall be found to contain more than one ballot the ballots shall be returned to the envelope, and on it written the words, "Rejected Ballots," and such envelope and ballots shall be strung on the string of rejected ballots. If any designating mark, sign or device shall appear upon either the official envelope or the official ballot such ballot shall be absolutely void, and shall not be counted for any candidate.

The law is fortified with severe penalties for a violation of any of the provisions of the act. For destroying or suppressing certificates of nominations or petitions a person may be imprisoned five years. For destroying ballots in the election booths or stealing the same a person may be fined $500 and imprisoned until the fine is paid. Any officer, under the act, who in any manner violates his duty, may be imprisoned three years. The printer who supplies the ballots, who shall misspell a name purposely or arrange the ticket except as specified under the law, may be fined $1,000 and imprisoned five years.

Any person who may mark any official ballot or envelope by any designation whereby any person may determine how any voter has voted may be fined $500 and imprisoned one year. Any member of any election board, or any clerk of the same, having any knowledge as to how a person votes, who shall reveal such knowledge to any other person, may be fined $2,000 or imprisoned five years. Any person who shall directly or indirectly offer money or any other consideration to a voter to vote or refrain from voting or registering may be fined $2,000 and imprisoned five years.

Promises of office or employment are considered just as bad, and the punishment is the same. Any person who shall contribute money to be expended in bribing voters may be called upon to pay a fine of $2,000 or spend ten years in prison. The man who shall accept any consideration for voting or refraining to vote may have to pay a fine of $1,000 or go to jail for one year. Any employers or corporation who may attempt to intimidate their workmen, directly or indirectly, can be called upon when convicted to pay a fine of $2,000 and spend five years in prison. Any person who shall do any electioneering on election day within 100 feet of any polling place, or a person who shall show his ballot after it is prepared for voting to any person in such a way as to reveal its contents, or any voter who shall offer to vote anything but an official ballot in an official envelope, lays himself liable to a fine of $25 for each and every offense.

In addition to these numerous and severe penalties the law finally provides that the court may disfranchise and disqualify to hold any office within the state for such length of time as it may deem proper any person convicted of any of the offenses mentioned.

PATHWAY THROUGH THE WOODS

'Twas only a little pathway,
Bordered with marigolds sweet,
With the green leaves overarching
The marks of unfrequent feet.
The golden tints of the autumn
Brought one of my saddest moods,
As I took that lonely pathway
Through the solemn, silent woods.

Chirp, chirp, said the wee brown songster,
As he hopped from limb to limb,
Stealing one look at the stranger
Then seeking the shadows dim.
Anon, a sound that was sweeter
With fairy like interludes
Came over my soul like ether
And charmed that path through the woods.

Thereafter there came a vision
As bright as a fabled fay,
A maiden of wondrous beauty
Stood right in my narrow way.
She blushed, and twilight grew rosy
Down through the soft solitudes.
I had met my fate, and knew it,
In the pathway through the woods.

Many happy years have blessed me
Since that quiet gloaming hour,
And to-day, beside my home hearth,
I dote on that woodland flower.
There is sunshine in her presence,
No matter what care intrudes.
And dear for her sake, forever,
Is that pathway through the woods.
—William Lyle, in Detroit Free Press

HOW TO CLEAN HOUSE

Some Men Would Hire the Troublesome Work Done.

But One Unfortunate Head of a Family Seemed to Have Been Lured Into Attempting the Task Himself—Where the Reward Comes In.

DID you ever clean house? No? Then you have never lived. Not that the pleasure derived from the actual work is so excrutiatingly funny that you can not get along without it, but the relief when the last tack is driven and the last piece of furniture placed is a thing that can only be experienced by one who has gone through the mill.

And so, to appreciate all there is in this nineteenth century civilization of ours, one must go to work at the bottom and build it up from the chaos in which housekeepers always seem to take such fiendish delight.

For weeks the wife of your sorrows has said: "We will clean house Monday," and you have been led to think it a little, trivial thing, not worth worrying about, and so have not hired a man to do the heavy work because there seems to be no heavy work to do. But at last the fatal moment comes and you can escape no longer. You are asked with all the sweetness of an invitation to peaches and cream if you will help with the stove before you go down-town, and in a moment of weakness you consent. Then you are lost, even more effectually than the woman who hesitates. Once the stove is out you see the zinc on which it rested is easy to remove, and that comes next. The tacks have all been drawn from the carpet by your wife, whose forehead shows an enormous height, and then, while you are at it, you can so easily help them roll the carpet together and carry it out to the back yard so that the man who is expected every minute can beat the dust out of it to his heart's content. Of course he never comes, and when you have carried the parlor chairs out to the laundry and found you had missed the train, you go at it yourself and thump away for half an hour at the dust you were all winter treading in. Then you are hot and dirty and all out of patience, and when you go in the house for a glass of buttermilk and find the woman who was to have come is as far away as is the man servant you grow desperate, get a mop and bucket, turn up your trousers and fall to work. From then on it is you and your wife for it. No one ever found an allen assistant when there was a house to clean.

Bedsteads have to be set out in the shade and mattresses have to be hung in the sunshine: and when you have wrestled with one of those latter abominations you feel that Evan Lewis and his strangle hold would be an easy and welcome thing in comparison. You are allowed to wash the woodwork in the parlor while the man hangs the paper in the bedrooms, and when he is half done he warbles a complaint that there is not enough paper to go around. So you have to slick up a bit and go half a mile to the store for another roll, only to find when you get there that the merchant has no more of that exact pattern, but would be glad to fill your order from any thing else in the shop. By the way, did anybody ever find a match for wall paper already purchased?

The upshot of it all is that you buy a new outfit, pay the cash and carry it home, and are told when you get there that your wife has concluded to have the room calcimined, anyway. You can either swear and be a brute or hold your temper and be a saint—just as you like. Being a man, you choose the latter—clean house and say nothing.

One of the carpets has to be ripped and sewed over, and while you are busy with such little things as going without your dinner, lifting two-ton bureaus and full-length mirrors, carrying out wardrobes and base burners, that amiable woman, with a ragged calico dress on, sits down in the midst of the litter and sews like a Trojan. She tells you what a lot of lovely new things Mrs. Blank is going to get for her parlor, and harries you into promising a good deal better outfit, even though you know your salary is already overdrawn. You blister knees and knuckles scrubbing the floor, and fall from the step-ladder while trying to brush the dust from the ceiling. You knock the little statuettes from the brackets where they had gained a residence, and in a fit of impatience at pounding your thumb throw the hammer through the largest window pane in the house. You tear your clothes on nails that were never revealed before, and cut both hands on the butcher knife while struggling to prepare a lunch. Your ravenous appetite can find nothing but husks of a better living to feed upon, and not many even of them. A tailor comes and presents his bill, which he claims is due and has long been in that condition, and in the face of proof so positive you can not for a moment make your wife understand where all the money goes to.

When you have lived through three days of this sort of agony, going to bed at midnight, only to rise with a midsummer dawn, you find the house is cleaned and the things that were so hard to move out can now be moved in again. Though bruised and broken in body and spirit, you are still in the ring, and come up to the scratch with a readiness that would disqualify you for the prize ring any day in the week. Not a man, woman or child has appeared to help you, and it seems that neither love nor money can induce them to sell an hour's labor. The ice man stands on the back step of his wagon and laughs as you strain every muscle of your body escorting dray-loads of furniture to their places in the house, and even the neighbors stop and ask how you like it. They tell your wife on the quiet that she is fortunate, but she knows that and always has. You struggle through the setting up of stoves, the jointing of pipes and the stretching of stubborn carpets, and you swear when it is all over that you will never, so long as reason maintains her throne in your distracted globe—never clean house again.

But then comes the reward. Then comes the victory. The consciousness that you may pass a stove without being asked to lift it; that not one of the tables or chairs or bureaus needs moving for another year—and that you may manage to die before that time. All these things are sweet and soothing to the tired soul and the more than bruised and broken body. You may now sell what was once your Sunday suit to the old-clothes man and sit down in perfect peace to a meal of victuals cooked in the ordinary way. You may go to bed at the proper hour and not feel in your heart of hearts that really you ought to be up and fixing things so that there will be less to do to-morrow. You have earned your reward, and if you are wise you will never allow any woman to beguile you into such an indiscretion again. Henceforward you swear you would rather live in comfortable dirt than in the cleanest house that was roofed over—provided you have the cleaning to do yourself.—Chicago Herald.

SOCIAL EQUALITY.

It Existed in China Eleven Centuries Before Christ.

In 1100 B. C. the Prime Minister of the Emperor Wou-Weng, Tcheou-Kung, constructed norias, or hydraulic machines of simple design and working, by which water was raised to a height to which it had never been carried before, and made reservoirs and canals for irrigation. Water was conducted, by means of machinery, from the wells to the dry hill-tops, and water provision was assured for times of drought. Agriculture, in consequence, flourished. Uther measures of Tcheou-Kung comprised the promulgation of laws respecting the boundaries of properties and the prevention of trespasses. The fields were divided into squares called wells, from their resemblance to the Chinese character signifying a well, surrounded and furrowed by ditches so arranged that eight farmers, each tilling his own tract, united in cultivating the ninth, interior tract, which belonged to the state, and the produce of which paid their rent.

The system succeeded to a marvel. Each tenant was proprietor of about fifteen acres, the whole product of which belonged to him, while the state was really proprietor of the whole, and had, as a landlord, the income of the ninth tract. Besides this, each farmer had some 3,350 square metres of ground for his farm-yard and his mulberry trees. Thus he always enjoyed a surplus of provision, of pork and poultry for food, and silk for clothing. No one at this time was richer or poorer than another, but a complete social equality existed, and every one, they say, was satisfied. —General Tcheng Ki Tong, in Popular Science Monthly.

"OH, IF MOTHER WERE ONLY ALIVE!"

All through life she has known a mother's watchful care. She now is a young mother, and gains strength but slowly. She would "give worlds" to do everything for her precious baby, but cannot; the doctor is so strict, and does not sympathize with her, "as mother always did."

That baby has unfolded in the young mother's heart, new emotions. She has a living responsibility, and requires strength to enable her to perform a loving duty. At such a time, too much care cannot be taken, and the Vegetable Compound is indispensable.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and a Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the following ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed, preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. B COWARD, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., October 25, 1890.

AN ORDINANCE

designating the streets of the City of Plainfield in and through which the posts and poles of the Plainfield Electric Light Company, its successors and assigns, may be placed and the manner of placing the same.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That persuant to an Act entitled "An act concerning Corporations, approved April 7th, eighteen hundred and seventy-five," which supplement was approved May 10th, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, and the streets, lanes and highways of the City of Plainfield are hereby designated as the streets in which the Plainfield Electric Light Company, its successors and assigns, may place and maintain poets and poles to sustain the necessary wires and fixtures for the supply and distribution of electricity, for electric lights, heat or power, for the period of ten years from November first, eighteen hundred and one, and the manner of placing the same shall be as follows:

The said posts or poles shall be located, placed or erected within and adjacent to the curb line as shown by official maps of the city of Plainfield, including the points or places now occupied by the posts or poles of the said Plainfield Electric Light Company; and said posts or poles may also be placed or erected at any other points or places upon said streets, lanes or highways as may be indicated for that purpose by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield or some committee thereof authorized by the Common Council, and all poles hereafter erected shall be erected under the supervision of said Common Council, or its authorized committee and in accordance with the rules and ordinances of said city, and shall be located within eighteen inches of the curb line.

Section 2. That on the first day of November, nineteen hundred, the rights and privileges hereby conferred upon or secured to the said Plainfield Electric Light Company, its successors and assigns, shall, at the option of the said inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, cease and determine, and said Plainfield Electric Light Company, its successors and assigns, shall upon request of the said inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by its Common Council, execute under the corporate seal of said Company and deliver to said inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, a surrender and release of all rights and privileges granted by this ordinance, to carry out the true intent and meaning hereof. And said Plainfield Electric Light Company shall file with the City Clerk within ninety days next after passage of this ordinance its acceptance under its corporate seal and signed by its president, of the conditions, terms, provisions, restrictions and regulations hereof, and every of them, and in default thereof, it is not be understood and held that it declines to accept the same and thereupon the rights, powers and privileges to it granted or secured hereby, shall forever cease and be at an end, in the same manner and with the same effect as if this ordinance had never been passed.

AN ORDINANCE

To macadamize Cemetery avenue, running from Park avenue to Woodland avenue.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Section 1. That said avenue from the southerly side of Park avenue to the northerly side of Woodland avenue for the width of sixteen feet, that is to say for the distance of eight feet, on either side of the centre line of said avenue be permanently improved with broken stone for the depth of six inches, of good quality and proper size, the same to be properly laid, compacted and rolled, so that when completed the surface shall be smooth and even and shall conform to the grade of said avenue as now established thereon, to be done under the direction of the street commissioner and to be paid for out of the money raised by tax for the improvement of streets as provided by the act of the Legislature, entitled "an act to authorize cities to make improvements in the road beds of the streets at the general expense."

Adopted by the Common Council October 24, 1890.
Approved by the Mayor October 28, 1890.
Attest: JOB MALE, Mayor.

ELECTION RETURNS

Both Parties Surprised Over the Result.

DEMOCRATS GAIN THE HOUSE.

The Election of Major McKinley Claimed by a Small Majority.

The New York Legislature in Doubt—Governor Brackett Defeated in Massachusetts—New Hampshire Elects a Democratic Governor and Legislature—Delamater Carries Pennsylvania.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Elections were held yesterday in 39 States. Returns are not all in yet, because of unfamiliarity with the new election laws in many States. The Democrats will control the next House. They have elected the Legislatures of Illinois and New Hampshire, which insures Democratic successors to Senators Farwell and Blair. They also make gains in New England, notably in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The following are the latest returns from the various States.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Delamater Carries the State—Congressmen Elected.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—The result in Pennsylvania shows from partially incomplete returns that the State has gone Republican by not less than 15,000. These figures are lower than those just given out by Chairman Andrews, who claims 28,000, and ex-State Chairman Cooper, who has been figuring very closely, agrees with him. Republican City Chairman Porter claims the city alone by 20,000 for Delamater, and on this basis and the admitted Democratic loss of Allegheny County by 3,000 the figures may be increased. An increase is hardly probable, because heavy Democratic gains are reported in many counties.

The latest returns indicate the election of the following congressmen: 1st, Henry H. Bingham, Rep.; 2d, Charles O'Neill, Rep.; 3d, William McAleer, Dem.; 4th, John E. Reyburn, Rep.; 5th, Alfred C. Harmer, Rep.; 6th, John B. Robinson, Rep.; 7th, Edwin Hallowell, Dem.; 8th, William Mutchler, Dem.; 9th, David R. Brunner, Dem.; 10th, Marriett Brosius, Rep.; 11th, Joseph A. Scranton, Rep.; 12th, George W. Shonk, Rep.; 13th, James B. Reilly, Dem.; 14th, John Riefer, Rep.; 15th, Myron B. Wright, Rep.; 16th, Albert C. Hopkins, Rep.; 17th Simon P. Wolverton, Dem.; 18th, Louis C. Atkinson, Rep.; 19th, Frank E. Betzhoover, Dem.; 20th, Edward Scull, Rep.; 21st, George W. Huff, Rep.; 22d, John Dalzell, Rep.; 23d, William A. Stone, Rep.; 24th, Andrew Stewart, Rep.; 25th, Thomas W. Phillips, Rep.; 26th, Mathew Griswold, Rep.; 27th, Charles W. Hone, Rep.; 28th, George F. Kribbs, Dem.

IN OHIO.

The Republicans Carry the State and Major McKinley is Defeated.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 5.—Returns from nearly every section in the State indicate a Republican victory by a majority of 12,000. There was much more interest centered in the Congressional campaign than in the State contest.

The latest returns from the Eighth District indicate that Hare (Dem.) is elected by 300 majority over Foster, (Rep.)

The fight in the 16th District between Major McKinley, the author of the new tariff law, and ex-Lieutenant-Governor Warwick has attracted great national interest. No other district in the United States has been watched more close than McKinley's. With a majority of nearly 3,000 in favor of Mr. Warwick, it has been generally held that McKinley's defeat was inevitable.

The latest returns from Major McKinley's district indicate that he is elected by a small majority. The Democrats say he is defeated.

A special dispatch from Canton, Ohio, the home of Major McKinley, says: "This was the most exciting election ever held in Canton, interest centering on the congressional fight to the exclusion of everything else. The heaviest vote ever known was polled and business was practically suspended.

IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

The Democrats Claim to Have Carried the State and Legislature.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 5.—It is probable that Amsden (Dem.), for Governor, is elected by the people and that the Legislature is Democratic, which will insure a Democratic United States Senator to succeed Blair (Rep.).

McKinney (Dem.) is certainly elected to Congress in the 1st District, and the Democrats are claiming the 2d District also.

Mormons Carry Utah.

OMAHA, Nov. 5.—Latest advices from Utah state the chairman of the Liberal Committee concedes the election of Caine, Mormon, by 5,000 to 6,000 majority. The Liberals only carry two counties Juab and Lummitt. The Liberal loss in Salt Lake County is 400 on account of the apathy in the city vote.

Democrats Claim Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 5.—The indications are that the Democrats have carried the State, electing the Governor and the rest of the State ticket. They have gained one Congressman in the Milwaukee district, and there are strong grounds for their claim of electing another in the Third District.

Iowa Claimed by the Republicans.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 5.—The Republican State Committee claim the State by 5,000 majority, and all the congressional districts except the First and Second.

Virginia's Claim.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 5.—The State Democratic Committee claims a solid delegation to the next Congress.

Republicans Claim Minnesota.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 5.—The Republican State Committee claim the State by 8,000 to 10,000 plurality. The Democratic State Committee do not yet give an estimate.

Hamilton Fish Elected.

CARMEL, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Hamilton Fish was elected to the Assembly.

NEW YORK STATE.

Figures from the Congressional and Assembly Districts.

MIDDLETOWN, Nov. 5.—Bacon (Dem.) for Congress has a majority—a gain of 300.

NEWBURG, Nov. 5.—Lexow (Rep.) carries the city for Congress by about 50 majority.

Albany, Nov. 5.—Nolan (Dem.) in the 1st and Hitt (Dem.) in the 3d District are elected to the Assembly by about 1,500 majority each. Charles Tracey (Dem.) is re-elected to Congress from the 19th District by over 2,000 majority.

JAMESTOWN, Nov. 5.—E. E. Woodbury (Rep.) is elected to the Assembly in the 2d district of Chautauqua.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Nov. 5.—Mase (Rep.) for Assembly is re-elected in the 1st District of Dutchess County. Briggs (Rep.) 2d District, is also probably elected. Ketcham (Rep.) is re-elected to Congress.

KINGSTON, Nov. 5.—The election of Cox (Dem.) for Congress in the 17th District is conceded by the Republicans by a majority of 750.

UTICA, Nov. 5.—Haley (Dem. and Lab.) is elected in the First Assembly District of Oneida County.

SENECA FALLS, Nov. 5.—In the 28th Congressional District Noyes (Rep.) is probably elected. Durham (Dem.) is elected member of Assembly.

BUFFALO, Nov. 5.—Returns from two-thirds of the city and county indicate the election of the Democratic city and county ticket by majorities ranging from 500 to 2,000. Returns from Western New York counties show the election of the following assemblymen: Livingston County, E. H. Davis (Rep.); Genessee County, F. T. Miller (Rep.); Orleans County, W. L'Hommedieu (Rep.); Wyoming County, I. S. Johnson (Rep.); Chatauqua County, First District, W. C. Gifford (Rep.)

LOCKPORT, Nov. 5.—This city gives Bunting (Dem.) for Congress 125 majority, a Democratic gain of nearly 500. This makes Bunting's election sure.

SYRACUSE, Nov. 5.—The Republicans carry the three Assembly districts in this county.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 5.—Parsons (Rep.) for Assembly in the Second or city district of Monroe county is elected by 4,000 majority, a large Republican gain.

GLENS FALLS, Nov. 5.—John M. Weaver (Rep.) is elected to Congress in the 21st District.

AUBURN, Nov. 5.—Payne (Rep.) carries the 27th Congressional District by probably 2,000 majority. For the Assembly, the First District elects George W. Dickinson (Rep.), and the Second, W. L. Noyes (Rep.)

WHITE PHLINS, Nov. 5.—Stahlnecker (Dem.) for Congress in the 14th District has been re-elected. William Ryan (Dem.) has been elected to the Assembly in the Second District over Rhoades, the Republican present incumbent, by about 1,000 majority.

The New York Legislature.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 5.—The latest returns from all the Assembly districts throughout New York State indicate that the Democrats will have a small majority in the Assembly, and it is claimed that on joint ballot there will be a tie.

IN DELAWARE.

The Republicans Elect the State, Congressional and Legislative Ticket.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 1.—Returns from 10 districts out of 47 of this city show a Republican gain of over 500. The city will probably go Republican by a safe majority. New Castle County may be Democratic by a small majority, but the Republicans claim it. Kent and Sussex Counties are also in doubt. No figures are yet obtainable from the counties.

The present indications point to the election of the entire Republican State, Congressional and Legislative ticket, but definite returns may change the result.

Claims of New York Papers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The Tribune says: The returns from the States indicate the return of 167 Republicans and 165 Democratic Congressmen.

The Times says: The Democrats have completely overthrown the Republicans in the House of Representatives. The Fifty-second Congress will consist of 332 members, as follows: Democrats, 201 Republicans, 129; Democratic majority, 71.

The Vote in Florida.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 5.—Returns from 75 towns received by the Times show nearly 1,600 Republican loss. The Democrats carry the State by about 15,000 majority. Bullock (Dem.) for Congress in the Second District has about 5,500 majority over Stripling (Rep.) Mallory (Dem.) in the First District has 11,000 majority over Reed (Rep.) The constitutional amendment separating the dates of the National and State elections is probably carried. It is a Democratic measure.

Washington Goes Republican.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 5.—Meagre returns from the entire State indicate the election of Wilson (Rep.) for Congress beyond doubt, though probably by a reduced majority from that of 1889, owing to a vigorous campaign by the Democrats. The returns thus far indicate that both branches of the Legislature will be Republican by the usual majority.

Warmoth Defeated.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 5.—The latest returns indicate that Meyer (Dem) has defeated Warmoth (Rep.) for Congress in the 1st District by 2,000 majority, and that Logan (Dem.) has defeated Coleman (Rep.) for Congress in the 2d District by 3,000. In the other districts there was no organized opposition to the Democrats.

In Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 5.—Returns from the First Congressional District show the defeat of Spoower (Rep.) by 2,000 majority. In the Second District the race is very close between W. O. Hewold (Rep.) and C. H. Page (Dem.). Page's election is claimed by the Democratic State Committee.

Tillman Elected.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 5.—Tillman (Farmers' Alliance and Democrat) is elected Governor by not less than 25,000 majority. The total vote in the State will not exceed 75,000. The election was quiet. Neither whites nor blacks displayed any enthusiasm.

The Result in Maryland.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 5.—Maryland sends an unbroken Democratic delegation to Congress. McKaig defeats McComas by about 800, and Compton wins over Mudd by 300. The other Democratic majorities are in the thousand.

HARD FIGHT IN ILLINOIS.

A Democratic Sheriff for Chicago—Republican Majority in the Legislature.

CHICAGO, Nov. 5.—The indications are that Congressman Lawler (Dem.) is elected sheriff, 149 out of 502 precincts giving him 2,000 majority.

The Republicans will retain a majority in the Legislature, though the Democrats and Farmers' Alliance men will gain several members.

In the central and southern part of the State the Farmers' Alliance men have made some gains by coalescing with the Democrats, and these members of the Legislature will be in favor of General John M. Palmer for United States Senator as against Senator Farwell, who will be the Republican candidate in case his health permits.

The entire Republican State ticket will be elected by at least as good a majority as Governor Fifer had plurality in 1888, the latter being slightly over 12,000.

As the returns continue to come in on Legislative candidates they show that the farmers have polled an unusually large vote.

In many of the Legislative districts the contest was so close that it will take the official count to decide.

Congressman Cannon is probably elected by a small majority, although the Democrats will not admit it.

INDIANA.

The State Claimed by the Democratic Committee.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 5.—The chairman of the Democratic committee claims a majority of not less than 16,000 on state ticket and 11 out of the 13 members of Congress.

Heavy Farmers' Vote in Kansas.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 5.—Advices from many points in Kansas point to heavier Farmers' Alliance vote than was anticipated. They claim 125,000 votes for the State ticket.

Husted Wins, as Usual.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 5.—General James W. Husted has won again in his fight with young Hyatt, and will return to the Assembly from the 3d Westchester County District. His election is conceded by about 400 majority.

Nebraska's Vote.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 5.—Prohibition is defeated in Nebraska by a large majority. Boyd (Dem.) has been elected Governor.

The Johns Hopkins Medical School.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Mrs. Harrison has accepted the presidency of the committee organized for the purpose of securing funds for the endorsement of the medical school of Johns Hopkins University, in order that women may be admitted on equal terms with men. Mrs. Harrison has selected Nov. 14 as the day on which to make an inspection of the hospital, and on the visit she will be accompanied by Mrs. Blaine, Mrs. Levi P. Morton and the leading ladies of official society here. Ladies of the local committees of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore will also be present at the inspection.

Yale Defeated the Crescents.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 5.—The Yale football team defeated the Crescents by the score of 53 to 0.

THE SECRET BALLOT

The Law Worked Smoothly as a General Rule.

IN FORCE IN THREE STATES.

Result of the Elections in New York New Jersey and Connecticut.

The Tammany Hall Ticket Elected by Over 22,000 Majority—Democrats Carry Connecticut But Lose the Legislature—New Jersey Goes Democratic—Congressmen Elected in the Three States.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Interest in one of the liveliest municipal canvasses we have recently had was increased by the desire to learn the effect of the new ballot reform law on the masses of the people. The law worked smoothly as a rule throughout the city, and the novel conditions of the secret ballot did not have the pronounced effect on the vote of certain classes which many political prophets had anticipated. This was largely the result of educating the voters in the intricacies of the law before election.

It is not thought that the want of learning kept many from the polls, and once there it kept none from voting, as all were instructed who desired by the poll clerks.

Opinions differed, however, as to some of the provisions of the law, and this caused a number of misunderstandings and recourse to the courts. There was very little delay in polling the ballots, however, and nothing occurred to materially detract from the general success of the law.

TAMMANY WINS.

The Fusion Ticket in New York Defeated by Over 21,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Tammany Hall gained a decisive victory over the fusion ticket. Grant, for Mayor, is not likely to fall below 22,000 majority over Scott.

The vote for District Attorney, in which it was expected that Nicoll, the Tammany nominee, would fall far behind the vote for Grant, will show that he has a majority of nearly 21,000 over Goff, the fusion candidate.

All the Tammany candidates for the other county offices, namely: Sheriff, President of the Board of Aldermen and County Clerk have average majorities of 20,000.

The vote for Superior Court judges and City Court judges shows the same majority in favor of the Tammany candidates.

In the city over 200,000 votes were cast out of the registration of 245,000.

The county officers elected are therefore the Tammany nominees: Grant, mayor; Gorman, sheriff; Giegerich, county clerk; Arnold, president of the Board of Aldermen.

The Democrats carried every Congressional district in the city, and also made a gain in the Assembly. Those elected with five exceptions, are Tammany nominees. All the successful candidates in the 4th, 6th, 10th and 23d districts are Democrats elected on the Fusion ticket.

Tammany's victories for members of the Board of Aldermen are in the same proportion as that for Assembly.

RESULT IN NEW JERSEY.

The Returns Not Yet Complete on Account of the New Law.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 5.—An enormous vote was polled in every part of the State, and was far in excess of that usually cast in years when there is no contest for President or Governor. This was especially true in the counties where State Senators were chosen. The fact that it was the first election held under the new Ballot Reform law also helped to swell the vote. The new measure seems to have been a success everywhere. Some delays were experienced however, particularly in Newark and Jersey City, in getting the ballots from the city clerks when the polls opened, but they caused no especial inconvenience.

Democratic Senators are elected in Essex, Union, Monmouth, Somerset and Warren Counties, which gives them control of the Senate. The House is also Democratic.

Both parties now claim Mercer County. The Democrats claim they have elected the Sheriff and that Mercer give a majority for Havens (Dem.) for Congress against Buchanan (Rep.), a gain of one member in the House.

IN CONNECTICUT.

The Legislature is Republican and the Democrats Gain One Congressman.

HARTFORD, Nov. 5.—The Republican State Central Committee concede the election of these Congressmen:

1st District, Lewis Sperry (Dem.) by 300 majority. A Democratic gain.

2d District, W. F. Wilcox (Dem.) re-elected by 1,000 majority.

3d District, Charles A. Russel (Rep.) re-elected by 1,000 majority.

4th District, Frederick Miles (Rep.) probable, though in doubt.

The Democrats secure control of the State Senate by four or five majority, against seven Republican majority at the last session, and the Republicans continue in control of the House by a majority reduced from 56 to 25 or 30. The Republicans have a safe majority on joint ballot and will re-elect United States Senator Platt.

The State ticket is in doubt, Morris (Dem.), for Governor, will probably have 2,000 majority, but that is likely to be offset by the Prohibition vote so as to prevent a clear majority.

One hundred and thirty-six out of 168 towns give Merwin (Rep.) 51,011, Morris (Dem.) 52,844, Augur (Pro.) 2,447.

HEARST'S SUCCESS.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 5.—E. F. McDonald, Democratic candidate for Congress from Hudson County, is elected.

FORTY-FIVE DAYS ON AIR.

Signor Succi's Long Fast to Begin To-Night in New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—That a man can live 45 days on merely air and water will be shown by Signor Succi, the Italian faster, who begins his long fast this evening. That is, the signor says he will show it, and as he has shown considerable skill in subsisting on nothing, there are not a few who believe he will be successful.

The arrangements for the 45 days' fast have been completed, and this evening the signor will take up his fasting abode in a private parlor over Koster & Bial's, in West Twenty-third street.

A committee of medical men and the students of Bellevue College Hospital will watch him during his long fast and see that he does not touch food.

Sig. Succi is determined to outdo Dr. Tanner, who lived to enjoy watermelons after 40 days' abstemiousness. He equalled this record last spring in London, and had previously played a trick on his stomach by refusing it food for a period of 30 days.

Reprieve Expected for Birchall.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 5.—Mrs. Birchall arrived here to-day, and there is little doubt that she will be granted a reprieve for her husband, although it is well known here that his actions since conviction have materially lessened any sympathy the Minister of Justice or other members of the Cabinet have before entertained toward him. It is said that the petition to be presented to the Minister of Justice praying for clemency in the case of Birchall, contains in all about 10,000 signatures. This is the largest petition ever presented in a similar case in Canada.

Investing in Virginia Property.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 5.—A dispatch from Glasgow, Va., says that the Board of Directors of the Rockbridge Land Improvement Company, have ratified the final contract with London capitalists for the investment of $1,000,000 in the stock of the company. With the exception of Middleborough, Ky., Glasgow was the only place in this country in which English capitalists have become so largely interested. The Board also ratified contracts for industries which will probably give Glasgow an additional population of 10,000.

Will Investigate Dr. Crosby's Charge.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Inspector Byrnes came out with a strong letter in regard to Dr. Howard Crosby's recent accusation that a certain police captain received $70,000 last year in blackmail from saloonkeepers in his precinct. The inspector admits the gravity of the accusation and promises a rigid investigation. He asks a suspension of judgment until the matter can be thoroughly sifted by the police board.

Parson Fritch Released from Custody.

READING, Pa., Nov. 5.—Rev. M. L. Fritch, who was convicted at the September Quarter Sessions on a charge of larceny, and who was sentenced to three months' imprisonment over a week ago, has been released, the court having modified his sentence to 10 days' imprisonment. The parson was evidently glad to be released, for he walked to the court house with more celerity than the deputy sheriff accompanying him.

Eastern Capital for Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 5.—A party of gentlemen from New York city and Philadelphia have been looking over a large tract of land just south of the Little Calumet River at New Chicago, with a view to locating woolen mills there. Three of the incorporators of the new company are C. S. Downs, J. W. Cochran and J. Watt of New York. It is understood that the capital stock of the new company, which has been incorporated in New York, is $500,000.

Richter and the Socialists.

BERLIN, Nov. 5.—A meeting of the Freisenniga Workmen's Association was held here last night. Among the speakers was Herr Richter, who, in dilating upon the situation, severely criticised the attitude of the Socialist party. Among the audience were a number of Socialists, who resented Herr Richter's strictures upon their party, and became so uproarious that the police who were present had great difficulty in restoring order.

Weavers' Wages Reduced.

LONSDALE, R. I., Nov. 5.—The cotton weavers of this place have received notice of a cut down in wages. They were getting fifty-three cents on a fifty yard long cut, but they are to run a finer grade of goods with five yards additional on the length, and will receive but thirty-eight cents a cut. The Valley Falls and Ashton weavers' wages have been reduced about the same amount.

A Trail of Human Blood.

RAHWAY, N. J., Nov. 5.—There is considerable excitement here over the discovery of a trail of human blood leading from a lonely clump of trees in the outskirts of Rahway to the edge of a dock jutting out into the Rahway river. The matter was reported to the local authorities and the river will be dragged for the body that is supposed to be hidden in its depths.

Arrested for Murdering His Wife.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 5.—Policeman Patrick Welch, of this city, has been arrested on the charge of murdering his wife. The couple did not live happily and Welch had been very jealous of his wife. He was committed to await the result of the coroner's inquest. The prisoner declares that he does not know how she received her injuries.

City Bonds Purchased.

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—Messrs. Barffard and Stanwood, bankers, have bought of the city of Lowell $700,000 thirty-year 4 per cent. bonds of the town of Needham, Mass., $7,000 4 per cent. water loan of the city of Waterville, Me., $60,000 refunding 4 per cent. bands of Lewis county, Washington, and $40,000 refunding 6 1-2 per cent. bonds.

UNRULY SOLDIERS.

They Attack With Arms the Relatives of New Recruits.

BERLIN, Nov. 5.—A detachment of soldiers who were engaged in guarding at a railway station a body of 800 recruits who were going some distance to drill, interfered with the relatives of the recruits who had come to bid them farewell.

Several of the soldiers were struck by civilians, whereupon they drew their sidearms and attacked their assailants. Several of the civilians were so badly injured that it was necessary to take them to the hospital.

Jewish Students in Trouble.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg says the Jewish students in southern Russia who embraced Christianity in order to be permitted to pursue their studies at the University of Odessa have been thrown into consternation by the decree of the Czar's ministers that Jewish converts shall be on the same footing, as to education, as Jews who retain their own religion. The converts dare not apply for readmission to the Hebrew faith, as they would thereupon be prosecuted as appostates. Their only hope is in fleeing from Russia.

Approved by the Royal Family.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Several members of the royal family have written to General Booth, praising the scheme proposed for the relief of the poor classes and expressing hopes for its success. Similar letters of approval have been forwarded from people in all walks of life, and contributions are constantly coming in for the fund with which it is proposed to begin the work.

Boycotting New Jersey Cattle.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—At a meeting to-day of the Central Chambers of Agriculture it was resolved that in view of the existence of pleuro-pneumonia in New Jersey it is imperative to maintain the restrictive rules in regard to the importation of cattle; also that six months' time should be allowed to elapse after a country is declared free from cattle disease before cattle from such country are accepted as healthy.

Off on His Tour of the East.

VIENNA, Nov. 5.—The Czarewitch embarked at the Austrian port of Trieste for his tour of the East. He reached the frontier of Austria last evening. In accordance with a special request, no official reception was tendered him. He was met by Emperor Francis Joseph on his arrival at the Northern Railway station in this city. A court dinner was given in honor of the Czarewitch at 7 o'clock, and at 10 he resumed his journey to Trieste.

The Presents to Princess Victoria.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—Although it is the custom in Germany to delay sending in wedding presents until just before a marriage, Princess Victoria of Prussia has already received a large number from her relations and friends. The most magnificent of them is the gift which Empress Frederick presents. It consists of a tiara, necklace, brooch and earrings of large sapphires, diamonds and pearls.

Prof. Koch's First Trial.

BERLIN, Nov. 5.—Prof. Koch's first consumptive patient outside the hospital is Frau Sigismond. She is not dangerously ill, but has been inoculated with the lymph in the back and breast.

Cheers for Balfour.

DUBLIN, Nov. 5.—Chief Secretary Balfour arrived in Donnegal to-day. There was a large crowd at the railway station and he was heartily cheered. Cheers were also given for Dillon and O'Brien.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Mann and Tillett, officers of the London Dockers' Union, have issued a circular advising the men to all remain at work pending negotiations with the dock companies.

The Supreme Court has affirmed the decision in the case of George Martin, convicted of murder in Lauderdale, Miss., and fixed December 10 as the day for his execution.

The Grand Jury at Richmond, Ind., found an indictment for murder in the second degree against J. A. Wood, the hospital attendant accused of killing T. S. Blount, a patient.

There has been born to the wife of Frank Stone, near Washburn, Ind., a baby weighing one and a half pounds. The infant, a girl, is perfectly formed in every respect and is but six inches in length.

The sheriff has levied on the stock of D. S. Schwereiner, proprietor of the common sense shoe store, at Reading, Pa., on executions aggregating $14,000, held by New York and Philadelphia parties.

The United States training ships, Jamestown and Portsmouth, have sailed from Newport, R. I., for Norfolk, Va., to prepare for the annual winter cruise to the West Indies. They took a large detachment of boys from the training station.

A short time ago thieves entered the store of Benj. H. Huber, postmaster at Huber's, Pa., and he arranged a string gun to shoot them should they return. Early in the morning he was found shot dead in the store. The gun was found discharged and Huber is believed to have shot himself while setting the gun.

One of the finest veins of coking coal yet discovered has been found in southeastern Virginia, measuring 23 feet in thickness, with two feet of slate. It belongs to the Flat Top, or Pocahontas field, which has been partially developed in the last few years and became so universally known for its coke and steaming qualities.

A dispatch from Irwin, Pa., says the party of Slavonian miners who were run into by the Union express, while on their way to the Westmoreland Coal Company's mine, were Joseph Debosh, aged 54; Michael Guldas, aged 29. A girl was thrown down the bank but escaped without serious injury. The men had been working here about a week.

ALL ONE WAY.

CONG. GEISSENHAINER, SENATOR MARSH, SHERIFF HICKS.

RANKIN BURIED UNDER A THOUSAND MAJORITY.

The People Choose Democrats Only—Reed Couldn't Carry His Own Town of North Plainfield, and Rankin's Majority in this City Only 111 Out of a Possible 400.

The Ballot-Reform law worked splendidly in Plainfield, yesterday, as it also did in other sections of the county. There was a total absence of the crowds of healers, strikers and ward workers that formerly swarmed around the polling-booths and made things decidedly uncomfortable for the voter who wanted to deposit his ballot and go about his business, and who had to run the gauntlet of these political vultures who could pounce upon and buttonhole him right and left. These men's occupation is gone, and they where conspicuous by their absence.

The voting was quiet but it got there just the same. The natural Republican majority of over 400 was cut down in the case of Rankin, to 133. The latter's cowardly position in relation to the licensing of race track gamblers, turned many honorable Republicans against him.

Over the brook the Republican majority was wiped out together, and Reed failed to carry his own town although politically in his favor. The daily organ of the Republicans there helped defeat him because of its advocacy, and his many mistaken methods of personal warfare against his opponent, were of no effect except to make Keys's election surer.

But few Republicans could be found this morning who had anything to say concerning the overwhelming defeat of their party throughout the country, but they all recognize it was a result of monkeying with the tariff. The infamous McKinley bill did it. The people would not stand the jobbery and robbery of it any longer. Of the Republicans who had anything to say, were Freeholder Vanderbeek who said, "Its an off year!" James C. Pope thought the result was "Because THE PRESS turned on the light." Gep Frazee said, "If a few more ministers would take a hand in, and the Mills meetings continue, Plainfield would go Democratic by 500 majority."

Even Elizabeth jumped on Rankin, her "Popular Mayor." He is buried under a majority of over a thousand. The majorities of Congressman Geissenhainer and Sheriff Hicks are about the same.

In Somerset county also the Democrats elected the entire ticket. Keys majority for Senator is 386; Bergen for Assembly, 440; and Vanderveer for County Clerk, 282.

The Democratic victory in the State is complete. For the first time in years the Democrats have control of the State Senate, and they have increased their majority in the Assembly. The returns from a few election precincts are still missing, but it is not likely that they will change the result as announced below.

The Senators elected are Maurice A. Rogers, (Rep.) in Camden county, Michael T. Barrett, (Dem.) in Essex, Joseph B. Roe, (Rep.) in Gloucester, Thomas S. Brown, (Dem.) in Monmouth, R. T. Starr, (Rep.) in Salem, William J. Keys, (Dem.) in Somerset, Frederick C. Marsh, (Dem.) in Union, and Johnston Cornish, (Dem.) in Warren. The Senate last year stood ten Republicans to ten Democrats and an Independent Democrat, who would probably this year have voted with the Republicans.

WESTFIELD.

This township gave Senator Marsh (Dem.) 53 majority, against Miller (Rep) 217 majority two years ago. Clark (Rep.) for Congress, 16 majority; Clark (Rep.) for Sheriff, 14; Kyte (Rep.) Assembly, 6.

LATER.

Marsh's majority in the County, it is now estimated, will be 1 400. Miller (Rep.) who Marsh succeeds, was elected by a majority of 317.

TWO MORE DEMOCRATIC SENATORS.

Latest returns are to the effect that Democratic Senators are elected in Camden and Gloucester counties.

Their Routine Relieved With Repartee.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Education, Monday evening, Principal Bulkley reported the amount of tuition from non-resident pupils, for the first quarter of the term, was $487.80. The receipts of taxes for September and October were $2,673.27.

The resignations of Miss Stout and Miss Gilbert, already told of exclusively in THE PRESS, were discussed with a sincere appreciation of their loss. The Board decided to meet on Monday evening the 17th inst., and consider the question of enlarging the Bryant school so that the scholars might be brought down from the third story of the Franklin. Otherwise the Board must obey the State law requiring fire escapes where there are class rooms above the second story.

Trustee Probasco reported that two tons of coal had been stolen away from Irving school the other night. The thieves had crawled in a window, carried the coal out the front door and carted it away in a wagon. He also said a load of lumber had been stolen from the same neighborhood where the new Methodist chapel was building. President Kirkner said: "There's a chance for you to do some home missionary work, Dr. Hurlbut, instead of going to foreign shores." Trustee Hurlbut replied: "That's what we are building a chapel there for." President Kirkner exclaimed: "You won't build much of a chapel if they steal all your lumber."

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Henrietta Coats, of Dubuque, is the guest of Miss Emerson, of Central avenue.

John A. Demorest, recently principal of the Westfield public school, recives a salary of $1,950 in his charge in Jersey City.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills, the noted evangelist, and L. B. Greenwood, the sweet singer, are guests at Miller's Hotel. They are accompanied by Mrs. Mills.

Bring Your Broom.

The Democrats will have a grand celebration, this evening, over the victory of their party's principles. The parade will form in front of THE PRESS office, and everybody is requested to bring his broom. The band and the cannon will go along.

$1,000 Fire at Westfield.

Fire broke out in the kitchen of the dwelling apartments over Dr. Gale's drug store at Westfield this morning and caused $1,000 damages, fully insured. The firemen did good work.

—The dead body of Salvador Vigura, an Italian, was found in a gulch at Bedminster, near Somerville, yesterday. It had been there apparently about three weeks. A fellow workman has been arrested on the charge of having murdered him. The object of the supposed murder was to get $120 which Vigura had.

—The prize watch which hung in the window of Rogers Bros' shoe store ran 36 hours, 13 minutes and 50 seconds. Fred. Koechli, of Somerset street, and Chas. Davis, of Park avenue, both guessed within 20 seconds of the time. They being nearest correct and both the same, Rogers Bros' gave one the watch and the other the worth of it in shoes.

BEGINNING THE GREAT REVIVAL.

Great Interest Aroused by the Preaching of B. Fay Mills.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills, evangelist, is now fully engaged in the great revival work in Plainfield for which the Christian people of the city have been so earnestly preparing, and from which they expect, in answer to their prayers, exceeding great results.

The special evening services were begun in the First Baptist church Monday, under the most favorable circumstances. The spacious building was filled, there was a large chorus choir in attendance, the ministers of every church gave testimony, by their presence, of their approval in the work, and there was every evidence of intense interest in the opening of this great religious crusade.

In appearance Mr. Mills is a very young man, but he talks like a man with a thoroughly matured mind. He has reason for the faith that is in him, and knows how to impress his reasoning home to the minds of his hearers.

At Monday night's meeting the Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, presided and made appropriate remarks. The opening prayer was by the Rev. C. B. Mitchell, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. After singing by the choir and a solo by Mr. L. B. Greenwood, who is the evangelist's singing companion, Mr. Mills read, and explained in a clear, interesting manner, the Psalm CXXVI after which he gave a very powerful discussion of the text "But first gave their own selves to the Lord," from the eighth chapter of II Corinthians, a part of the fifth verse. He urged on such of his hearers as were not already professing Christians the necessity for a reconsecration, and from his remarks the exercises took the nature of a consecration service. Mr. Mills' own re-consecration of himself was one of the most touching scenes ever witnessed in a Plainfield pulpit. The service throughout was very impressive, and the action of the hearers gave indication that the benefits of the work were already spreading.

The first woman's prayer meeting was held in the Trinity Reformed church Monday afternoon. Mrs. J. C. Fervald was the leader. The attendance was large, and a deep spiritual interest was manifested. Owing to Mr Mills not being able to be present the first general afternoon meeting was not held Monday, but Tuesday, when large numbers flocked to hear the famous preacher.

The business men's meeting of Monday was held in the Young Men's Christian Association rooms at 7:30 in the morning and was led by William D. Murray. The subject was: "First gave their own selves." Tuesday morning's business men's meeting was led by A. C. LaBoytaux. Subject—"Compel them to come in." At the woman's prayer meeting in the afternoon the same topic was used. This morning's service was led by Seely Edsall. Subject—"God's Love." At all of these services there was a large attendance, and great religious fervor seemed to prevail.

At last night's meeting every seat was occupied, and many stood along the side walls. Prayer was offered by the Rev. C. L. Goodrich. A powerful sermon was preached by Mr. Mills on "What do ye more than others?"—Matthew v—part of 47th verse. The choir, led by Mr. Greenwood, gave splendid music. After the sermon Mr. Mills invited all Christians who wanted to consecrate themselves to the Lord to meet in the lecture room. The room was well filled, and a true spirit of consecration prevailed. Four persons who were not professing Christians, were in the audience, and stood up and signified their desire to begin the Christian life.

Summit's Republican Candidate Arrested for Bribery.

The political sensation of the day in this county yesterday was the arrest at Summit of Stephen R. Mullen, Republican candidate for member of Assembly in the Second District, on a charge of bribery. The arrest was made at the instance of William J. Curtis, a strong supporter of Thomas F. Lane, the Democratic candidate. Curtis says Mullen gave him money on condition that he would vote the Republican ticket. Prosecutor Wilson was telegraphed for at Elizabeth to go at once to Summit, but he was unable to do so and telephoned to admit the prisoner to bail pending a hearing this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mullen was accordingly taken before Justice Kelly, who fixed bail at $500.

—The Elizabeth Wheelmen had a fine run over the new county roads Tuesday, and took dinner in Plainfield. Other cycling parties, including a number of ladies, also visited the Crescent City, and added to the gaiety of the streets. A great many pleasure-parties trotted their horses along Plainfield's superb driveways and the lively election coach was constantly darting about in every direction.

—The new "East Lynne" in which Miss Ada Gray is the central figure, was produced at Amphion Hall, Monday evening, to a large audience. Miss Gray's conception of the character of Lady Isabel is marked by a delicate apprehension of its peculiar quality. She is an actress of many years' experience and lights up the character with the fire of genius. To-night is her last appearance.

DEALING WITH THE CRIMINAL CLASSES.

The Design of the Union County Branch of the State Charities Aid Association of New Jersey.

The regular meeting of the Union County Branch of the State Charities Aid Association will be held in the Young Men's Christian Association parlor on Monday, Nov. 10, at 9:15 P. M.

The design of this Association is to consider the great questions that relate to the dependent and criminal classes of society in this State and practically to put in execution the best methods for dealing with these classes and for diminishing their number. While the State is asked to be a contributor to a work which so greatly concerns it, experience has shown that there is more of purity and sincerity of effort and more of unselfish Christian devotion by the improvement of these unfortunate classes when chief reliance is placed on voluntary organization and co-operation. The method of the work is as follows: The State Charities Aid Association forms a Central Bureau to collect and impart information and to give general direction to the work. It is sought to form auxiliary branches in the counties to execute the home work needing to be done. Power is secured from the Legislature to have the Supreme Court appoint visitors, who shall inquire into the structural condition and modes of management of insitutions, and into the needs of their inmates.

The regular meetings of the Union County Branch have heretofore been held at Elizabeth, but it has been thought desirable to hold a meeting in this place on the 10th inst., for the convenience of Plainfield members and to make the objects of the Society more generally known.

The officers of the Union County Branch are as follows:

President—The Rev. Everard Kempshall, of Elizabeth.

Vice President—The Rev. F. Marion McAllister, of Elizabeth.

Secretary—Howard Richards, of Elizabeth.

Treasurer—Mrs. J. K. Myers, of Plainfield.

Can A Man Swallow A Cannon Ball?

Well, "that depends." He can if his throat is large enough and the cannon-ball not too large. The question really seems worthy of some consideration in view of the size of some of the pills that are prescribed for suffering humanity. Why not throw them "to the dogs," and take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets? Small, sugar-coated, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, in glass, and always fresh.

WATER-WORKS UNDER THEIR THUMB.

Plainfield Councilmen Crush the Supply Company's Defiant Independence, and Dictate What It Shall and Shall Not Do—Not a Spadeful of Earth to be Turned on the Streets Till the Council Says So—The Old Contract, or a Better One, Must be Fulfilled—Any New Contract Must Give a Sewerage System Too—An Electric Street Railway Assured—The Freight House Still a Fixture—Other Municipal Matters Acted on.

That the Plainfield Common Council is getting the Plainfield Water Supply Company entirely under its thumb is evidenced by the action taken in water-works matters at the regular November session of the Council Monday night.

Ever since the Plainfield Water Supply Company obtained control of the Water-Works Company of Plainfield the Supply people have taken a highly independent course. Their idea seemed to be that the Council would readily grant to them all the privileges they might ask, and they gave evidence of considerable surprise when they found that the City Fathers were opposed to the ideas they presented. Finding that the Council was determined to have the original contract with the Water-Works Company—or one very like it—fulfilled strictly in every particular, and that it was decidedly opposed to the mutilations of the contract which were proposed—mutilations which the Councilmen thought would be detrimental to the interests of the people—the Supply Company announced that they would proceed under their original charter of years and years ago, would at once begin to construct Water-Works according to its own ideas, and would operate them in accordance with its own plans, whether the Council consented or objected. This defiant assertion was issued through an irresponsible source, and THE PRESS promptly published the following:

The moment the Water Supply Company put a pick or spade in the street, Chairman Smith of the Street Committee will stop them. They must have the Council's permission when they go so far.

That THE PRESS was again right is now officially declared by the Common Council. At the Monday night session Councilman Newhall, chairman of the Water Board, in the laudable desire to establish more firmly the city's power to do just what THE PRESS said would be done, presented an iron-clad ordinance which effectually prohibits the Water Supply Company, and everybody else, from laying pipes, whether for water, gas, or what not, along the public streets, and from digging up the streets for the purpose of laying pipes, without the consent of the Common Council. Under this ordinance the Council strengthens the supreme right which it already possesses of saying just where and how pipes may be laid, and anyone, whether person or corporation, who lays any pipes, or digs up the streets for laying them, without first securing from the Council the necessary consent and the required designation of what streets may be used and how the pipes shall be laid, must pay various fines of $100, must instantly restore the disturbed thoroughfares to their former condition, and must heed the further provision compelling him to contribute to the city treasurer the sum of $20 for every day he neglects to take up his pipes and put the streets again in order. The ordinance of course contains its own provision that it shall not tend to prevent the repairing, and the tearing up of streets to repair, gas and other mains already laid.

But besides establishing the prerogative of the Council to protect the city's streets against the encroachments of designing people, the proposed ordinance goes a step further in bringing the Water Supply Company to terms.

No one—it says—may construct and operate in Plainfield a system of water-works without at the same time providing an adequate system of sewerage to carry off waste water and other sewage refuse from the waste pipes of its water-works system. But—it adds—and herein lies a power for compelling the Water Supply Company to adopt in its entirety the old Water-Works Company's contract, or one as advantageous to the city—this shall not interfere in any way with the fulfilling of the contract already granted to the Water-Works Company of Plainfield.

This ordinance seemed to meet with the approval of every Councilman who heard it on its first reading. Councilman Smith, Chairman of the Street Committee, who anticipates being in the thick of the promised fight for the possession of the city's streets, suggested that instead of $100 fines $5,000 ones ought to be provided—an opinion in which Councilman Spangenberg heartily concurred. Mr. Newhall said that as he had prepared the ordinance very hastily he desired it referred to Corporation Counsel Marsh for his advice and revision, and this was done.

In the matter of giving Plainfield a street railway the Council took a big stride forward by adopting a resolution which calls for decisive action where has been so much inactivity. The resolution was one introduced by Mr. Spangenberg. It announces point-blank that in the opinion of the Common Council an electric street railway ought to be established in Plainfield at the earliest practicable moment, and provides for the publication, at once, in The Electrical World, of an advertisement soliciting engineers to submit to the city propositions for the establishment of an electric railway system and the organization of a company to operate it. Reports on this matter must all be in hand by Nov. 24, and the Council may be trusted to give the people rapid transit as soon after the bids have been examined as is consistent with good judgment and management.

But though the street car cometh the freight house moveth not. That nuisance we have ever with us. Too many blessings at once would bewilder the long-suffering people. The special committee appointed from the Council to confer with the Central Railroad Company on this subject reported, through its chairman, Mr. Newhall, that the Company had given the committee polite attention at several conferences, and had at length decided that it could do nothing definite this season. At an early time next year, however, Mr. Newhall said, the Company would, it promised, look into the matter. Various papers connected with the case were therefore given to the City Clerk to be referred to the Council of '91 and to be brought up by that body at the first February meeting, and the committee was discharged from further service, after placing on record the fact that they had submitted to the Company a number of petitions from the citizens of Plainfield asking for the removal of the freight house to a less objectionable quarter.

Among the various routine matters that came before the Council for action was the application of Austin B. Fletcher and others for a franchise to construct and operate a water-works system in Plainfield. This was filed for future reference.

The request of Gazelle Engine Company, No. 1, to take its apparatus from Plainfield Thursday, Nov. 6, to participate in the firemen's parade at Westfield, was granted.

The ninth report of progress of supervising engineer Rudolph Hering was filed. It presented a review of the work done towards the construction of water-works, and submitted various maps and papers which may be useful in the future in completing the work.

To place the fact on official record that he was pecuniarily concerned in the affairs of the Water-Works Company of Plainfield, Wm. D. Hill, legal adviser of Contractor Moore, wrote, from 52 Wall street, that he had an interest of $15,000 in the bonds and capital stock of the concern. This communication too was filed.

The fact that the members of the police force needed new suits of clothes was reported by Mr. Spangenberg, who presented a resolution providing for the expenditure of $175 for new garments. A difficulty arose, however, in the announcement that the balance left of the appropriation for police expenses was very low, and where the money for the clothes was to come from was not quite clear. The suggestion of Councilman Dunham, that the fines collected from coming arrests be utilized for the purchase, and his comment that the police would, with this personal-improvement object as an inspiration, put forth renewed zeal, secure many prisoners, and soon earn in this way the money for their suits of blue and gold, was not given the cordial reception which its brilliancy deserved, and Mr. Dunham sank back into his chair to commune with his perennial, bland, cherubic smile, while a boy on the street whistled that Tony Pastor idyll resurrected successfully by Evans & Hoey in "The Parlor Match," this season, and entitled "They're After Me!" It was finally decided that the clothes must be bought, and that they would be paid for by an extra appropriation.

That the city is covetous of the money pain annually by Plainfield's one pawnbroker to the Union County Courts for a license seemed quite clear when Mr. Spangenberg introduced an ordinance providing that no one should conduct a pawnbroking establishment in town without the consent of the Mayor and Council and without paying to the city an annual license fee of $50. The ordinance further provided that each local pawnbroker must give the city a bond for $2,000 as a guarantee that he would conduct his establishment according to law. The ordinance was adopted on its first and second readings and was ordered engrossed and advertised.

During the evening the fact transpired that the appropriation for street lights was practically exhausted, and that therefore no more new lamps may be placed in position this year.

It was reported that a new street-lighting contract with the Plainfield Electric Light Company had been made, as authorized at the previous meeting of the Council, and that the bond of the Company had been increased from $1,000 to $10,000.

The sum of $126.50—the balance of the $200 given to Tunis J. Carey, ex-Captain of Police, for use in the detection and prosecution of illegal liquor-selling—was placed at the disposition of Captain Grant for the same purpose.

On motion of Mr. Newhall the City Treasurer was authorized to borrow $3,500, in anticipation of taxes, for the use of the general fund, and to renew a $500 note which the poor fund would soon have due.

Edward F. Schirmer and Frank Conde were appointed special policemen.

Those present at the meeting were Councilmen Dunham, Gallup, Hetfield, Jenkins, Johnston, Newhall, Roberts, Smith and Spangenberg. Mt. Hetfield presided. The session was very harmonious.

THE GROWTH OF GRACE.

The Rev. Dr. Rodman's Review of the Twenty Years of His Rectorship.

Sunday morning last, before a large congregation in Grace Episcopal church, the rector, the Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, D. D., delivered a sermon from the text—"A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation. I, the Lord, will hasten it in His time."—Isaiah LX, 22. It was the twentieth anniversary of Mr. Rodman's rectorship. He closed his most eloquent sermon as follows:

"I am glad that we have a grand and inspiring object to look forward to, today, in the advance step which has been taken towards the erection of our new church It is always somewhat depressing to take reviews of the past, for although we may find much to be thankful for we must take account also of many shortcomings and failures, of opportunities lost and mistakes made. Therefore let us keep these two things in mind—the retrospect and the prospect, I feel honored in having my 20th anniversary of rectorship thus associated with this forward movement.

"And it is our privilege, today, to take note of the growth of two decades, on this celebration of my vicennial anniversary. When I came here in 1870, I found 71 families and 136 communicants.

"I can count but 17 out of those 71 families who are with us today. There are now 131 families in the parish, and 358 communicants. Two hundred and twenty-one (221) persons have been confirmed; 516 have been received from other parishes; 326 have removed; and 68 have died. There have been 283 baptisms: infants, 254; adults, 29. There have been solemnized 106 marriages and 149 funerals. Divine service has been held 4,167 times. The Holy Communion has been celebrated on 701 days in the church, and on 172 occasions in private with the sick.

"The contributions of the congregation have amounted to $135,000 for all purposes, or an annual average of $6,750.

"And now let me ask you, for a few moments, to enlarge your view, and observe the growth of the church in the Diocese and in the State. The year 1870 was four years before the division of the Diocese was effected. There were then in the Diocese of New Jersey, which comprised the State, 122 clergymen. There are now in this Diocese 108, and in that of Newark 174. Twenty years ago there were 11,500 communicants in both; now in this there are 12,549, and in Newark 15,417.

"The contributions in both were in 1870 $432,000 in round numbers; the last journals give $228,000 as the amount contributed by this Diocese, and $362,000 as that of Newark. The number of parishes and missions in the undivided diocese were 118. Now in this there are 123, and in that 80, or 203 in both. And if it is asked again, for the last time, why, amid all this growth and enlargement, has not this parish built a church, more in harmony with its numbers and means; why has it no Sunday school building, in which that most important part of the church's work can be thoroughly and efficiently conducted, and without which it cannot be done; why has it no rectory?—I believe the answer will be found in the figures which I have given you, in the column which indicates the removals of parishioners, and in that containing the contributions of the congregation. I find that we have given to the missionary work of the church, during the past twenty years, within a fraction of $10,000, or an annual average of $500, and while I would not begrudge one penny of the sum which has thus been sent to help the propagation of the Gospel and the church of our Lord Jesus Christ, and while we may justly be proud of a record that shows that we have been more mindful of the wants of others than of our own, a record that is, so far as I know, without a parallel, I cannot help thinking on the review that possibly the fact is more creditable to our hearts than to our heads. For it will not be denied that if we had had a larger and better equipped establishment we would become stronger and more able to give to all the branches of the church's missionary and benevolent work. And therefore I rejoice with exceeding great joy that today marks a great and grand onward step towards the attainment of that which has so long been in the minds and hearts of many of us, in the erection of a church to the honor and glory of God and for the benefit of our fellow men.

"And one great advantage that will result from the accomplishment of this holy purpose will be that then this house, which we all love so much, can be arranged for the purposes of the Sunday school, as no church building can be, or should be.

"When this end is reached I believe a mighty impulse will be given to all our work. I beg those who have so long and patiently, under many disadvantages, engaged in this work, to be patient a little longer, and to believe that, in God's own time, which is the best time, all this good work will be accomplished."

A Crane that Picks up Many Tons with Ease.

The powerful new electric crane at the Pond Machine Tool Works was tested Monday, and was found to be capable of lifting and handling with ease twenty tons and three hundred-weight. This tremendous chain broke several large chains, but the chain gave evidence of possessing backbone for even a much larger load.

—Snow fell in Plainfield early Tuesday morning—not enough to make good sleighing, but still sufficient to remind one that Winter is at hand.

CAN DEFEAT ANY WESTFIELD TEAM.

But Imported Heavy-Weights Who Can't Kick a Goal, Push Plainfield Players Off the Field.

The game of foot-ball played by the team from the Plainfield Bicycle club at Westfield Tuesday morning, resulted in defeat for the Plainfielders by a score of 8 to 0.

The Bicycle boys lined up as follows: R. F. Murray, left end; R. W. Erickson, left tackle; F. W. Walz, left guard; L. Mack, centre; M. S. Ackerman, right guard; A. A. Tilney, right tackle; E. L. Walz, right end; H. Beebe, quarter-back; E. Tracy, (Captain), and Wyckoff, half-backs; A. Cox, full back.

Just who the Westfield players were no one seems to know, but the fact is patent that they were not Westfielders. They were imported from New York, Brooklyn and other places to counteract the strong scientific points which it was known the Plainfielders were masters of.

The game was called at 10:20, with Westfield in possession of the ball. After two or three beautiful tackles by the Plainfield end rushers the Westfield men saw that they must give up trying to play a scientific game and trust to enormous weight, but by wonderful blocking the Plainfield team held the heavy-weights of Westfield from pushing forward, and finally secured the ball.

Two or three runs by Plainfield brought the ball close to Westfield's goal line, only to be lost again to Westfield. When the ball was put in play Tracy secured the ball and made what Plainfield claimed was a touch-down, running the whole length of the field; but on some technicality the referee would not allow it to be scored. After taking the ball back, it was again snapped back by Westfield on their 25-yard line, and by mere weight they gradually forced the ball to the middle of the field.

Plainfield again secured the ball, and by the runs of Wyckoff and Tracy the ball was again in Westfield's territory, where it stayed until the end of the first hold.

After ten minutes rest the teams exchanged, and play was resumed with Plainfield in possession of the ball. Fine blocking on the Plainfield rush-line assisted the half-backs in making some fine runs, bringing the ball up to Westfield's 25-yard line. Here occurred the only accident of the game, E. L. Walz, Plainfield's right end, sprained his ankle. His place was taken by Bowman.

The Westfield's got the ball and again began their pushing game, when the spectators cried "Play foot-ball!" "You daren't try to run with it!"

The weight of the Westfield rush-line here told on the Plainfield line, for after about twenty attempts the Westfield team scored the first touch-down. The Westfield's tried for goal but failed. Score—4 to 0.

The ball was again put in play on the Plainfield's 25-yard line, and by good blocking and kicking by Cox the ball was again in the middle of the field, then the Westfield's line began pushing (not playing) and their sheer weight again forced the ball over the Plainfield's goal line, and scored another touch down for Westfield. The try for a goal again failed. Score—8 to 0.

Plainfield again put the ball in play on their 25-yard line. By good blocking, and passing and running, they carried the ball to the middle of the field, where it stayed until time was called, with the score 8 to 0 in favor of Westfield.

For Plainfield, Wyckoff, Tracy, Walz, Murray, Cox and Tilney showed up in good form, while the centre guards and tackles did the heaviest part of the work.

The Westfield team was made up of old college players while only one man on the team has the honor to live in Westfield. Dart, the Westfield centre rush, weighed 250 pounds while the whole team out weighed the Plainfield team on an average of 25 pounds to the man.

As far as playing goes the Plainfield team out-played the Westfield team in every point except pushing.

After the game the Bi-Club boys were most royally entertained by the generous President of the Westfield Athletic Club, A. A. Drake, at his home. The Plainfield boys told the Westfielders that they could defeat with ease any eleven men actually residents in Westfield, at genuine foot-ball, and the Westfield people didn't dare deny it.

Mr. Coddington was referee of the game and J. W. Sanford was umpire.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

PENNYROYAL.

Amid the web-wrapped meadow-land there passes
A child for some late butterfly achase,
And as she treadeth down the seared grasses
A shy wild odor rises in their place.

The magic of this odor swift enfolding
A passer-by whose feet have chanced to stay
Until, the meadow-lands no more beholding,
Back through the vanished years he takes his way,

And stands once more in sweet, forgotten places,
And hears the voices silent long ago;
While in the low-roofed house he sees dear faces
As in those other days, flit to and fro.

He hears again the rush of children's laughter
Throughout the cobwebbed garret surge and ring;
He sees again from down far-reaching rafters
Bunches of pennyroyal sway and swing.

A moment only and the sweet dream passes,
The child and butterfly flit to and fro,
The shy wild odors from down-trodden grasses
Throughout the autumn morning come and go.

No more swings pennyroyal from low rafters,
Holding sweet peppermints and sage and thyme,
Yet do the garrets with their herbs and laughters
Linger and haunt us like some sweet old rhyme.

A DISTRESSED DAMSEL

My Startling Adventure in the City of Paris.

WAS a medical student in Paris when a strange and startling adventure happened which I am about to record: Tired with hard study, I was out one evening for a walk in the fresh air. It was a pleasant night in mid-winter, and the cold, bracing air, as it touched my feverish brow, caused a grateful sensation. Passing through a lonely street near the river I was surprised at meeting a young and pretty girl—at least she appeared so in the dim light of a distant street lamp—who carried in her hand some three or four bouquets which she offered for sale.

"Will monsieur have a bouquet?" she asked in a sweet, musical tone, holding out to me a well-arranged collection of beautiful flowers.

"They are very pretty," said I, taking them in my hand; and then, somehow, I could not help adding: "and so is their fair owner."

"Monsieur will purchase and assist me," she said.

"Do you, then, really need assistance, mademoiselle?"

"Why else should I be here at this hour of the night, monsieur?"

"And why here at all? This is an unfrequented street—about the last in the world I should have selected for disposing of a luxury most suited to wealth and fashion."

She sighed and reached out her hand for the bouquet I held.

"What is your price?"

"Five francs."

"A large sum."

"Monsieur will remember it is winter and flowers are scarce."

I handed her the requisite silver coin, saying:

"To aid you I will purchase; for though I love flowers, I would not otherwise indulge in the luxury at such an expense."

She thanked me, and seemed about to pass on, but hesitated and said:

"Could monsieur direct me to the house of a good physician who would turn out to-night to see a patient for a small sum?"

"Any friend of yours ill?"

"My mother," with a deep sigh and downcast look.

"I am a medical student, with some experience among the sick of the hospitals. If you care to trust the case to me, I am at your service without charge," I said, feeling already a deep interest in the fair girl.

"Oh, how shall I thank monsieur?" she cried, with clasped hands and an upward, grateful look. "Pray follow me, doctor."

She turned and moved at a rapid pace down the street toward the Seine,

"DO YOU REALLY NEED ASSISTANCE?"

in the direction I was taking when we met.

In less than five minutes we had entered a dreadful quarter, among narrow streets, old buildings, and squalid-looking people, some of whom glared at us as we passed.

We had now reached the foot of the stairs, and my guide pushed open a door into a small, dimly lighted room, and I followed with some misgivings. There was a bed in one corner, and on it appeared to be a human form lying very still.

"I have brought a doctor, mother," said the girl, closing the door.

There was no reply, and she turned to me saying:

"Will you be seated, doctor? I think mother is asleep."

"I have but a few minutes to spare, mademoiselle," said I, shortly.

"Monsieur shall not be detained long by me," rejoined the girl, passing out of the room by another door.

I did not sit down, but walked over to the bed, where the patient was lying very still—so still, indeed, that I could not detect any breathing. A woman's cap was on the head, and the end of a sheet concealed the face. I ventured to turn this down carefully, and beheld the eyeless sockets and grinning teeth of a human skull.

I started back in horror, and at the same moment the door by which the girl had left was thrown open, and in marched one after the other, four tall human figures in black gowns and masks. I knew at once, then, that I was to be robbed, and probably murdered. I wore a heavy diamond pin and ring, carried a valuable gold watch, and had in money about my person some five hundred francs, but not a single weapon of any kind. Resistance being therefore out of the question, I felt that my only chance—if indeed there was a chance—was to conciliate the ruffians and buy myself off. With a presence of mind for which I still take to myself considerable credit, I said at once:

"I understand it all, gentlemen, and you will find me a very liberal person to deal with. There is one thing I value highly, because it is the only one I have, and I can not replace it—that is my life. Every thing else of mine is at your service, even beyond what I have with me."

"Let us first handle what you have here," said the first speaker.

I immediately took out my pin, took off my ring, drew out my watch, produced my pocket-book and purse and placed them all in his extended hand.

"You make me a present of all these now?" he asked.

"Yes, on condition that one of you will forthwith conduct me to the streets," I replied.

At length the principal spokesman turned to me and said, in a very cool and methodical manner:

"Monsieur has acted more like a gentleman than any other person we ever had dealings with, and if we could, consistent with our business, oblige him, we would be happy to do so; but, unfortunately we are governed by a rule, which is a law with us, that 'dead men tell no tales,' and we think it will not do to make an exception in this case. We will, however, in consideration of monsieur's gentlemanly behavior, be as mild and lenient as possible in doing our duty, and grant monsieur five minutes for saying his prayers."

"You have, then, resolved to murder me?" I asked.

"Monsieur uses a very harsh term, but we will let that pass. You will have five minutes yet to live by that watch."

The villain then held my watch to the light, and I felt indeed that the precious minutes of my life were numbered.

A death-like silence then reigned in that gloomy apartment for some time, and then one of the ruffians bent downward and lifted a trap-door and from the dark pit below issued a noisome smell. I beheld my intended grave, and shuddered and shook like an aspen.

But why stand there and die like a dog, without a single attempt at escape? At the worst it could be but death, and there was a bare possibility that I might get away. I fixed my eyes on the door which opened upon the stairway, and with a single sudden bound reached it, but found it fast locked. Then as the hands of the ruffians seized me, with murderous intent, I uttered a wild shriek; the door was burst in with a loud crash, and in a moment the room was filled with gendarmes. I saw that I was saved, and fainted and fell.

The four masks, the fair decoy, and some two or three others concerned in that murderous den were all secured that night, and I subsequently had the pleasure of giving my evidence against them and seeing them all condemned to the galleys for life.

The place had been for some time suspected and the decoy marked. On that night a detective had secretly followed the girl and myself, and, after ascertaining whither she had conducted me, had hastened to bring a body of gendarmes to the place. The delay of the ruffians in their murderous design had been just sufficient to save me. I scarcely need add that I never again volunteered to accompany a distressed damsel on a secret adventure while I remained in Paris.—Chicago News.

Painful Accident.

"M-M-M-Mrs. J-J-Jones," began young Hoober, who stammers when embarrassed, "have y-y-y-you ever b-b-b-been in S-S-S-ain—"

"Sir!" exclaimed the indignant Mrs. Jones.

"H-h-h-ave you ever b-b-b-been in-in-in-in S-S-Sain—in S-S-Sain—have y-y-y-you ever b-b-b-been in Sain—i-i-i-in Sain—"

"How dare you, sir?" almost screamed the offended woman, as she got up and went to the other side of the room.

"Mr. Hoober," said the hostess, shortly afterward, "Mrs. Jones complains that you have been exceedingly rude and impolite."

"I was only trying to ask her, Mrs. Billus," explained the unhappy young man, "if sh-sh-sh-she had ever b-b-been in S-S-S-Saint Louis."—Chicago Tribune.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

MRS. CHANT'S STORY.

How a Successful Temperance Worker Became a Teetotaller.

At the recent anniversary of the Church Temperance Society, in Tremont Temple, Boston, Mrs. Chant made an interesting and effective address. From a report of the meeting in the Christian Register, we take the following:

I was not born a total abstainer. That marvelous noonday light came to me that comes to some of us. It came through a great happiness. And, young women and young men, let God teach you the common lessons of life through your happiness, and don't wait to learn them through great sorrow. I have sometimes thought, if I had not learned the lesson through this joy, that I might have learned it through some bitter pain. It came in this way: I married a total abstainer. He said no word about my joining the movement, but left me to work out my own salvation. One night, after we had been married about three weeks, I had to sit up for him. He had driven into the country in a bitter, blinding winter's storm, and so I sat up through that night waiting for him. It was the first night that I had been alone since we were married; and through the pauses of the wind came the solemn boom of the guns of ships in distress, and I began to partake of the sorrow of those who were watching for the sailors out at sea, and at last I went down to the shore among the women who were waiting for those who were being saved from the wreck and brought to shore in the life-boat. When I came home I thought of all the poor women in England, Scotland and Ireland who were doing what I was doing, and doing it so differently. I was in a beautiful home, with all the comforts of life around me, waiting for my husband with the eagerness of happy love; and they in poverty and hunger, awaiting in some lonely garret the dreaded step on the stairs of a drink-maddened brute, in abject terror for the coming of their husband. And then conscience spoke. What was I doing? He on the safe side; you the unsafe. With two people who love each other well, one of two things would certainly happen—either he would drag me over to his safe side or I would drag him over to my unsafe side. I liked my glass of wine; I loved my husband; which of the two was I to choose between—wine, the thing I liked, or the being I loved? I saw which that night.

And so the next morning there crept a very meek and very humble figure to the old rector in the rectory. I said: "I want to join the Temperance society." He was very wise. I wish more people were wise in such matters. He did not crow over me—no; he held out two hands of welcome, and said: "You don't know how glad we shall be. You will be a great help." Now, although our rector was a stanch teetotaller, he let me choose my own way of coming along. I think he knew the caught Tartar needs skillful handling. So I joined the lazy division of the Church of England Temperance Society, the division of those who merely promise to help, and not to drink alcoholic liquor between meals! You see I had said such bad things about blue-ribboned fanatics I could not belong to them at once, I thought.

Well, the rector set me to work. That is the way to do. Don't give all the work to the ready-made saints; set some of the sinners to work. That is the way to convert them. Well, he set me to work to write a story and read it in a place that had never heard a woman's voice in public. It had seen her act love-parts in a theater, and heard her sing love songs in the concert hall, and it was not ashamed of that; but when it came to think of a woman standing on a platform and speaking words of common sense to the people, it said it would turn the world upside down. I wrote out the brightest story I could think of, wrung out of some former experience. I stood up that night in the mission hall half-full of women with veils on their faces, and at one end some modest men ready to run if they could not bear the dreadful immodesty of the thing. Instead of running, however, they staid to the end; and afterward I was invited to read another story.

The next time was my baptism. Down in front there sat a poor, weather-beaten fellow, and they said: "If you can only get that man! He is the worst drunkard in the place." So into that story I put a great deal that was especially for his good. I did not talk at him, but I read at him. After the meeting was over, I went down to try and coax him to come to the pledge table. I brought him to the table, and I smoothed out the book. This was my first convert. How delightful it was! Just as he was going to sign his name, he turned round and asked one very simple but awkward question. "I guess you have done it yourself, missis?" he said. I gave a very awkward answer. Pity my bad taste. I told him, with a little shrug of my shoulders, that it was not necessary for me to sign it—the total abstinence pledge—but that it was the only thing that would save him. He slammed the pen down and went down the hall, saying: "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander; and what is good for you is good for me, I reckon." Then I had an inward fight to fight—one of those battles that no one knows but God and yourself; but you are ten years older when you have fought it, whether you lose or conquer. I was quite ten years older when I went down the hall and laid my hand on his arm, and said: "Perhaps it is you that are to save me. I will take the pledge first, and you shall take it after me." And so the happy, affectionate woman, who had never been drunk in her life, and the hard, weather-beaten man, who had been drunk nearly every day, stood there together; and there the baptismal service was performed by that drunkard for the sober woman rather than by the sober woman for the drunkard. And the lesson I learned that night was this: that whatever you want others to do you must do yourself before you ask them to do it.

WONDERS IN PLANT LIFE.

A SIX-POUND bunch of grapes was picked from a vine at Stockton, Cal., recently.

A MISSOURI peach has been found that measured eleven and one-half inches and weighed thirteen and one-quarter ounces.

A FIR tree was cut in Washington State that scaled twenty thousand five hundred feet. The top log was not counted.

THE old leaves on a horse chestnut tree at Harrisburg have disappeared and new blossoms have appeared.

A SNAKE cucumber seven feet long and resembling a hideous green snake coiled, is one of the curiosities of Los Angeles, Cal.

H. R. GREGORY, of Independence, Mo., has a flower stalk fifteen feet nine inches in height and has two hundred and sixty-six blossoms. This is supposed to be a world-beater.

THERE is in the yard of Samuel Owens at Whittier, Cal., an acacia tree that visitors are never tired of admiring. It has grown from a seed planted two years ago last April, and is thirty-two feet high. Its trunk, a foot above the ground, is twelve inches in diameter, while the branches are sixteen feet in diameter.

A LOS ANGELES paper describes a tomato tree growing in that city. It is a native of Guatemala, and the fruit grows in clusters, the tomatoes being smooth and perfectly oval in shape. They are first green, and then they turn yellow and are a glowing red when ripe. They taste very much like the ordinary tomato.

THE largest apple tree in New England stands before the door of Mr. Delos Hotchkiss' residence, in Cheshire, Conn. It has eight large branches, three of which usually bear one year, and five the next. The average yield is eighty-five bushels, although it has been as high as one hundred and ten bushels. The tree is one hundred and forty years old. The circumference of the trunk, one foot above the ground, is thirteen feet eight inches, and the height is sixty feet.

OF the many curious trees in different parts of the world, the bottle of Australia is especially interesting. It has a singularly enlarged trunk. Where the ground is sterile and rocky the enlargement is directly under the division of the branches; but in rich soil the development is symmetrical and of great size. With the limbs removed the trunk serves as an admirable cask. At a short distance the branches have the appearance of issuing from a mammoth vase or bottle. The leaves are narrow and digitate, and grow in profusion.

RULES FOR RENOVATION.

IT is said that ripe tomatoes will remove ink stains from white clothes, as well as from the hands.

SOFT soap, two quarts to the tub, makes good lather for the first rubbing of all white cottons and linens.

ALL who are possessed of fine tortoise-shell ornaments or combs will be glad to know that they can be easily cleaned and polished by dipping them first in spirits of wine and rubbing them thoroughly, polishing them afterward with a little bismuth applied with a chamois skin.

TO RENEW velvet hold it over boiling water, with the wrong side next the water, and that will raise the pile. If very badly crushed, wet it on the wrong side, and let some one hold a hot iron upside down; pass the velvet slowly over this, and the pile will rise; then dry it without any handling.

WHEN a grease spot has dried into silk or woolen goods, the application of French chalk needs to be assisted somewhat. Sift the chalk over the spot and lay a bit of blotting-paper over, then apply a warm iron to the blotting-paper. Sometimes the blotting-paper alone will be sufficient to absorb the grease, under heat, without the chalk. Do not have the iron hot enough to scorch the material.

THIS is the way furs are cleaned in that land of furs, Russia: Rye flour is placed in a pot and heated upon a stove, with constant stirring as long as the hand can bear the heat. The flour is then spread over the fur and rubbed into it. After this the fur is brushed with a very clean brush, or, better, is gently beaten until all the flour is removed. The fur thus treated resumes its natural luster and appears as if absolutely new.

WINE stains on linen should be washed out in cold water mixed with a few drops of ammonia and spirits of wine. If, unfortunately, the cloth has been wetted before the stains are discovered, wet the stain on each side with yellow soap and lay on it some thickly-made starch. Rub well and expose to the sun until the satin vanishes. Sometimes, when space is available, the linen is laid on the grass and salt is substituted for the starch, when the stain disappear in two or three hours.

SUGGESTIONS FOR STOCKMEN.

THE best stock raisers are now trying to grow meat instead of to accumulate fat.

TO KEEP more stock than you can feed liberally is to simply starve the whole gradually. It does not pay to attempt to do more than your limit allows to be done well.

BE sure, when purchasing an animal, that it is free from any disease, and that it does not come from a section where disease has prevailed. It is an easy matter to bring disease into a flock or herd.

KICKERS among colts and calves are usually bred, not born. Handle them gently and kindly and kickers will be rare. Teasing by heedless boys and hired men originates most of the farm kickers.

THE common disease of the feet of cattle known as "foot-ail" is caused by neglect to keep the feet clean. Filth and sand getting between the claws of the hoof soften, irritate and grind down the skin, which becomes sore and then ulcerates under the constant irritation. A cure is easily made by washing the feet clean, keeping them clean, and applying healing applications.

"OH, IF MOTHER WERE ONLY ALIVE!"

All through life she has known a mother's watchful care. She now is a young mother, and gains strength but slowly. She would "give worlds" to do everything for her precious baby, but cannot; the doctor is so strict, and does not sympathize with her, "as mother always did."

That baby has unfolded in the young mother's heart, new emotions. She has a living responsibility, and requires strength to enable her to perform a loving duty. At such a time, too much care cannot be taken, and the Vegetable Compound is indispensable.

THE LATEST FIGURES

The Contest Still Undecided in Several States.

VERY CLOSE IN CONNECTICUT.

It is Probable that the Legislature Will Elect New Hampshire's Governor.

McKinley and Cannon Defeated—Pattison's Plurality in Pennsylvania Estimated at 10,000—A Surprise in Kansas and Senator Ingalls in Danger—Peck Receives Over 30,000 Majority.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Several politicians from nearby States are at the Hoffman House and Fifth Avenue Hotel to-day, and the general discussion is the result of Tuesday's election.

Returns from close Congressional districts and Connecticut and New Hampshire are eagerly looked for, and the contest for the control of the New York Legislature is becoming interesting, as the result may give the Democrats a United States Senator.

THE NEW YORK FIGHT,

Both Parties Claim the Legislature on Joint Ballot.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 6.—A strange and unexpected thing has happened. From the most accurate figures at hand it seems probable that the Legislature will be a tie on joint ballot.

All day the returns have been changing fitfully in the outlying Assembly districts. This morning it seemed that the House was Democratic by a safe majority. Now the leaders of both parties here claim it.

Rumors of attempts at counting out in close districts are already afloat on both sides. The Republicans say the rumor was started from the Executive Chamber, and that Mase of the 1st Dutchess District ard Rose of Sullivan are marked as victims.

The Democrats allege that ex-Senator Platt has sent out orders to contest all close districts, and that the 4th, of Albany County, is one of those in danger.

In the Executive Chamber Governor Hill sits watching the results announced with a critical eye. Before him lies constantly a carefully prepared table on which is noted every change and rumor in connection with the Assembly. This table indicates that the next House will probably contain 61 Republicans and 67 Democratic members. But the Governor's private dispatches hint that the result is not yet settled.

PATTISON'S PLURALITY.

The Latest Returns from Pennsylvania Give Him 10,000.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 6.—Complete returns give Pattison, Dem., for Governor, 10,000 net plurality over Delamater, Rep. Watres, the Republican candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, and Stewart, Republican candidate for Secretary of Internal Affairs are elected, notwithstanding the defeat of the head of the ticket.

In the Third Congressional district McAleer, the regular Democratic nominee, is elected over Vaux, Independent Democrat and Republican, by nearly 3,000 majority.

The city of Philadelphia, with every precinct heard from, gives Delamater Rep., 21,276 majority, a democratic gain of 4,409.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 6.—The Legislative and County Republican tickets are both elected by the usual majority. In the 22d Congressional district Dalzell's majority will be 6,000. Two years ago Dalzell's majority was 9,643.

The latest returns from the 28 Congressional districts of the State show the election of 18 Republicans and 10 Democrats. The present delegation from this State stands 21 Republicans and seven Democrats.

IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Russell's Majority Estimated at About 10,000.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 6.—The following is the total vote for Governor in this State by Congressional districts: For Russell, Democrat—First district, 7,190; Second, 11,157; Third, 14,758; Fourth, 13,316; Fifth, 12,8[illegible]; Sixth, 14,066; Seventh, 10,714; Eighth, [illegible]23; Ninth, 11,563; Tenth, 10,059; Eleventh, 11,517; Twelfth, 12,072. For Brackett, Rep.—First district, 9,000; Second, 11,824; Third, 11,307; Fourth, 4,668; Fifth, 11,269; Sixth, 14,348; Seventh, 12,704; Eighth, 10,371; Ninth, 11,252; Tenth, 10,976; Eleventh, 10,882; Twelfth, 11,361. Totals—Russell, 141,191; Brackett, 130,527. Russell's majority, 10,685.

The Democrats have the largest majority on record in the Lower House of the Legislature, having not less than 100 members against 78 last year, and from 17 to 19 Senators, against 11 last year.

Lieutenant-Governor Haile gets through with 3,409 plurality, but Auditor Ladd is beaten by William T. Trefry by 6,555 plurality, the first Democrat chosen to any of the lesser State office since the first year of Republican administration.

DELAWARE COMPLETE.

The Democrats Elect the Governor and Carry the Legislature.

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 6.—Complete returns from the whole State give Reynolds, Dem., for Governor, 445 majority, and Causey, Dem., for Congress, 514 majority.

The city of Wilmington has gone 414 Republican on the head of the ticket. The Republicans elect their county ticket in New Castle County by 326 majority. The next Legislature will stand: Senate, Democrats 5, Republicans 4. House, Democrats 14, Republicans 7. There is no United States Senator to be elected.

The Prohibitionists, who had a full ticket in the field, polled about 150 votes in the whole State.

CONNECTICUT'S CONTEST.

Probability that the Legislature Will Elect the Governor.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 6.—The Connecticut Legislature is 10 to 16 Republican on joint ballot. Total vote of the State (about 120 towns official), 135,374. Morris, Dem., has 67,661, and is 53 short of a popular majority. Official returns continue to bring in scattering votes, and it is evident that no election has been made. If so, the Legislature will elect Merwin, Rep.

M'KINLEY DEFEATED.

Warwick Has a Majority of Nearly Four Hundred.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 6.—In the 16th District the remarkable run made by Major McKinley was a surprise to Democrats and a delight to Republicans. He cut down a 2,000 adverse majority to 400. It is said that he has not slept four hours a night since October 7, and some nights in freight train cabooses. He has traveled thousands of miles in trains and carriages and made 55 speeches. The vote in McKinley's District, official and unofficial, gives Warwick a majority of 421.

Ex-Governor Foster is defeated by about 300 plurality. All the close and doubtful Congress districts have dropped into the Democratic column.

WOOSTER, O., Nov. 6.—Owing to the non-arrival of returns from two precincts official count could not be made. Warwick will have 391 majority over McKinley, Cromley 827 over Ryan. This is based on returns received at Democratic headquarters.

The Chairman of the Republican Committee says Warwick will not have over 380. Greater interest is manifested than in any election ever held in this county.

IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

No Choice and the Legislature Will Elect the Governor.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 6.—Returns from all but 20 towns in the State give Tuttle, Rep., for Governor, 39,131; Amsden, Dem., 38,427; Fletcher, Pro., 1,223. In 1888 these 20 towns gave Goodel, Rep., 2,525; Amsden, Dem., 2,773; Carr, Pro., 66. In 29 cities and towns Tuttle leads Amsden 704.

There will be no choice and the Legislature will elect. The Republicans elect 13 Senators and the Demorats 8. In three districts there is no choice. The House is very close, both parties claiming it by a small majority.

McKinney, Dem., carries the 1st Congressional District by a good majority, and Daniell, Dem., the 2d by a very narrow margin.

IOWA'S VOTE.

The Republican State Ticket Has a Plurality of 7,000.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 6.—The plurality for the Republican State ticket is in round numbers 7,000. Congressmen Henderson, Strubie, Hull, Flick and Dolliver are surely elected. The Democrats have elected Hayes in the second district. A few districts are doubtful with probabilities most of them in favor of the Republicans.

Congressman Wallace Defeated.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 6.—A revision of returns from the Third Congressional District indicate the election of Coombs Dem., by a majority of 14 over Wallace, Rep., the sitting member. Mr. Wallace was elected to the 51st Congress by a majority of 2,443.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Van Horn, Dem., is elected to Congress for the long term in the 24th district and Pindar for the short term.

Breckinridge Elected.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 6.—Returns received at Republican headquarters indicate the defeat of Langley, Union-Labor, in the 2d District by Breckinridge, Dem., and Featherstone, Union-Labor, in the 1st District by Cate, Dem. The Farmers' Alliance voted solidly with the Democratic party.

The Situation in Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 6.—The Democrats will have a majority in both branches of the Legislature.

THREE KILLED.

Disastrous Wreck on the New York, Ontario & Western Road.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 6.—A wreck occurred on the New York, Ontario & Western Railroad last night at a point between Carbondale and Mayfield.

An engine, trying to make a switch, crashed into a passenger train running at full speed in the opposite direction. The engineers and firemen jumped and were only slightly hurt.

Charles Finnegan, a man named Burke and another, name unknown, all passengers, were killed and several other passengers were severely injured.

Free Speech in Canada.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 6.—Sir John Macdonald said that if Dillon and O'Brien came to Canada they could not be prevented from exercising the right of free speech. They were British subjects and members of Parliament, and even if they were subjects of a foreign country with which England was not at peace they could not be molested. He felt sure no attempt would be made to interfere with their movements.

An Elevator Falls.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—The wire rope of an elevator in the works of the Edison Electric Light Company on Sansom street, this city, broke, precipitating the car from the third story to the cellar. Three employes were in the car. John Taylor, aged 40, and Jesse Booth, aged 30, were probably fatally injured. James Costello was badly hurt, but will recover.

Mme. Patti Ill.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Mme. Patti was announced to sing at Leicester to-night, but it is hardly probable that she will be able to do so. She is confined to her bed in Leicester suffering from the effects of a chill contracted at a concert at which she sang in London on Monday. A prominent specialist has been summoned from Birmingham to attend her.

Hanged Himself in His Cell.

SING SING, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Jacob Gensheimer, aged 25 years, a convict in Sing Sing prison, committed suicide by hanging himself with a sheet in that institution. As John Dercy, a fellow convict, was passing his cell at about 5 a. m. he peered in and was surprised to see the body of Gensheimer hanging suspended from the ceiling, lifeless.

Several Mills Burned.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 6.—Williams Brothers Manufacturing Company's mills south of this city were destroyed by fire last evening.

Five Republican Congressmen.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Private dispatches received here from San Francisco say that five out of six Republican Congressmen from that State are elected.

3,000 Shoemakers Locked Out.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Three thousand shoe makers have been locked out in the Wellingborough district.

BOTH CLAIM ILLINOIS.

The Returns Not All in, But the Republicans Have the Lead.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—In the 4th Illinois District Newberry, Dem., is elected to Congress over Congressman Adams by a plurality of 937.

Estimated returns from 64 of the 102 counties of Illinois, which returns include Cook County, give Amberg, Rep., 12,683 plurality over Wilson, Dem., for State Treasurer, and Edwards, Rep., 8,984 plurality over Raab for State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

As returns thus far are mostly from Chicago and Northern Illinois counties, Republican strongholds, and both Democratic candidates are from southern Illinois, the present Republican plurality will probably be radically decreased as later returns come in. Both State Central Committees claim the State.

Congressman Cannon admits that he is defeated.

MINNESOTA CLOSE.

Both Parties Neck and Neck for the Gubernatorial Vote.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 6.—The gubernatorial vote is very close in Minnesota. Twenty-three counties give Merriam, Rep., 22,645; Wilson, Dem., 23,178; Owen, Alliance, 16,805. This does not include Hennepin County (Minneapolis) which gives Wilson 2,000 plurality, nor Ramsey County (St. Paul) which gives 1,500 for Wilson. The Democrats are claiming the State.

Snider, Rep., is defeated by Castle, Dem., for Congress in the 4th District; O. M. Hall, Dem., defeats D. S. Hall, Rep., in the 3d District; and Harries, Dem., wins over Dunnell in the 1st District. The 2d and 5th districts are doubtful. The Democrats made nearly a clean sweep on city, county and legislative tickets in this county.

RESULT IN WISCONSIN.

The Democrats Claim the State by Over 30,000 Plurality.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 5.—The chairman of the Republican State Central committee at this hour gives the State and Legislature to the Democrats and says Wisconsin Congressional delegation will stand six Democrats, three Republicans.

Thomas, Rep., for Congress in the 7th District is defeated by a small majority. Lafollette, Rep., is beaten in the 3d District by 1,200, and it is believed that McCord has been defeated in the 9th. Advices received this noon state that Hagan is sure of re-election by a small majority.

E. C. Wall, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee claims the State by 35,000 plurality.

The New York Legislature.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Colonel Williams, the Governor's private secretary, states that the next Assembly will have 66 Democratic members sure. He estimates that the Republicans have elected 59 members, and claims that the result in the 1st Dutchess County District, the 1st Wayne County District and the Montgomery County District is still in doubt.

Boyd Ahead in Nebraska.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 6.—Returns from 353 precincts in Nebraska show Boyd, Dem., 4,000 ahead of Richards, Rep.

INGALLS IN DANGER.

The Farmers and Democrats Combine and Capture Kansas.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 6.—The Republican candidate for Governor is beaten; six out of seven Congressional candidates defeated; Senator Ingall's re-election a subject of grave doubt. This is the situation in Kansas.

Eighty-two thousand Republican majority has been overcome. The Farmers' Alliance did it, and it was a genuine surprise. The chances for the Democrats gaining in some districts was bright, but no such overturning of Republican majorities was expected. For the first time in many years the Republican delegation is broken. Only one Republican is elected, Hon. F. H. Funston, from the 2d District.

The Farmers' Alliance and the Democrats waged a bitter campaign against Senator Ingalls, whose term expires in 1891, and in a majority of the districts combined on one candidate against the Republican candidate. The result is the certain election of 95 Farmers Alliance and Democratic Legislators against 30 Republicans. Some of the latter may vote for Ingalls, but his opponents claim that there will be a majority of six against him.

Myron B. Wright Elected.

SUSQUEHANNA, Pa., Nov. 6.—Myron B. Wright, Rep., is elected to Congress from the 15th District by about 1,500 majority.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

Several Large Buildings Burned at New Rochelle.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Nov. 6.—About 9:30 a. m. a disastrous fire started in the cellar of the Ferguson building here. The cellar was stored with oil and the volunteer fire department of the village could not stay the flames.

The New Rochelle Bank situated in the Ferguson block was wholly consumed. The fire spread rapidly in a northerly direction from the building, and the entire block was soon involved.

The flames then crossed Main street and several buildings were soon destroyed. Among the concerns that suffered were Ware & Barber, dry goods; J. L. Constant, druggist, and Mrs. Byrnes, boots and shoes.

The loss on the Ferguson building will be fully $100,000. Loss on other property far greater.

Fire apparatus from Mt. Vernon and Portchester came to assist in checking the flames.

There Will be No Extra Session.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—A member of the Cabinet is authority for the statement that the President will not call an extra session of Congress. The first of December comes on a Monday, and Congress will meet in regular session on that day. There is no urgency demanding an extra session, it is stated on the same authority, and the reasons that were potent in suggesting it several weeks ago do not hold now. Only four weeks remain before the regular session begins, and members of Congress from distant States could hardly arrive here in time for a session if one were called.

Succi Begins His Long Fast.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Signor Succi, the Italian faster, commenced at 8 o'clock last night his fast of 45 days, ending on the evening of December 20. The scene of his abstinence is in a parlor in Koster & Bial's building on Twenty-third street. The following well-known doctors consented to take medical charge of the trials: Frank H. Ingram, Matthew D. Field, surgeon of the Manhattan Elevated Railroad; Edward Gaillard Mason, N. W. Lynder, Hugh Hagan and G. Bettini di Moise, librarian of the Medico-Legal Society.

The Gibbons-Cushing Fight.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Everything is ready for the Gibbons-Cushing match, which will be fought between now and Sunday at a convenient spot within 200 miles of this city. Owing to the great demand for tickets, and fearing an unmanageable crowd, the managers of the match have very wisely decided to keep the exact date and battle-ground secret.

Killed While Being Photographed.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—By the breaking of a scaffolding, raised ten feet from the ground, on which 150 men and girls were grouped for the purpose of being photographed at Lyon & Healy's piano factory to-day, one man was killed, two probably fatally injured and several others badly hurt.

General Clarkson in Poor Health.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Hon. John S. Clarkson, the ex-Assistant Postmaster-General, has gone to Asheville, N. C., for his health. Long hours of work in the poorly heated and badly ventilated Congressional committee rooms gave him a bad cold, which developed into a serious complication of asthma and rheumatism.

Ended Her Life With a Bullet.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 6.—Mrs. Angelica Shauman, of this city, driven to despondency by long continued illness, sent a bullet through her heart at 7 a. m. When the members of her family rushed to her room they found her dead. She was 46 years old and the mother of eight children.

Elevators Burned in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 6.—The Wells' elevator, the largest in the city, was totally destroyed by fire this morning. Two other large elevators and a number of adjoining warehouses were also burned.

Shot Himself in the Head.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., Nov. 6.—Max Hanstein, a German bartender employed by Mrs. Hettrich, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. No reason can be assigned for the rash deed.

Croker Sails Away.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Richard Croker, the Tammany leader, sailed at noon to-day for Germany on the Hamburg steamer Columbia.

THE LEADERS TALK

Tuesday's Defeat Discussed by the Statesmen.

GROVER CLEVELAND SPEAKS.

He Says He is Proud of His Countrymen and Tariff Reform.

Secretary Noble Waiting for the Final Returns—He Thinks a Democratic House Will Elect a Republican President—Reed Refuses to be Interviewed—An Opinion from England.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Politicians in this city are busy going over the returns received from the several states and it will be some time before the leaders will be prepared to tell their followers the real cause of Tuesday's defeat.

Secretary Blaine will not talk about election, but will converse freely on every other topic.

SECRETARY NOBLE'S VIEWS.

He Thinks a Democratic House Will Elect a Republican President.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Secretary Noble was in a cheerful mood when a reporter called upon him to ascertain his views of the election, but he adroitly refrained from committing himself, freely giving as an intimation that he "never acknowledged defeat until the back counties had been heard from."

He remarked that he was a great believer in philosophy. "By that I mean," said the Secretary, "that if the Democrats have succeeded in gaining the House, I believe it ensures the election of the next Republican candidate for the Presidency."

The Secretary would not concede the reports that the Republicans had been snowed under in his State (Missouri), preferring first to hear the final results before talking.

MR. CLEVELAND'S OPINION.

The Ex-President Thinks the Necessity of Tariff Reform Has Been Demonstrated.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Ex-President Cleveland in an interview on the results of the election said: "I am delighted. I challenge the right of any man in the country to rejoice more heartily than I over the results. My gratification is that of an American, proud of his fellow countrymen, who, though led away for a time by party prejudices and by blind confidence in cunning and selfish leaders could not be deluded to their ruin.

"Of course, there is nothing for the Democratic party to do but to push on the battle for tariff reform at all times and in all places or the views which they have laid down—that is, to insist upon a wise adjustment of tariff taxation to the reasonable needs of the Government, as opposed to the plan which enriches a favored class at the expense of the masses of the people. Until victory is won, the question of tariff reform will not be settled nor the pledges and professions of the Democratic party to the people redeemed."

SEEN FROM ABROAD.

The English Newspapers Comment on the American Elections.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The newspapers print pretty full accounts of the results in the American elections, but comment only briefly upon the figures, reserving editorial treatment of the subject until the returns are complete.

The tone of such comment as is made indicates a belief that the defeat of the Republicans is attributable to popular disapproval of the McKinley tariff measure.

Several prominent public men who have been interviewed declare that the result of the elections shows that it was not the American people, but only a handful of unwise politicians who were responsible for the exaggerated protectionism embodied in the McKinley bill.

THE SPEAKERSHIP.

Candidates Plentiful in Number and Several from the South.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Although the Representatives elected Tuesday will not take their seats for 13 months, the contest for the Speakership will begin with the reassembling of Congress four weeks hence.

The candidates will be plentiful in number and will include every would be leader among the Democratic majority.

The South will present Mr. Crisp of Georgia, Mr. Hatch of Missouri, Mr. McMillan of Tennessee, and Mr. Mills of Texas. The candidates from the North will be Mr. Bynum of Indiana and Mr. Springer of Illinois. Congressman-elect Lockwood of Buffalo is also mentioned.

Cause of the Defeat.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—"Washing day; paying off old scores," is generally given by prominent Republicans here as the cause of the general defeat of Tuesday. A cabinet officer who gave the above as the reasons for the Democratic victory, said it was undoubtedly true that in New England the tariff had operated against the Republicans, and from his observation tariff reform sentiment was spreading in that section.

Mr. Wanamaker Will Not Talk Politics.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Postmaster-General Wanamaker on his return to Washington at once proceeded to dispose of the mass of business accumulated during his absence. He denied himself to all callers. His private secretary speaking for him, however, said that Mr. Wanamaker "did not care to talk politics."

Speaker Reed Silent.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 6.—Speaker Reed absolutely refused to speak on the result of the elections.

PLEADING FOR BIRCHALL.

His Wife Burst Into Tears While Presenting Her Petition.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 6.—Mrs. Birchall waited on Sir John Thompson, Minister of Justice, and pleaded for executive clemency on behalf of her husband now under sentence of death in Woodstock jail.

She was accompanied by Mr. McMurchy, solicitor, and her sister Mrs. West-Jones. She was visibly affected as she made her plea for mercy. Mr. McMurchy addressed the Minister with great force and dwelt upon every salient point for the defense. He said that all the evidence adduced was circumstantial and that there was no positive proof that Birchall was seen going toward the swamp with Benwell, except one witness who was not positive or reliable in his evidence. Further, he submitted that Birchall's subsequent action of remaining in the country for more than a week after the corpse was found, went to prove his innocence. He asked that a most careful and solemn consideration should be given to the matter.

Mrs. Birchall then stepped forward and presented the petition signed by about 6,000 persons. She said she believed in her husband's innocence and that time would show how true this was. Her life, she said, would be blighted and two honorable families ruined.

At this point in her appeal the unfortunate lady burst into tears, and covering her face with her hands sank back into a chair.

Sir John Thompson was visibly affected. He said he felt a deep sympathy for Mrs. Birchall, and that he would give careful attention to the statement of Mr. McMurchy and the contents of the petition. Mrs. Birchall then took her leave, and accompanied by her friends returned to the hotel.

Very little hope is entertained in official circles that the clemency of the Crown will be extended to Birchall.

Mrs. Harrison Will Preside.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Mrs. Harrison has accepted the presidency of the committee organized for the purpose of securing funds for the endorsement of the medical school of Johns Hopkins University, in order that women may be admitted on equal terms with men. Mrs. Harrison has selected Nov. 14 as the day on which to make an inspection of the hospital, and on the visit she will be accompanied by Mrs. Blaine, Mrs. Levi P. Morton and the leading ladies of official society here. Ladies of the local committees of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore will also be present at the inspection.

Turkish Cruelties.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 6.—Horrible details of the treatment of Armenians in the prisons here have unexpectedly been brought to light. Helop, the young Armenian, who shot at an Archpriest, had live coals put in the palms of his hands, and was whipped as he lay on his bare back. He was also subjected before death, to indignities too horrible to mention.

Opposed to Jewish Persecution.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—The Grand Duke of Hesse has issued a rescript censuring those who persecute Jews in his dominion. Herr Stoecker, noted for his activity against the Jews, has resigned the chaplaincy of the Prussian Court.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Irish delegation left New York this morning for Philadelphia.

Oil fields described as rivaling those of Pennsylvania have been discovered in France.

It has now been settled that the man who committed suicide at the Getty House, Yonkers, N. Y., is not John H. Edgar.

The leading hotel men in New York city met and agreed upon the following schedule of prices for champagne, to go into effect at once: Half pints $1; pints $2; quarts $4. The hotel men say they are forced to this step on account of the importers putting up the wholesale price.

It is reported that one of the French Republican Deputies proposes to introduce a bill confiscating the estates in France of the Count and Countess of Paris. The latter recently inherited immense wealth from her father, the Duke of Montpensier.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—For New England, Eastern New York and Eastern Pennsylvania: Fair till Friday night, slightly warmer except stationary temperature along the coast; southerly winds.

For Western New York and Western Pennsylvania: Fair; slightly warmer except stationary temperature on the lakes; southerly winds.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Maggie Day has returned to the home of her parents, No. 5 Cottage place, after a three weeks' stay in New York.

H. G. Runkle, James Martine, Alex Gilbert, Robert Livingston, D. S. Roberts, J. B. Dumont, are possible candidates for the Mayoralty nomination.

Among the prizes of the annual Chrysanthemum show of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, now being held in Orange, are two consisting of $10 and $5, offered by Richard Purdue, of East Orange, for three best plants, chrysanthemums, to be grown by a lady. Mr. Purdue is a celebrated grower of these flowers. He is the father of Miss Purdue, assistant principal of the North Plainfield school.

The funeral of Mrs. Caroline Miller, widow of the late George Miller, took place yesterday, from the late residence of the deceased, Miller's Hotel, this city, and was attended by a large number of friends and relatives, although by request of the family the funeral was a private one. The Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham officiated, and the remains of this most estimable wife and mother were interred in the Presbyterian cemetery in North Plainfield. The pall-bearers were Councilman D. S. Roberts, ex-Postmaster W. L. Force, Wm. H. Egbert, I. D. TenEyck, Andrew D. Jennings and Louis Callmann.

Henry M. Stanley.

The "Hero of the Dark Continent" is to appear in Elizabeth in connection with the following course of lectures:

Friday, Nov. 14—George Kennan, subject: "Russian Political Exiles."

Friday, Nov. 28—The Ollie Torbett Concert company and Fred. Emerson Brooks.

Monday, Dec. 8—Henry M. Stanley, subject: "The Rescue of Emin."

Thursday, Dec. 18—Frederick Villiers, subject: "War and Peace."

As this is to be Stanley's only lecture in New Jersey, it affords a rare opportunity, not only to see and hear the great explorer, but to enjoy the finest lecture course ever presented in this section. As the tickets have sold so very freely in Elizabeth, but a limited number could be reserved for Plainfield. Tickets are on sale at H. P. Reynolds', corner Park and North avenues, where further information can be had.

Game Protection.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of "The New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society" held in this city last evening, R M. Stelle was made Treasurer to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Treasurer, Wm. E. Jones. Gen. Wm. H. Sterling and Wm. H. Egbert were also elected members of the Board to fill vacancies. President P. C. Ohl reported gratifying results from game protection throughout the State. The Board adjourned to meet again Nov. 14.

Plainfield's Pride.

Gazelle Engine and her fine company of men, was the feature of the fireman's parade at Westfield, this afternoon. About 50 members turned out in handsome uniform, headed by a hundred-dollar band and drum-major. The steamer shone like gold and silver. Among the guests with Gazelle's company were Councilmen Roberts, Hetfield and Gallup, Chief Doane and others.

Almost $20,000 So Far.

The fund for the building of the new Grace church has now reached a total of $18,800, and subscriptions are coming in daily. Ground will be broken as soon as Spring opens, by which time all plans and details will have been arranged and the work can be pushed forward without a delay.

Accidents will happen, so that all will catch cold sometimes. You want to find relief by the easiest and best methods. The most effectual way is to take Hires' Cough Cure. In whooping cough and croup nothing equals it. Every family should keep this remedy in the house handy in case of emergency.

LOVE SO GREAT THAT DEATH WAS JOY.

Many Hearts Quickened by the Story of the Saviour's Sacrifice.—Re-Consecration and Conversion Follow the Coming of the Great Evangelist.

The hearts of Plainfield people have already been deeply touched by the words of the evangelist who began in this city Monday night his mission to save men's souls from eternal wrath. It is yet early to look for great results from the local crusade now being conducted by Mr. Mills, but a wonderful revival is developing, and a vast harvest may be expected for the kingdom of the Lord.

At last night's meeting in the First Baptist church there were no seats to spare. The building was filled with those eager to hear the gospel message from the lips of the famous preacher. And the truths which the reverend man expounded were so plain, so sweet, so soul-nourishing, that many troubled hearts were comforted.

The preacher attempted no lofty flight of eloquence. His words were the words of the Master, his teachings the simple doctrine that Christ died to save sinners. "And being in an agony, He prayed more earnestly"—Luke XXII: 44—was his text, and as he dwelt on the sentence there arose before the minds of his multitude of hearers that scene, so full of beauty and sadness and love, when Christ, the scoffed and forsaken of the world, the beloved of the Apostles, the Saviour of all mankind, knelt in anguish in the Garden at Gethsemane, and in a petition of agonized compassion for the world prepared for crucifixion. With many a simple little story, each fraught with the old, old lesson of surpassing love which would suffer death rather than see the soul of the loved one lost, and of love so great that death that brought salvation for others was joy indeed, Mr. Mills urged the people to the duty which lay before them. If they were already professing Christians they must arouse themselves out of the lethargy into which they had fallen, and press onward, and work and pray unceasingly, for the salvation of human souls. If they had wandered from the path marked by Christ's own bleeding footprints they had but to look to Him anew, and live again in His holy likeness. If they were sinners whose stubborn hearts had refused to admit Him they must bring themselves to a deep realization of how greatly their friends were concerned in their souls, and how He had been so much concerned that He had died to save them.

Besides the impressive language of the evangelist, there was music by a grand chorus of voices, whose gospel songs aroused many a latent glow and fire within the bosoms of the people. And there were prayers by the local clergymen, and hymns by Mr. Greenwood. As potent arguments as all these others, however, for arousing one's better feelings, and for increasing one's desire to lead a Christian life, were the tears, and the thoughts that followed their flowing, which fell when Mr. Greenwood sang "He died!—because He loved me so!" and when Mr. Mills unfolded the wondrous meaning which those words embody.

Many were strongly affected by this meeting, and it was consequently a large gathering which attended the after meeting in the basement parlors, where Mr. Mills invited those who were concerned about the souls of others—and those concerned about their own. Here the true manifestations of a revival of divine love were apparent, and here a gracious outpouring of the Spirit was witnessed. A few touching words from the preacher, and from every quarter of the meeting-place arose men, women and children, old and young, with requests for prayer, and with prayers themselves. Men asked that their brothers might be saved; women, their voices trembling with the eagerness, the heartfelt earnestness, of their longing, besought mercy and pardon and peace, for their sons, their husbands, their sisters and other loved ones. One young man pleaded for his mother; another for a father; another, a young colored lad, for a companion with him, who was worldly wise, but who knew not the blessings of a Christian life; another, himself advanced in years, for an aged man who lay dying, without light, without hope, refusing to accept God's pardon and grace. In all fully two hundred arose with their earnest appeals, and then a host who desired prayers for themselves. A spirit of infinite tenderness prevailed. At the close of the hour's communion with the Holy Spirit a number testified to the evangelist that they had found that peace which passeth all understanding, while others exclaimed in supreme happiness that they began to see the dawn of a Christian life breaking before them.

Meetings similar to these will be held in the First Baptist church every night this week. Next Sunday Mr. Mills will conduct a meeting for men, young men and boys, in the same church, at 10:30 A. M.; at 3:45 P. M. he will conduct a meeting for young people; at 7:30 P. M. a meeting for all classes. Sunday meetings for women will be held at the Crescent Avenue and Methodist churches at 10:30 A. M., to be conducted by local pastors. Monday evening, at 7:30, a Union meeting, addressed by Mr. Mills, will be held in the Crescent Avenue church. Mr. Greenwood and his large choir will sing.

A touching incident of last night's after-meeting was the conversion of a young woman who is a teacher in a local Sunday school. Early in the meeting her Superintendent arose and said, "Pray for two teachers in my school who are not Christians." Later this woman, one of the teachers referred to, arose herself and asked for prayers, and subsequently teacher and Superintendent, tears of joy on their faces, clasped hands and rejoiced that she was saved.

Plainfield Listens to Woman's Reason.

A well attended meeting was held in Reform Hall, Sunday evening, President Harper occupying the chair, Chaplain Honeyman conducting the devotional services, and Mr. Vanderbeek's full choir, with Miss Alice Smith as accompanist, rendering the musical selections.

The principal speakers were two women, Mrs. Woodbury, of New York city, and Mrs. Partington, of Portland, Maine, both of whom earnestly, and at considerable length, advocated total abstinence and liquor prohibition, and clearly set forth the lines of practical duty along which they claimed all professing Christians should be found laboring for the glory of God and the welfare of humanity. Mrs. Woodbury commenced her discourse by quoting a portion of the twenty-first chapter of John, and, enlarging thereon, presented to her hearers truths of living worth. In conclusion, she gave an interesting account of the great growth and excellent results of the Demorest medal contests. Mrs. Partington, with the boldness of a moral crusader, and in a clear ringing voice, antagonized the liquor traffic as the giant evil of the age, and in vivid word-pictures described numerous instances of misery and ruin wrought by it. She also denounced as false the assertions of interested parties that prohibition in Maine was inoperative. Mr. T. Richards, of Brooklyn, N. Y., followed, and in a short but spirited address bore additional testimony on behalf of the beneficent and saving cause of temperance.

The President announced that in just recognition of the evangelical work of Mr. Mills Reform Hall would not be opened next Sunday, but that the regular monthly business meeting of the Club would be held Thursday evening of this week, in the basement parlor, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Milligan's Return.

Festoons of carrots, onions, tomatoes and other agricultural trophies, surrounded a magnificent portrait of the Hon. Edward Milligan at Steffen's, 16 Vesey street, New York, last Saturday evening; the occasion being a reception tendered to that gentleman by his friends on his return to civilization from the primitive wilds of Jersey. The Milligan ancestral mansion is beautifully situated in Washington Valley, near "Aunt Sally's Notch," just back of this city, and to this delightful retreat Mr. Milligan retires in the early Spring, returning to the metropolis about the time when the chestnuts get ripe.

Among the friends who greeted Mr. Milligan were artist Bob. Andrews, a member of Co. D, 8th Regiment, who, in his younger days, was quite a sprinter, having made the fastest time on record from Bull Run to Arlington Heights; Sergeant T. P. Mac Kenna "The Little Grenadier" noted for his famous triangle drill; Mr. Capen and son; Major Baldwin; Mr. Venino, of Plainfield; Fred Bond, of Hoboken; Mr. Parker, Sanitary Engineer; Mr. Bowler the builder, and many others. Amid speeches and toasts and a bountiful repast of black pudding and pickled tripe, a pleasant evening was passed and the party broke up at an early hour, going home at peace with mankind generally and with Ed. Milligan particularly. Altogether the affair was a decided success.

Women Hold Meetings Every Afternoon.

The first business meeting of the Woman's Devotional Committee was held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms last Saturday. Mrs. James McGee was elected chairman, and Mrs. W. B. Maxson Secretary. This committee is composed of one representative from each of the eight churches engaged in the present religious movement in our city. A very excellent devotional service was held in Trinity Reformed church Monday afternoon, led by a member of the First Baptist church. The meeting on Tuesday was in charge of Mrs. Tomlinson, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church. Wednesday's meeting was led by a member of the Crescent Avenue church. These services will continue to be held in the lecture room of the First Baptist church, at 2:45 P. M. The Committee say come and bring your friends.

Married by Two Divines.

At the Church of the Heavenly Rest, N Y, last evening, the Rev. S. P. Simpson, of this city assisted the Rev. D. Parker Morgan at a marriage ceremony, an unusual feature being that one divine performed the betrothal and the other read the marriage ceremonial, this being strictly in accordance with the rubric of the Church. The occasion was the marriage of Miss Carrie Meserole Schenck and Dr. James Henry Clark of Newark, N. J. Among those present was Gov. Leon Abbett.

Who are Burnet and Leggett?

At a meeting of the Crescent League, last evening, Messrs Burnet and Leggett were cheered by the members for their successful management of last season's ball team, that won so many victories and gained such financial profit. To the question, "Who are Charley Burnet and Charley Leggett?" every fellow shouted—"First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of the Crescent League!"

A Great Ball Town, is This.

The gate receipts at the ball games of the Plainfield Crescent League, in this city, during the past season, were $4,691.-05. Hatfield, McIndoe, Jones, Lufbery, Lee and Martin, will be signed for next season's team.

Can A Man Swallow A Cannon Ball?

Well, "that depends." He can if his throat is large enough and the cannon-ball not too large. The question really seems worthy of some consideration in view of the size of some of the pills that are prescribed for suffering humanity. Why not throw them "to the dogs," and take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets? Small, sugar-coated, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, in glass, and always fresh.

THE SAME ALL OVER.

Full Returns Show that the Jersey Democrats Capture Seven of the Eight Senators Besides Five Out of Seven Congressmen, and Also Forty of the Sixty Assemblymen.

The latest returns from this State show that the Democratic gains have been larger even than the most sanguine anticipated. The Senate, instead of being a tie, as was shown by the first imperfect figures, will be composed as follows: Democrats, 13; Republicans, 7, and Stuhr, Jeffersonian. The latest advices are to the effect that Senator Roe, Republican, has been defeated by George H. Barkman, Democrat, in Gloucester county, and that James Butcher, Democrat, has been elected over Richard T. Starr, Republican, in Salem. In other words, the Democrats captured seven out of the eight counties. Camden is the only county that elected a Republican Senator. The Republicans, however, are still hoping that Roe and Starr may pull through.

In fact, the Democrats made almost a clean sweep all over the State, as they have captured five out of the seven Congressmen elected. The gain was even larger in the Assembly, as forty out of the sixty candidates returned are Democrats. Many of the big chiefs of the Republican party, especially the Senators who perpetrated the fraud of unseating Senator McDonald, are relegated to oblivion.

The Democrats having a majority in the next Senate, it has been decided to oust Senator Stuhr of Hudson. Edward F. McDonald was elected Senator last Fall. Stuhr was his opponent on the fusion ticket. The Republican Senate unseated McDonald and gave his seat to Stuhr, although after throwing out all the fraudulent votes McDonald was elected. The Democrat Senate will give McDonald's seat back to him. He may consent to sit in the Senate until the beginning of his term in Congress and then resign as State Senator. The Democratic victory in New Jersey this year is very important. In the first place it insures a Democratic successor to United States Senator Blodgett two years hence, for all the Senators elected Tuesday will have a vote then. In the next place the two most important offices in the State not controlled by the Democrats fall into their hands, viz., the offices of State Comptroller and State Treasurer, and next the long contemplated plan of the Republicans to gerrymander the Assembly districts comes to naught and must be postponed for an indefinite number of years. Gen. Sewell's dream of succeeding Senator Blodgett at Washington is over. Major Anderson, the present State Comptroller and Gen. Sewell's ablest lieutenant, must vacate his $6,000-a-year berth at the State House, and Major Anderson's crony and side partner, Col. John J. Toffey, at present State Treasurer, must accompany him into political retirement. They will make room for good Democrats.

The following tables, according to the latest returns, show the successful candidates in Senate and Assembly:

Helping Our Health Guardians Fight Off Disease.

The month of November is the period of the year when typhoid fever is most common. The disease is propagated, it is said, by germs, most frequently carried in water. Too much care cannot be had for the protection of our wells from contamination of surface nuisances. Infection from drains, privy vaults and cesspools, is usually instrumental in spreading the disease. Decaying vegetation offers a sure breeding-ground for the germ, though it may not originate there. Every case of typhoid fever is due to a bacillus coming directly or indirectly from some previous case of typhoid fever. The importance of collections of deleterious substances such as occur in cesspools in relation to typhoid fever, is first, that they are especially liable to receive the deadly germ, and second, that they are especially favorable for preserving it alive for many months, and favoring its growth and multiplication.

The Board of Health of Plainfield, in a quiet way, are having constant inspections made throughout the more thickly inhabited parts of the City, to prevent the accumulation of offensive and dangerous material. For the purpose of maintaining a high sanitary standard, they have enacted ordinances requiring the emptying and cleaning out of all cesspools and privy vaults, at least once every year. And strict watch is kept on the growing a-h-heap, piles of rubbish and promiscuous dumping grounds.

Citizens will confer a favor upon the inhabitants generally by reporting to the Board of Health the existence of any unsanitary nuisances within the corporate limits.

Plainfield Cases in the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court opened at Trenton yesterday. The Court appointed Wm. S. Greenwood of Newark and Craig A. Marsh of this city, to conduct the examination of candidates for admission to the bar, either as attorneys or as counselors, at the next term of court. The appointees continue in office one year.

The only Plainfield cases of general interest were the certiorari to test the constitutionality of the law under which the Water-Works Company of Plainfield organized, and the appeal of Mr. Carey from the decision of the Police Board. The first case was put off for the term on application of Collins & Corbin and Wallace Edwards & Bumpstead, attorneys respectively of the prosecutor and the Water Company. The Corporation Counsel objected, and on behalf of the city urged the necessity for speedy disposition of the case, but the Court intimated that the case was of so great importance not only in this instance but in its effect on eighteen other companies which, it was said, were organized under the same law, that additional time should be granted for preparation. The other case referred to will be argued this term.

The certiorari case of J. B. Miller vs. the city has been argued on brief, and opinion is expected to-day.

The Crescent's New Home to be Harried.

Ground was broken yesterday for the new club house of the Plainfield Crescent League. The carpenter work is to be done by Pearson & Gayle, and the contract calls for completion by January 15. Architect Fosgate is empowered to put on as many extra men as he may think necessary to finish the building by the time fixed.

A Credit to the Committee in Charge.

Fred Emerson Brooks, who is to appear in Elizabeth in the Stanley course, has been secured by the Royal Arcanum Council of this city as part of their next Monday evening's entertainment. The San Francisco Call says of him: "Fred Emerson Brooks, the California Poet, rolled out the numbers of his poem with that matchless elocution peculiar to himself, receiving at its conclusion the unbounded applause of an enthusiastic and critical audience, demanding an encore as usual."

Also secured on the programme by Wm. Lyon and others of the Committee on Good of the Order, are Brother D. W. Robertson, the tumbleronicon—of whom Dr. Talmage says: "Your music once heard is never forgotten"—and F. W. Isenbarth, the zither artist.

And the Drink Is as Fine as the Fountain.

The handsomest soda fountain in this city, and probably one of the largest in the State, has just been put in the Crescent pharmacy at Park avenue and Fourth street. It is built of Mexican onyx and imported marbles, and heavily trimmed with solid silver. A magnificent French plate mirror tops it. It was built to order for George Williams, the proprietor, at a cost of between one and two thousand dollars. But with all its elegance it is not a bit finer than the drinks that are drawn from it. Its orange phosphate is not excelled in the wide, wide world.

STANLEY IS HERE.

The Great Explorer and His Wife Arrive This Morning.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The Teutonic of the White Star line reached Quarantine at 11:43 last night. Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer was among the passengers. The vessel reached the dock early this morning and the explorer was met by a large party of friends and escorted to his hotel.

Mr. Stanley is accompanied by a valet and courier, his wife and her mother, Mrs. Tennant, and their maid; Hamilton Aide, the dramatist, who will be the historian of the party, and Lieut. J. Mounteney Jephson, one of the great traveler's favorite officers.

Mr. Stanley's first public appearance in this country will be at the reception at the Metropolitan Opera House next Tuesday evening, when he will deliver his lecture on "The Rescue of Emin; the Forests, Pigmies, and the March Across Africa," for the benefit of the Home for Convalescents at Summit, N. J.

The reception will be a noteworthy affair. A committee of 300 men known in science, art, literature, finance, and politics will extend to him a greeting and of course the great opera house will be crowded with the wealth, beauty and fashion of the city.

Additional interest attaches to Mr. Stanley's arrival at this time in view of the answers to his charges against Major Bartelot, of the rear guard, which have been made since he sailed.

All Europe is anxious to know how Mr. Stanley will reply, or whether he will condescend to reply at all.

THE AMERICAN NOMAD.

No Inducements are Offered a Man to Stay at Home.

A curious outgrowth of the rivalries of American cities is the practice that obtains so generally of offering bonuses and pecuniary inducements to manufacturers to move their plants. After a fire that burned down a part of a sewing machine factory the other day the owners received so many proposals from aspiring cities that wanted to take them in that they were obliged to publish a notice to the effect that only a small portion of their works had been burned, and that they were not open to proposals for adoption. Any factory or established business employing labor can have its choice nowadays from a long list of cities, new and old, any of which will give it a site for a factory, pay the expenses of moving, and perhaps contribute substantially toward the construction of a new building. People who own land or are engaged in business in cities realize that it pays them to have their cities grow, and they are willing to hire desirable inhabitants to come to them. They rely upon getting their money back in the increased value of land or the general increase in business. The result is that the migratory disposition already so pronounced in these days is intensified, and it has become a familiar thing not merely for individuals to move but for great aggregations of workingmen to shift the scene of their activities from one city to another, sometimes thousands of miles away.

Time was when where the average man found himself living there he continued to live, unless circumstances of exceptional urgency impelled him to change his residence. It is different now. Transportation has become so cheap, and travel so easy, that the ties of locality sit very lightly on the average American, and the fact that you find him settled this year in New York or Pennsylvania affords you a very uncertain basis for expecting to find him next year in the same place. When you hear of him again, if he hasn't moved to Texas, or Tacoma, or Southern California, or Maine, or North Dakota, you feel that he must have had some exceptionally good reasons for staying at home. Men used to wag their heads and croak about the inability of rolling stones to gather moss. We have changed all that. Moss is at a discount and there is a premium upon rolling.—From "The Point of View," in Scribner.

A LITTLE boy was passing a liquor saloon, the door of which was open with his dog Sport. The dog, not knowing any better, went in; but his master was soon after him, with the following piece of advice: "Come out of there, Sport; don't be disgracing the family."

MAJOR KNOX, Governor of Gloucester prison, in a late speech at Cheltenham, Eng., stated that, in his opinion, nearly all crime was traceable to drink. When men entered a jail they were obliged to abstain from liquor, and mainly owing to this abstinence, the death-rate of English prisons was only about one-third of that outside.

SPOTTING THE LOVE-SICK.

The Infallible Test Adopted by the Knowing Parlor-Car Porter.

"Hardly a week goes by," said a parlor-car porter to an Echo reporter, "that I don't see a bridal couple just starting on their honeymoon. I don't exactly know how I can tell them, but they are as plainly marked to my eyes as if they had the words 'bride' and 'bridegroom' stamped in big letters on their foreheads. There is something about them that gives the whole situation away—a kind of cling-next-to-me-darling air. Of course, I have made a mistake now and then, but it's very seldom I do, and I've often found out, after changing my mind two or three times, that I was right after all, though certain appearances were against it. We have one test which never fails, and when a doubtful party comes we try it on them, just to be sure, you know."

"What is the test?"

"Well, I'll tell you. Not many weeks ago a couple got into a car and sat down very quietly, as if they had been used to it all their lives. These didn't seem to have the bride and bridegroom air about them at all, and from external appearances they might have been brother and sister, or married for years, but still there was something there that made me suspicious; so when I saw them together I went to the newsboy, and I says: 'Bill, here's a double party; get out the sample copies.'

"So Bill got his tests and walked through the car. He offered books or newspapers to everybody, and when he came to the suspected party he took out of his pile two little books and said, so that nearly everybody could hear him: 'Very useful books, sir; hints on housekeeping and hints to newly-married people. Only twenty-five cents.'

"That did it. The girl got as red as a rose, and the man blushed and said a weak sort of 'N-n-n-no.' Then they looked at each other and sort of sniggered, and I caught him full in the eye and smiled a sweet smile, giving him a respectful wink at the same time. It was all settled in a minute; there was no doubt about it.

"There are plenty of other ways by which I can spot a bride and bridegroom, and they are as safe generally as the test.

"The custom of throwing rice after a bridal couple always makes it unpleasant for the party, as lots of rice is almost sure to stick to their clothes, hats, and in their hair."

"Why do you take such pains to find out whether they are newly married or not?"

"Oh, when they see me tumble to it we generally get a good tip just for luck, you know."

THAT TERRIBLE WEAKNESS.

Why So Many Women Are Faint, Weak, Tired, Nervous and Exhausted.

Women are great sufferers from nervousness, weakness, nervous prostration and debility. Thousands of girls droop and languish in the close, confined atmosphere of shops, factories or offices, and hundreds of thousands wear out their nerve force and power in household cares, family bereavements and responsibilities, and work which never ends.

Here lies the great strain upon the nervous system of women. Here is the cause why so many women complain of being weak, nervous, tired and exhausted.

They have little or no rest; their life is one continual round of work. What wonder that such women go to bed at night fatigued, and wake tired and unrefreshed in the morning! What wonder that they become worn out, so to speak, in nerve and vital power! What wonder that they have great weakness, exhaustion, pain in back and limbs, together with other distressing complaints which are always caused by loss of vital strength and vigor? Of how many thousands of women is the above a true and exact transcript of daily life? They have worn out and exhausted their nerve force and physical power. They must work, but it follows as surely as the day follows the night that they must receive from some source a renewal of nerve force and physical energies, or the human machine will soon cease to run at all.

The great nerve invigorant and female restorative is Dr. Greene's Nervura. No remedy in the world is so sure to bring back the bloom and color to the wan and faded cheeks, the brilliancy to the hollow and haggard eyes, the lightness and elasticity to the weak and weary step, the strength and vitality to the unstrung, shattered and worn out nerves. It is the greatest of all tonics and regulators, and cures all diseases. It is purely vegetable and harmless and can be procured at any druggist's for $1 per bottle.

GLAD TIDINGS OF HEALTH.

I wish to say, for the benefit of others, that I was taken sick with Heart Disease. I had two scientific physicians, and was under their care seven or eight months, but constantly grew worse, lost 75 pounds of flesh, and was so weak I could not raise myself in bed, and the doctors said I could be no better. But, hearing of Dr. Greene's Nervura, I commenced taking it, and in a week I began to feel better. At present, after using it a few months, I am able to walk and ride out, have gained 40 pounds in weight, so that I consider that Dr. Greene's Nervura saved my life, for which I feel very grateful.

MRS. E M. BASS,
Orford, N H.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

AUTUMN.

Brown and bare are the autumn fields;
Reaped and stacked is the yellow grain;
Hardly a partridge the stubble yields,
So closely shorn is the bristly plain.
Summer is dying 'mid shower and cloud,
Crimson and gold is her royal shroud.

Winter is coming: the leafy woods
Are withering fast in their golden pride;
For the wind is fierce, and the rain in floods
Is sweeping o'er valley and mountain-side.
Dead leaves are flying through sun and shade,
A crimson carpet all down the glade.

Mute are the finches, the lark, and the linnet;
Only the robin sings loud and clear,
A song for the beauty and joy of summer,
A sweet good-bye to the waning year.
Mead and valley and mountain steep
In the misty silence are falling asleep.

But out of their sleep shall they one day waken,
And sparkle anew with pearl and gold,
When the rosy gates of morn reopen,
And crown with splendor the dusky wold,
Though the year die out amid cloud and rain,
Yet golden summer shall come again.
—B. G. Johns, in Demorest.

MOONSHINER'S REVERIE.

It Was a Free Country But Sebe Gober Was a Prisoner.

INE them thar shotes don't gin you away, Sebe."

The man glanced up from the gun he was loading, and looked first at his mother, then at the shotes.

"Taint likely," said he, shortly, with the cartridge between his teeth.

He was tall and slab-sided, and the shotes were tall and slab-sided. He had a long, solemn face, half sleepy half dreamy, and the shotes had long, solemn faces, half stupid, half—if not dreamy, as if they were scouting around for corn.

"Hogs air powerful cunnin' creturs," Mrs. Gober continued, "en I do b'leve thet thar hog thar, old Marthy Ann," poin ting to the tallest, most slab-sided of the swine, and the mother of the others, "knows jest ez well when you sot out fur thet thar still, ez I do. She's the peartest critter I knows."

"Not peart nuff fur thet," said Sebe, briefly.

"Well I heard tell ez how thet thar revenue chep, Bill Jones, followed Suze Mullins clar over the mountains to his still, jes by the pig tracks, whar they tracked arter him fur the corn. Hogs is powerful pert critters, en so is thet thar revenue chep, Bill Jones."

"I haint afeard o' him," said Sebe, as he finished loading his gun; "I'll settle his bacon with ole Mary Jane har," holding up his weapon, "ef he fools with me. This is a free kaintry, en I'll still if I choose ter."

After making this declaration of independence he shambled off with Mary Jane; and the hogs, headed by Marthy Ann, followed him.

Mrs. Gober also believed it to be a free "kintry," but she shook her head as she watched the shambling party go down the path which led toward the mountain still.

"'Tis powerful hard," she muttered, "that the revenue men will meddle with honest folks that mines their own beeness."

As Sebe went down the rocky path he picked up stones from time to time and pelted Marthy Ann and her family with them.

"Git from har!" cried he, and shambled on secure in the company of Mary Jane.

He continued the pelting process at stated intervals, till, as he was about to climb the mountain, the shower became so fierce that Marthy Ann and her children took refuge behind a great bowlder, from whence they watched Sebe out of their slanting eyes till he disappeared; then they struck upon his track and cautiously followed like so many dogs.

Soon a man rose up from behind a large rock and followed them.

Sebe shambled up the mountain path at great speed; it was invisible to all but mountaineers; in and out it wound, now

"GIT FROM HAR!" HE CRIED.

along a precipitous ledge, now across a mountain stream, now around a great shelving cliff. Behind this Sebe dived and went on some distance, till he reached a secluded spot, a sort of hollow hedged in on all sides by dense forest growth and girdled with masses of rock. At the bottom of the hollow was a small stream. The place was a paradise for moonshiners, and Sebe had taken possession and set up his rude still.

He now glanced around with a pleased smile.

"Hit'll take a powerful peart chep ter fine me har," he thought, as he rested Mary Jane against the white trunk of a beech tree and started to work.

Soon the still was bubbling and boiling and, leaning himself against a tall poplar as though he meant to brace it up, Sebe looked around—at the deep dell; at the white smoke as it went up and was lost to sight in the treetops, like an estray cloud going back home.

The sunlight shone on the grass all spangled with dew; it threw a golden tint on the tender green of the poplar, and lit up the deeper verdure of a hickory.

fest deep, and on the other the mountain rose like the wall of a house, and we would roll under the train and be cut to pieces. All this time George had kept the whistle going and this, together with the roar of the train, could be heard fifty miles off. It was a cold morning but neither of us needed an overcoat for the perspiration stood on our faces in large drops. 'We may pull through yet,' I shouted to George. He made no reply but the look of despair on his face showed me he did not believe it.

"We were now running at the rate of sixty miles an hour and it seemed to me that the engine would leave the track every moment. At Canyon siding was a gravel bank where the gravel train used to load up between trains, and in loading, the flat cars stood on the main track just below the switch. What my feelings were as we neared the end of the canyon and shot around the last curve into the straight track I can not describe, for there on the main line stood the gravel train of seven cars and the engine nowhere in sight. We afterwards learned she had gone back to the junction for water while the cars were being loaded. This they had plenty of time to do, according to the time-card, but we were nearly an hour ahead of time. The flats were left in charge of a young man named Webber, a new arrival from the East. As soon as he saw us coming he jumped on the cars and let off the brakes, and the cars began to move at a rate that soon unloaded what gravel they had on board. On dashed the flying freight train, past the gravel bank and the group of frightened laborers, while half a mile ahead the flats were skipping along with the speed of an express train. Webber was holding on to a brake wheel, once in awhile looking back at the train that seemed to pursue him like fate.

"The six miles to Lamy junction were covered in less than as many minutes, and we rushed like a cyclone through the yard and past the side track where the work train engine had sought safety not five seconds too soon. The flats were now about one hundred yards ahead. About two miles below the junction was a rise in the grade of about eighty feet to the mile. The length of the grade was about three miles, and we had strong hopes, if nothing happened, of stopping her by the time we got to the top. It was evident the flats could not go much further at the terrific speed they had attained, for they were jumping three feet clear of the track, and the only wonder was that the couplings held. Suddenly like a flash the head car jumped the track and the rest followed like a flock of sheep, and with an awful crash piled up into kindling, burying poor Webber under the pile. It came so suddenly that before I could realize what had happened the wreck was left behind and we were dashing up the other grade. For the first mile I could see no difference in our speed, and then the grade began to tell. Slower and slower moved the train, and half a mile from the end of the up grade we regained control of it and had to steam to the top of the hill. As we came to a stop I looked at the clock in the cab. It indicated 7:45. We had left the head of the pass at 7:05 and had run forty-nine miles in forty minutes. George now gave his engine an examination, but with the exception of the right wrist-pin she was as cool as could be expected. Soon afterward the yard engine came out and helped us back into the yard, where the train was overhauled and the cause of the runaway found. There were only six good brakes in the entire train of fifty-two cars.

"As soon as we got into the yard a party was made up to look for poor Webber. We were soon at the scene of the wreck, where half a dozen men were already at work. It was the worst wreck I ever saw; nothing but a pile of kindling and the brave fellow was almost at the bottom. Every one worked with a will, but it was only after two hours' hard work that the broken and crushed form of poor Webber was laid on a mattress in the little tent at the side of the road. He was still alive, but died in a very short time. Every bone in his body was broken. His mother had arrived in Las Vegas only a few days before and was sent for. A special train brought her down in care of the superintendent, and there were few dry eyes in that crowd as kind hands assisted the broken-hearted mother from the coach and over to the little tent where lay her only boy. Mrs. Webber was cared for by the company, who gave her a life annuity. The boys took up a subscription and placed a handsome granite shaft over poor Webber, who was buried close to the wreck. After the inquest and funeral we went back to Las Vegas and I took my time. A few mornings after, this is what I saw in the looking-glass."

The stranger lifted his hat. The hair on the front of his head was white as snow, while the rest was jet black.

"What became of the caboose? They slacked it down to Canyon siding and left it there and then skipped. They were never seen in that part of the country again."—Detroit Free Press.

BRIGHT CHIT-CHAT.

PASTEUR is a small, solidly-built man, very pale and rather sickly in appearance. He limps when he walks. His face shows in every lineament a high order of intellect.

THE President of Uruguay lives over a millinery store with his wife, but having the entire resources of the country at his command the expense does not worry him.

MARQUIS TSENG, the late illustrious Chinese statesman, has received the highest posthumous honors which the Celestial Kingdom can bestow in a formal decree of the Emperor that he "forgives him all his sins and crimes committed during his life."

MISS ELIZABETH GATES is the richest unmarried woman in Buffalo. Miss Gates, by good business management, has added very considerably to the one million dollars left to her by her father, at one time president of the Western New York & Pennsylvania railroad.

"BUFFALO BILL" CODY continues to draw big crowds of spectators to his show in Europe, and in some places the performances of his cowboys and Indian "braves" excited such general interest that the children on the streets gave up their wonted games to make mimic attacks on perambulators in lieu of stage coaches, and to lasso one another in true "Wild West" style.

"MARK TWAIN" has made the discovery that, whereas lecturers always affect to have a sober end in view, which can be best reached by sugar-coating their bolus of ripe thought with a paste of illustrative anecdotes, their real aim is to tell as many good stories as they have time to narrate, letting the professed subject-matter of the address serve merely as a thread on which to string them.

LORD ARTHUR CECIL, half brother of the Marquis of Salisbury, was in his youth a man of extraordinary strength. He was one day walking through a field on his farm at Innericichen when a young bull rushed at him. Instead of running Lord Arthur seized the animal by his horns and pushed him back, wriggling and struggling, inch by inch, till he got him into his stall, where he left him cowering and trembling all over.

HENRY CLEWS, the banker, says that shaving the head for baldness is a delusion and a snare. When quite a young man he found himself growing bald, and by the advice of a barber, which advice was also indorsed by a wigmaker, he had the top of his head shaved regularly twice a week for six months. During this time he wore a thirty-dollar toupee bought of the wigmaker. Six months was the time he was to shave his head to effect a cure, but at the expiration of this period he found that the toupee or something else had killed all the roots of his hair and he was hopelessly bald.

JOEL BENTON gives important information to persons who expect to kiss the Queen or to be kissed by her Majesty. "Persons of high rank," writes Mr. Benton, "especially the ladies, have the privilege of being kissed by the Queen. Other ladies make a low courtesy and kiss the Queen's hand, which she places in the palm of their hand. If the Queen condescends to kiss an untitled person this person must not expect to return a kiss in kind, but must only kiss her hand. Of course, a lady before reaching the Queen must have her right hand ungloved." In addition to this it is also worth while for Americans to know that according to the best etiquette they do not have to kiss the Queen's hand unless they want to.

SOMETHING RARE IN STATUARY.

THE bronze statue of a woman and other objects of antiquity have been found at Heraclea, in Pontus. The treasures will be sent to the Imperial Museum at Constantinople.

THE Egyptian Department of the Berlin Museum has recently acquired an important statue in wood of the ancient Empire. It was found to the right of the railway between Medinet el-Fayoum and Edwa.

A LARGE sarcophagus, with fine sculptures in relief and columns as part of the decoration, has been found in Samos, near Pountais. The English excavators at Dipylon, Attica, have found a relief which apparently belonged to a grave. It is about four feet high by two in width, and represents a woman in drapery with a vase in the right hand and the left raised.

COUNT ORSI DI BROGLIA DI MOMBELLO has been traveling on the Upper Orinoco. He found many rude carvings on stones in this region. Near the grotto of Caicara are rough carvings to imitate the figure of the South American "tiger," or jaguar; the caves contained mummies which seemed to the Count to bear a close resemblance to those of Egypt, particularly in the shape of the skulls.

THE committee appointed to complete the decorations of the Pantheon, Paris, having before them in situ a model of M. Rodin's statue of Victor Hugo, says the Athenæum, were struck by its inferiority in style, commonness of conception and triviality. This judgment was long ago anticipated by the more thoughtful order of critics, who now congratulate M. Rodin on the opportunity offered to him by the committee of trying again. The so-called "Triumph of the Republic," which was intended for the choir of the Pantheon, has been found to be out of proportion with the building.

THE statue to Houdon, the sculptor of Washington, will certainly be erected in his birthplace, Versailles. In 1771 Houdon made an enormous sensation with his statue of a flayed man, "l'Ecorche." Besides the Voltaire in the Theater Francais, he made statues of Jean Jacques Rousseau, Diderot, Mirabeau, Lafayette, Prince Galitzin and Catherine of Russia. He also revived the lost art of founding metal statues. In the Gaulois M. de Fourcaud claims that he forestalled (il a devance) Barye in the art of casting bronze and was much more at the disposition of rival sculptors. He defends him from the charge of having amassed riches by selling terra cotta copies of his portraits.

REGARDING HYPNOTISM.

Celestials Everywhere Are Beginning to Study Its Phenomena.

Mesmerism alias hypnotism, the latest scientific sensation of the hour, was a few years since denounced by the scientific world in unmeasured terms. No expressions of scornful contempt were strong enough to characterize those fearless torch-bearers of advanced thought, who, after patiently, earnestly and exhaustively investigating the alleged powers of Mesmer, proved beyond the possibility of a doubt the genuineness of the mesmeric or hypnotic influence.

They were charlatans, impostors or mentally unsound in the eyes, not only of the medical profession, but the scientific world, with some few notable exceptions. The more charitably disposed among the great conservative societies of scientific thinkers were content to regard those who believed in such "absurdities" as mermerism as "unduly credulous;" liable to be "duped;" and, therefore, not "safe" or "critical investigators."

Camille Flammarion, the illustrious French astronomer, in his recent remarkable novel "Uranie," tells us that fifteen years ago he communicated to several physicians the magnetic phenomena observed by himself in the course of many experiments. One and all denied most positively and absolutely the possibility of the facts related, but on meeting one of these same physicians at the Institute in Paris recently, he called his attention to his denial of the phenomena. "Oh!" replied the physician, not without shrewdness, "then it was magnetism, now it is hypnotism, and it is we who study it; that is a very different thing." The astronomer wisely adds by way of impressing the moral: "Let us deny nothing positively; let us study; let us examine; the explanation will come later."

A true scientist will take cognizance of the smallest fact, and though the light that floats before may appear a mere will-o'-the-wisp, he will follow it until he demonstrates by careful, impartial, and exhaustive investigation whether it rests on the bed-rock of truth or not, remembering that the prejudices of hoary thought and early training may blind him to sensible appreciation of the true significance of the problem that confronts him. It is not more than five years since a paper read on "Hypnotism" in the medical society of a leading American city was excluded from the report of the society's meeting, on the ground that the subject was unscientific and absurd.

Less than a year ago telepathy was as much an outcast in the scientific world as mesmerism was after the celebrated Bailey commission pronounced it a "fraud." Yet to-day telepathy, or thought transference, is as well established a scientific fact as hypnotism.

From present indications we are entering a new field of scientific discovery, or to be more explicit, the great body of scientific thinkers are expressing a willingness to recognize phenomena other than material, and to treat with a measure of respect the views and discoveries made by the patient heralds of psychic truths which have long been tabooed as little worthy the attention of the materialistic scientific investigator, whose eyes have been accustomed to rest on the earth, its rocks, plants and animals, as the myths of bygone days. The age of electrical invention has been so marvelous that men have ceased to wonder at the inventive ingenuity of man. The age of physchological discovery upon which we are now entering, if it be unrestricted and receive the careful and unbiased attention of our best brains, will, we believe, unfold a world of truth, eclipsing in its startling character as well as in its great utility the greatest discoveries since the manchild science was born, truths which will give to life a deeper significance, a richer meaning, a nobler impulse, a grander ideal.—Arena.

FUTURE OF WOMEN.

Mr. Gladstone Makes Some Eminently Sensible Remarks.

In the course of a brief address at a school for girls, where Mrs. Gladstone distributed the prizes, Mr. Gladstone said:

"That future of society is of enormous importance to the world. I think it is not uninteresting to recall, if I may be allowed to do it, a little anecdote, when some words were used to me more than fifty years ago by an eminent physician of that date—Dr. Farr, who lived in Charterhouse square. I went there on account of some affection of the eye, but he entered into general conversation about the political prospects of the country, and he said to me these words, which, I think, were full of sense, right feeling and wisdom: 'You may depend upon it, Mr. Gladstone, it is not the Whigs who will save the country, nor the Tories who will save the country: it is the mothers of England who will save the country.'

"I think that should be to every young wife the most cheering, the most consoling, and the most stimulating lesson that could be learned. The value and the importance of this thought are such that no new addition we can possibly make to woman's vocation can ever stand for a moment in comparison with their vital bearing upon the formation of character in every one of us. And what is the formation of character but that for which God sent us into the world? It is the sum and substance, the beginning and the ending of the whole matter, and it is the formation of character which is the pride and glory of women as teacher, but infinitely more as mother, to contribute."

What Could He Have Meant?

"Ethel," said a fond mother to her daughter, as the fair young girl sat down at a late breakfast in her morning gown, "did George leave any package for me last evening?"

Ethel blushed and said: falteringly: "Why, no, mamma! What made you ask?"

"O, nothing: only I heard Him say at the door as he said good-bye: 'Now, here is one more for your mother,' and I didn't know but what it was that pattern for lace-edging that his mother promised to send me."

Ethel said nothing.—Rare Bits.

THE form of the new German armored vessel Siegfried is very peculiar, giving her the appearance of a gigantic fish, yet she is said to have made sixteen knots.

THE military authorities at St. Petersburg have decreed that in future foreigners shall not be allowed to serve in the army unless they are willing to become Russian citizens.

THE German fleet is already so important that it stands at 139 vessels in a French estimate of effective naval forces, which gives only 161 to France. Italy comes before it with 152 vessels, Russia before Italy with 185 and England before all of them with 383.

GREAT disappointment is expressed in naval circles at the remarkable loss of speed exhibited by our ocean cruisers. The Baltimore averaged only seven knots an hour on her visit to Sweden, and on a run from Hawaii to the Pacific coast the Charleston barely made eight knots.

SINCE 1857 England's small wars have cost her about $110,000,000. The war with China in 1857-69 cost her $30,000,000; the Abyssinian expedition in 1867-70, $41,500,000; the South African war in 1879-80, $14,000,000; the Nile expedition in 1884-5, $6,250,000; the Afghan war, between 1880 and 1886, $15,000,000.

THE cruisers Chicago and Boston are to have their bottoms painted with two kinds of anti-barnacle, non corrosive mixture before they leave the navy yard again. The object of putting on two kinds of paint is to test their relative merits as to preventing the pitting of the plates and the development of seaweed and other marine growths on the submerged portions of the hull.

PENDING the manufacture and distribution of new and rifled ordnance by Uncle Sam to his sea-coast fortifications, it becomes the duty twice a year at these posts to raise Ned with the old war-time fifteen-inch smooth-bores. San Francisco skippers have lately been dodging the sand-laden shells from Alcatraz. The missiles weigh three hundred and fifty pounds, and would simply obliterate a small craft.

A DESPERADO SHOT

Ex-Mayor Cottrell Meets His Doom in Alabama.

KILLED BY A CHIEF OF POLICE

He Insulted the Official and Challenged Him to Fight a Duel.

Perforated With Buckshot From a Double-Barrelled Gun—Crowds Watch Him Die on the Sidewalk—He Had Been Drinking Heavily—His Reign of Terror at Cedar Keys, Florida.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 7.—At 11 a. m. Chief of Police A. S. Gerald shot and instantly killed William W. Cottrell of Cedar Keys, Florida. The shooting occurred in front of the office of the Chief of Police. Cottrell was shot twice with a double-barreled shot gun, one load taking effect in his body and the other through the face, entering on the left cheek and passing out through the eye, tearing the eyeball out.

Cottrell had been in the city several days and was drinking. Last night he was arrested on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. He was afterwards released, but left police headquarters indignant and vowing vengeance against the police and particularly Gerald.

Challenge from Cottrell.

Gerald's friends went to him and told him Cottrell was looking for him, and cautioned him not to go on the streets as they feared a meeting between the two. Gerald remained in his office, and sometime during the morning received a challenge from Cottrell to fight a duel. The chief paid no attention to the challenge, but remained at the office till Cottrell, accompanied by a friend, rode up to police headquarters at 11 o'clock, when the shooting occurred.

Crowds Watch Him Die.

The crowd soon gathered around his form as it lay in front of the police office. His feet and body lay upon the sidewalk, while his head and shoulders lay upon the platform of the city scales. The first shot passed through his body, and the second through the face, either of which would have proved fatal. He was still gasping when the crowds began gathering. His right hand pocket was turned half outside indicating that he had his hand in his pocket when he approached the chief of police. A gold-headed cane lay by his side.

Chief Gerard, soon after the shooting, entered his office, and passing out the rear door, got in a buggy and was driven to the sheriff's office, where he gave himself up.

A coroner's jury of inquest was empanelled to investigate the killing, and gave a verdict in accordance with the above facts.

The Cedar Keys Sensation.

Cottrell was one of the most widely known men in the country. He created a sensation about 12 months ago at Cedar Keys, Fla., by terrorizing Federal custom house officials and the citizens of that place. He fled from there to Londes County, in this State, where he had many relatives and friends. He was of one of the best families in Alabama, and when sober was regarded as an excellent citizen, but when under the influence of drink was reckless and desperate. He was married eight months ago to a daughter of Congressman Henderson of North Carolina.

FARWELL'S SUCCESSOR.

The Illinois Senator Thinks Gen. Palmer is the Coming Man.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—There is great uncertainty in this State about the control of the new Legislature. The Democratic State Central Committee says that the Legislature on joint assembly will stand 101 Republicans, 101 Democrats and two Farmers' Alliance representatives. One of the Alliance, Moore of the Forty-fourth district, has said that he will affiliate with the Democrats on a party measure, but he will not vote for Palmer for U. S. Senator. The Democrats hope to gain another representative in Hardin county, where the returns are yet incomplete. This would give Gen. Palmer a majority of one on joint ballot.

Judging from the latest returns Senator Farwell says he will not be the next Senator from Illinois, but that Gen. John M. Palmer will succeed to those honors.

Balfour's Coercion Policy.

DUBLIN, Nov. 7.—During Chief Secretary Balfour's visit to Dangio, Mr. MacNeill, M. P. for South Donegal, declared to him that his efforts to better the condition of the country would be fruitless unless coercion were abolished. Mr. Balfour, in reply, smilingly referred to the enthusiasm with which he had been received everywhere as a justification of his policy.

Judge Haight's Campaign Expenses.

ALBANY, N.Y., Nov. 7.—Supreme Court Judge Albert Haight was the first political candidate to file his list of expenses with the Secretary of State. He is from the 8th Judicial District, and estimates his expenses at $1,200, which money was sent by check to the several Republican County Committees to pay for pasters.

The Result in Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 7.—Half the townships in the State in their returns show an average Democratic gain of twenty to the township. This will make the State Democratic by about 20,000. The Democrats elect 11 out of 13 Congressmen. The Legislature will be Democratic on joint ballot by 68.

Sarah's Son to Fight a Duel for Her.

PARIS, Nov. 7.—Sarah Bernhardt, considering herself insulted by some remarks in the Courier Francais newspapet, sent her son to challenge the author. The duel will be fought to-day.

PATRIOTS WELCOMED.

The Visiting Irishmen Greeted by a Large Audience in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien, the Irish leaders, were given their first public reception in America at the Academy of Music, in this city last night, a large and enthusiastic crowd being present.

Col. A. K. McClure, editor of the Philadelphia Times, presided at the meeting and Postmaster John Field acted as treasurer. The Academy was elaborately decorated with the National colors of America and Ireland. On each side of the stage large oil portraits of Gladstone and Parnell were hung. Pictures of Irish heroes and shields with Irish mottoes were conspicuous among the decorations.

The Irish-American clubs paraded in a body with torch lights and escorted the guests from their hotel to the Academy. The immense building was crowded in every part and on the stage sat many prominent citizens of Philadelphia.

Archbishop Ryan occupied a private box, and Mrs. Parnell, the mother of the Irish leader, was also present. All of the male members of the party made addresses, the principal speeches being made by Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien, who gave vivid accounts of the suffering in Ireland, and described the vigorous coercive measures in operation there. The call for pecuniary aid from the friends of Ireland resulted in the production by Mr. Field of a subscription list which footed up $12,865.71. The announcement of this amount produced great enthusiasm.

Another meeting will be held at the Academy to-night, at which Governor Beaver will preside.

BIRCHALL'S SCAFFOLD.

The Contract Let for Erecting the Instrument of Death.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 7. — Birchall exhibits considerable anxiety as to the result of the application for mercy in his case. He asked a number of questions as to what kind of a man the Minister of Justice was, the distance to Ottawa, etc., and eagerly scanned the newspapers for news from there.

Although he has only a little over a week to live, he still maintains the same cheerfulness that has characterized his jail life since confinement. Some times he talks of his death, but it is without any apparent dread. He says he does not fear the execution as much for himself as he does for his wife.

The contract for the erection of the scaffold has been let, and its construction will be commenced at once.

Chief Justice Coleridge in Danger.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—While presiding over the Court of the Queen's Bench Division during the morning Lord Chief Justice Coleridge was stricken with paralysis. He was promptly conveyed to an anteroom, where he was found to be in so precarious a condition that his wife was summoned to his side. It has been ascertained by the doctors that Lord Coleridge is suffering from a severe attack of gastritis.

Gov. Hill's Secretary Married.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Col. Edmund L. Judson, military secretary to Governor Hill, was married at noon to Miss Marion E. Lathrop, daughter of the late Ralph Lathrop. The Governor attended the reception later on. His gift to the bride was a costly gold watch and chain. The case of the watch is studded with diamonds, and the charm has a large diamond embedded in its face.

Murderer Decker Captured.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 7.—W. E. Decker, who murdered Nellie E. Foster, last Friday night, was arrested last night in the town of Catlin, 12 miles from this city. The arrest was made by Samuel Forker, an ex-policeman, who had been running a farm. Decker made no resistance. He had been living in the woods since the murder. Decker admits the shooting but is trying the insanity dodge.

Injured While Celebrating.

GREENFIELD, Mass., Nov. 7.—While the celebration in honor of the election of Russell as Governor was in progress at Millers Falls, a spark from a bonfire landed in a bowl of powder near which were men engaged in loading a cannon. The powder exploded fatally burning Harry Robinson of Windsor, Vt., and seriously injuring John A. Griffin and Andrew Kirbie of Millers Falls.

Eloped With the Boarder.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 7.—Mrs. Daniel Krumb, of Sayreville, this county, deserted her husband and three children and eloped with a boarder named George Goring. The woman left a letter which told her husband that he need not look for her return, as she had decided to go to St. Louis. Goring suddenly left the village on Tuesday.

Shot an Oxford Professor.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—A sensational shooting affray just occurred at Oxford. A lady, whose name has not been learned, fired two shots from a revolver at James Franck Bright, D. D., master of University College, the second bullet penetrating his side and inflicting a serious wound. The would-be assassin escaped.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

A Variety of Reasons for the Result of Tuesday.

WHAT THE FARMERS CLAIM.

The Alliance Secretary Gives a Warning to Both Parties.

Senator Gorman's Sentiments—Republicans Explain the Defeat—Two Possible Presidential Tickets for '92—The President Pardons a Deserter—Very Few Prominent Statesmen at the Capital.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Now that the results of the election are fairly known, the question of what caused the defeat is being discussed by politicians of all parties in the city, and the reasons given are many and varied.

Secretary Rittenhouse of the Farmers' Alliance party says that the result is all due to that organization, and that because the farmers voted the Democratic ticket this year it is no criterion that they will do so in the next. He says that if the Democratic do not increase the volume of currency they will receive the same kind of treatment in 1892. He further claims that if the two great parties do not give the farmers what they desire the farmers will elect their own House and Senate in 1892.

The Democrats attribute their victory solely to the Elections bill and to the McKinley bill. Senator Gorman voiced these sentiments in an interview to-day, but in conclusion, when he was asked by a reporter whether he believed this victory would be lasting, and if it would give the Democrats the next President, he replied that if they were cautious and conservative they might expect a long lease of power.

The Republicans generally lay their defeat to the fact that the importers advanced the prices immediately upon the passage of the McKinley bill without any just cause, and that therefore Republicans did not have time to explain this increase in prices before election day arrived. The President and those members of the Cabinet in the city naturally decline to discuss the outcome, and there were but few other prominent leaders here.

TWO TICKETS FOR '92.

Pattison and Hill and McKinley and Reed Presidential Possibilities.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Gen. George A. Sheridan, the Republican orator, in an interview published here, says that Pattison's election as Governor of Pennsylvania, makes him a distinct Presidential possibility.

"I think, indeed," says Gen. Sheridan, "that he will be the nominee of his party and that the ticket will read 'Pattison and Hill.' Think of Pattison's wonderful record: twice city comptroller of Philadelphia and twice Governor.

"What will our ticket be? Major McKinley will be elected Governor of Ohio in 1891 by an immense majority, and nobody else will be thought of for the first place, and so the ticket will read 'McKinley and Reed.' There you are: Pattison and Hill, McKinley and Reed."

Another Candidate for the Speakership.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—A special dispatch from St. Louis says that Congressman W. H. Hatch, who has been re-elected in the First Missouri District, announces himself as a candidate for Speaker of the House of Representatives. He bases his candidacy on the fact that Missouri has a solid Democratic delegation whom he believes are willing to support him; that a number of other members re-elected have requested him to enter the contest, and that he believes himself eminently fitted for the position.

Spain Will Await Developments.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—A cable dispatch from Madrid says it is denied by the Ministerial press that the Minister of Spain to the United States has been instructed to open negotiations for a special treaty with that country relative to the Spanish West Indies. They assert, on the contrary, that the Government will await developments. It cannot afford to sacrifice home interests to please the colonists.

Refuses to Allow a Recount.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Secretary Noble has replied to Mayor Grant's last application for a recount of the population of New-York city, and for the second time refuses to allow the recount.

A Deserter Pardoned.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The President has granted a pardon in the case of Henry H. Curtis, of Red Bank, N. J., charged with desertion from the army.

Arrested for Malpractice.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 7.—Dr. James Leonard has been arrested on a charge of abortion. His wife, Mrs. Hattie Leonard, and Mrs. Elizabeth Count were arrested as accessories. They were held in $3,000 bail each for the grand jury.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

A Woman Kills One of Her Children and Cuts Her Own Throat.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—A terrible tragedy is reported from West Philadelphia. A mother, undoubtedly crazy on religion, killed one of her children, attempted to murder another, and then tried to end her own life.

The woman's name was Mrs. Joseph Lambrecht, and her husband is in the employ of the Philadelphia Traction Company. Mrs. Lambrecht called her husband to breakfast about 6 o'clock, and after he finished the meal he started for his work. He had barely left his home when his wife caught up a large butcher knife, and brandishing it over her head, ran from one room to another, muttering incoherently and declaring that she wanted to go to heaven.

Mary, her six-year-old daughter, had come down stairs to bid her father goodby, and she was the first of her seven children whom the crazy mother saw. Catching the little child up in her arms she forced the child's head back, and then deliberately drew the knife across her throat. Then she dropped the little one to the floor and made her way to the room occupied by herself and husband, and in which her six-months-old babe was lying asleep in the bed. She quickly drew the knife across the infant's throat and then called to the neighbor's for assistance. When they arrived the babe was dead and the mother lay beside it with a gaping wound in her throat.

Mrs. Lambrecht died shortly after being taken to the hospital.

STILL IN DOUBT.

Both Parties Claiming the New Hampshire Legislature.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 7.—Returns from all but nine small towns give Tuttle, Rep., for Governor, 40,586; Amsden, Dem., 40,000; Fletcher, Pro., 1,272. The Republicans have elected Councillors in the 3d and 4th Districts, and the Democrats carry the 5th. Both claim the 1st. There is no choice in the 2d.

The Republicans claim 13 Senators and concede eight to the Democrats, with no choice in the remaining three. The Democrats claim 10, concede 12 to the Republicans, and say there is no choice in the other two. The Republicans claim 10 to 20 majority in the House, and the Democrats claim from 2 to 16.

The result will hinge upon the question of admission of members elected under the new census apportionment and "classed towns" where population has decreased. A good deal depends upon the course taken by the Republican clerk of the last House, who makes up the roll.

A Reputed World Beater.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 7.—Ten thousand people cheered the reputed world beater, Howard Cassard, as she was successfully launched at Locust Point. The ways spread and broke as the vessel went off, which momentarily shifted her temporary ballast. She was immediately righted but not before having, partly at least, proven the assertion that she cannot be capsized. It is claimed that this iron steamship, which is constructed on the Fryer plan for the Arrow Steamship Co., is capable of making 35 miles an hour and will revolutionize ship building.

Bogus Medical Diplomas.

NEWBURY, Vt., Nov. 7.—An exposure of the "Union Medical Institute" of this place is causing widespread excitement. It is said that the so-called "institute" has sold diplomas for $50 a piece in the West, and upon whose catalogue are given the names of incompetent men as professors with fictitious degrees. It is claimed that the evidence of fraud against the promoters of the scheme is so great that the matter has been taken up by prominent gentlemen of this State and put in the hands of lawyers.

Arraigned on a New Charge.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Mrs. Cornelia V. E. Miller, who has been prominent of late as one of the two bankers' wives, said to have brought stolen money from London into this country, was rearraigned before Commissioner Shields on a new charge—that of having brought into this country the sum of £28,000 belonging to Henry Hogge and others of London. Extradition is now sought on this, the original £7,000 complaint having been dismissed.

Koch and Schrotter's Consumption Cure.

BERLIN Nov. 7.—Professor Koch has formally promised to make public property of the secret of his treatment for the cure of consumption by inoculation. He seeks no personal advantage through the discovery. Prof. Schrotter of Vienna, who asserts that he discovered, independently of Koch, a cure for consumption, will explain his method at a meeting of the Society of Physicians.

New Labor Organization.

BOSTON, Nov. 7.—Several men who were formerly prominent in the Steam Railroad Men's Protective Union, have organized the International Brotherhood of Railway Employes. Its object is to secure legislation and it is not intended to infringe upon the territory of the distinctively trades brotherhoods, such as engineers, firemen and brakemen.

Pugilist Godfrey's Opponent.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—George Godfrey, the colored heavyweight, who is to meet Ed Smith of Colorado in a glove contest at the Puritan Athletic Club next week, has never seen Smith, and the reports of the latter's prowess have occasioned the darkey considerable anxiety.

No Tariff Agreement Permitted.

PARIS, Nov. 7.—The Customs Committee, by a majority of 13, has empowered the government to conclude commercial conventions, but without any mention of tariffs therein.

Mills for Speaker.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Many leading Democratic papers of the West are already booming Roger Q. Mills for the Speakership of the next Congress.

STANLEY'S ANSWER

He Speaks Very Reluctantly of Major Barttelot.

A MAN THOROUGHLY HATED

Shot by a Chief Whose Wife He Beat for Singing.

Troup's Charges Refuted—No Immorality in the Camp—He Denies that He Went as an Agent of England—His Mission to Take Provisions to Emin—The Story Will Come Out.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Mr. Henry M Stanley and his wife were literally besieged by callers during the day, but beyond a few warm personal friends and some newspaper men, Mr. Stanley saw no one. He consented to tell his version of the story of Major Barttelot's tragic death, and the fortune of the expedition under Barttelot's charge.

"I selected Major Barttelot," he said, because he was recommended to me by a Mr. Fitzgerald of the Indian Office, and because he was a young man of pluck and an experienced traveler. Of his infirmity of temper I knew nothing, and when I learned of it the damage had been done.

Stanley speaks reluctantly of Major Barttelot. He does not question the courage of the Major, but intimates that he was an impracticable man and wholly unfit for the position. His temperament, his peculiarities, rendered him unpopular both with his brother officers and the natives. In a word, he was thoroughly well hated and became more and more so until the crisis came, when he cruelly beat the chief's wife and was shot by her husband.

A Record of Punishment.

Mr. Stanley said, in answer to Troup's statement of the horrible condition of the people in the camp:

"If you look in 'Darkest Africa' you will find that the log book is very mild, but I have made probably a hundred excisions. The original log book, signed by Major Barttelot, James S. Jameson and William Bonny day after day, is simply just one record of remorseless and implacable punishment. There were records of fearful ulcers."

"Were they the result of punishment?"

"Simply remorseless flogging. Then there is Soudi, whom he mentions himself as a nice, obedient boy, a quiet child. He gave that little boy a kick from which he died. Another man had been flogged to death and died at the triangle. Two other men were flogged to death. Another man, made desperate by his hunger, takes a piece of meat which was standing temptingly by and eats it raw. He is sentenced to 300 lashes by Major Barttelot; 150 are given him and the doctor says: 'Stop, sir; you'll kill him.' The answer is: 'Put him under arrest and let him remain in guard until he recovers and he'll get the other 150 yet.' The man hears that and runs away by night. He snatches a rifle and runs into the forest to lose himself. Barttelot sends the entire country hunting for him. He is brought back and he is shot. In the log book as it appears in 'Darkest Africa' it says all the men came forward to complain. But what did they complain of? Sixty men just able to walk, 42 men dying right on their feet. They all did die. All these men are my officers. They don't belong to the Committee, but were engaged by me, and I asked Mr. Bonny: 'Well, you tell me all these horrible things and these poor people here have told me; how can I possibly exempt you from being just as guilty as Barttelot in that you did not stop him one way or another, by moral or physical force, from doing all these things?' Bonny said to me that he had not told me half."

Not an Agent of England.

Mr. Stanley said he did not go to Africa as an agent of England, said he brought provisions for Emin, and concluded a long interview by saying: "The whole story will come out some day, and the only way to have all brought out is to summon us all to a court of law, where every one could be examined and cross-examined.

Fresh Convicts to Christianity Murdered.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 7.—At the close of a Buddhist festival in the province of Se Chuen the excited religionists were led by fanatics to attack villages in which numbers of natives had been converted to Christianity by the missionaries. These places were burned and plundered by organized mobs, and twenty of the converts were killed, their bodies being thrown into the Yangtse Kiang.

Connecticut Still in Doubt.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 7.—The State ticket is yet in doubt, and the probabilities are that nothing short of the official count will fairly determine the result. Neither the State Central Committee nor the several newspapers which have received returns can agree on the figures.

A Seat in Congress to be Contested.

ALTOONA, Pa., Nov. 7.—In the 20th Congressional District, where Scull, Rep., has a majority of about 500, Greevy, the Democratic candidate, will contest on the allegation of fraud.

Chancellor Goff Dying.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 7.—Milton B. Goff, Chancellor of the Western University, who recently broke his leg, is lying at his home in Allegheny at the point of death.

A Town on Fire.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Nov. 7.—A telephone message received from Owensboro, Ky., states that the town is on fire. The fire is burning next door to the telephone office.

HE WAS A MILLIONAIRE.

Career of L. A. Robinson Who Was Found Dead in Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—L. A. Robinson, who was found dead in his bed in Brooklyn, was a retired millionaire tanner, and made the most of his fortune near Honesdale, Pa., where he owned and conducted for many years what was for a long time the largest tannery in the world. When hemlock bark became exhausted hereabouts, he abandoned the tannery and retired from business.

He made his home at the St. Nicholas Hotel, New York, for years, and about 20 years ago brought a suit against the proprietors of that hotel which led to the passage of the present law of New York State limiting and defining the responsibility of hotel keepers as to the property of guests. Thieves had entered Mr. Robinson's room in the hotel and money and valuables amounting to several thousands of dollars were stolen.

Mr. Robinson sued the proprietors of the St. Nicholas Hotel to recover the value of the stolen property. The case was carried to the court of last resort, and was decided in favor of Mr. Robinson. This established a precedent that led to the passage of the present hotel law.

Mr. Robinson left an estate worth $7,000,000. His uncle, the Hon. E. P. Strong, himself a wealthy tanner of Starrucca, this county, inherits $1,000,000 of it. The remainder is divided among seven other uncles. The tannery where Mr. Robinson made his money, five miles from Honesdale, was burned to the ground a few years ago, and the spot has grown up thick with underbrush, and is a retreat for wild animals.

THE NEW YORK CONTEST.

Gov. Hill's Secretary Claims 68 Members in the Next Assembly.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Colonel Williams, Governor Hill's secretary, says the Democrats have 68 members sure in the next Assembly and will probably gain one more. This one is in the 11th District of Kings County, which, if carried by the Democrats, will give a solid Democratic delegation from Kings County. Advices from the 11th District of Kings County show that the Democratic candidate has a slight majority.

Colonel Williams thinks an official count will be required to determine the result in the 1st Dutchess District and in the Montgomery County District.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The striking salesmen of the six large clothing stores of Pittsburg, Pa., won their strike.

Hiram Bassett, said to be the highest Free Mason in the world, died at Millersburg, Ky., last night.

At a special meeting of the Palmer, Mass., Carpet Company the stockholders voted to go into voluntary insolvency.

Three bodies have been taken from the wrecks of the Vizcaya and Cornelius Hargraves and brought to New York.

The Russian Government has exiled to Siberia Fathers Dmochovski and Tendrezewski for spreading the Catholic faith.

Louis M. Nuttmin of Jersey City has been appointed a cadet to West Point with Harold W. Armstrong of Mont Clair, N. J., as alternate.

George F. Pierce, local accountant of the branch of the Iron Hall at Spencer, Mass., charged with embezzlement, has been put under $500 bonds.

The Getty House (Yonkers, N. Y.) suicide was evidently a Boston tailor in hard luck. Speculator Perrin H. Sumner has received a remarkable letter signed "J. H. Edgar."

A later estimate of the loss by the burning of the Wells elevator at Buffalo, N. Y., places it at about half a million. The elevator is said to have been valued at $300,000, and the contents at $225,000.

Mrs. Jane Wheiranch, a society woman of Helmetta, N. J., while crossing the track of the Pennsylvania Railroad near her home, was struck by a locomotive and had both legs cut off. She will die. Her sister, who was with her, was also struck and slightly injured.

John P. Murphy, a leather dealer on High street, Boston, was arrested at his home in North Stoughton, Mass., charged with embezzling $10,227.15 from John Hummel & Son, of Philadelphia, dealers in finished leather, whose Boston business has been managed by the accused.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—New bargains at Edsall's special sale, to-morrow. So reads his advertisement.

—The regular evening service at the Seventh-Day Baptist church will be adjourned this evening so as not to interfere with the Mills meeting.

—Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will give a bazar, in aid of the relief fund, at Amphion Hall, Nov. 11-15. An attractive programme will be provided.

—A locomotive blew out a cylinder head at the North avenue station of the Jersey Central Railroad, last night, and caused quite a long delay of trains.

—Dr. W. R. Bell has made Whitlock & Hulick his sole agents in Somerset and Union counties for his famous Excelsior metal paint, and presents a card to the public in another column.

—The brutal whipping of a horse at Westfield has caused the State Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to appoint a Westfield special agent, and as the new agent is a woman good work may be expected.

—At a meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., held last evening, Past Councilor G. S. Martin was elected representative to the Funeral Benefit Association to fill the unexpired term of P. H. Bennett, resigned.

—The whole county is to unite in a public demonstration, to celebrate the people's victory. It will be held in Elizabeth probably next Tuesday. There will be a torch light procession, fire-works, and a mass meeting in the Opera House.

—A discount pass-book is one of the latest attractions offered by R. W. Rice & Co., grocers of the borough, who also offer a full line of new goods for the Fall and Winter trade. The firm have an interesting advertisement elsewhere in THE PRESS.

—On Monday evening the season will open with a dance at Amphion Hall under the management of the same gentlemen who have conducted the successful balls at Mt. Bethel. There will be fine music and every arrangement for the pleasure of all who attend.

—Ex-Senator Carpenter, of Clinton, Hunterdon county, the new proprietor of The Daily Times at New Brunswick, is infusing vigorous life into that property, and is making New Brunswick's only Democratic newspaper the most popular publication in town. Besides improving it greatly in many other ways he has given it a handsome new dress of type, and has reduced its selling price from two cents to one cent a copy, so that no one need be too poor to buy it every night.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis returned Wednesday night from Chicago, where he has been attending the meeting of the Denominational Council.

Henry Blumer, a former City Treasurer of New Brunswick, died at the home of his son-in-law, J. V. F. Ryerson, Somerset street, yesterday, at the age of 77.

The marriage is announced of Christopher Angerbauer, of this city, and Miss May McKay, of Toronto, Canada. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Parker, of Scotch Plains, on Thursday, Oct. 9.

The prettiest decoration of the whole parade at Westfield, yesterday, was Master Russell Marsh perched on top of the chemical engine with his golden hair shining even brighter in the sunlight than the copper and silver beneath him.

Mr. and Mrs. B. K. Case, Miss Emma Case, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Charles VanWinkle and Mr. and Mrs. Robinson Pound, of this city, were among the guests at the twentieth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Vail, Westfield, last Friday evening.

Bishop John Heyl Vincent, formerly of Plainfield, has been appointed to preside at the following Methodist Episcopal Conferences: Missouri, Brookfield, March 4; Central Missouri, Marshal, Mo., March 12; St. Louis Conference, Springfield, Mo., March 18. The New Jersey Conference will meet at Trenton March 18, with Bishop Fitzgerald presiding. The Newark Conference, of which the Plainfield church is a member, will meet at Washington, Warren county, April 8, Bishop Mallalieu presiding.

Both Cattle and Statistics Destroyed.

The destructive fire at the State experiment farm, New Brunswick, Sunday night, put an end not only to the lives of many valuable cattle, but to a series of highly interesting and valuable experiments. These experiments were intended to determine the relative value of the various breeds of cattle, especially for the use of farmers and milk raisers. The experiments were being conducted with the greatest care, the amount of feed given to each animal, and the resultant products, being carefully noted under varying conditions. The tables already published have been of much value, but the ultimate results would have determined, as never before, what kind of cattle it would be best for New Jersey farmers to keep.

Accidents will happen, so that all will catch cold sometimes. You want to find relief by the easiest and best methods. The most effectual way is to take Hires' Cough Cure. In whooping cough and croup nothing equals it. Every family should keep this remedy in the house handy in case of emergency.

HUNDREDS OF CONVERTS TO CHRIST

Evangelist Mills Already Reaping a Bounteous Harvest.—Results of the Great Revival.

More than one hundred new converts last night signified to the Rev. B. Fay Mills their desire to lead henceforth a Christian life, and most of these, with other penitents, will soon identify themselves with membership in Plainfield churches.

The evening meeting of Thursday again taxed to its utmost the seating-capacity of the First Baptist church, and many late-comers were obliged to stand. A new and welcome face on the platform, by the side of Mr. Mills, was that of the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, who had just returned from the West. He offered a fervent opening prayer. The singing of Mr. Greenwood and his large choir was again excellent, and the service of song aroused a vast depth of religious fervor. Mr. Greenwood's chant—"Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson they shall be as wool" — was especially affecting, and added much to the intensity of feeling among the people.

Mr. Mills was the same earnest preacher whose inspired teachings found such eager listeners at his first meeting here Monday night. His text, chosen from the book of Isaiah, fifty-fifth chapter, and seventh verse, was "Let the wicked forsake his way," and from it he preached a sermon of wonderful power. The wicked man, he said, was to be found both in and out of the church. The wicked man was one who, no matter what his professions of morality and religion, was not as good a man as he ought to be, one who was not everything that he might be. And this gracious invitation to forsake sin and to come to Christ,—found in that beauteous chapter, "Ho everyone that thirsteth"—was extended to all such erring men, that they might become possessed of the righteousness which brings abundant eternal blessings.

Let the wicked forsake his way!—forsake his way!—the preacher continued, analyzing the words of the text, and dwelling on their deepest meaning.—Forsake! forsake!—oh, word of infinite pathos! We pass along the country road, and we see a house whose blinds are closed, whose doors are fastened, from whose chimney no smoke from cheerful hearth-fire arises. We say "The good man has gone away, but will soon return." A little farther, and we see a house whose chimney has fallen down, whose timbers are dismantled, whose window panes are shattered. Rank weeds abound; thistles and thorns are sprung up. The mark of desolation is upon the structure and its surroundings everywhere. And we say, and the saying brings a sadness with it, "The good man of the house has gone into a far-off country; he will never return; the old homestead is forsaken." Let the wicked forsake his way—cast off his sin—cast off his sin forever.

Let the wicked forsake his way. Many there be who are ready to thrust at the sins of others—to say "I am not proud; but yonder man, he is proud. I am not lustful; but yonder man, he is lustful." But many there be who, saying "he is vain," are themselves a prey to evil passions; and many there be who, saying "he is a man of unlawful craving," are themselves puffed up with an awful pride. Let the wicked recognize the sins within himself, and seeing them, cast them out, with the help of God, forever.

Let the wicked forsake his way. An ocean vessel battles with the tempest, and the affrighted sailor tosses away the meaner portions of the cargo, and never sees them again. The storm continues, and the ship is still freighted too heavily. But there is nothing left to cast adrift but the costly bales of goods which mean thousands of dollars of gain or loss. Human life is precious, but these things are precious too. A sordid love is aroused. The men aboard the imperilled ship feel that they cannot part from these fabrics, worth so much in gold, and so, in the hope that the storm will pass speedily, and leave them in safety, they tie strong ropes to the bundles, and let them float at a distance. The good ship weathers the storm, the sun shines once more, and the sailors greedily seize hold of the ropes attached to their prizes and pull back the treasure from the waste of waters. Just so there are men who cling to treasured sins. When the storm of adversity assail their human plans and the tempest of God's wrath threatens their eternal future, they repent themselves of a portion of their wickedness, and cry out in anguish. But deep in their own selfish hearts they treasure their darling sins—the sins they love—and when the clouds have disappeared they return to their wickedness and continue in a depth of sin which means an eternity of death.

A bright little maiden, spending a few days away from home, refused, the first day, to take any dessert. "My mamma does n't want me to eat pie"—she said. Everyone thought that that was beautiful. Here was a girl so good that she would obey her mother's wishes whether she was under mamma's watchful eye or away from it. But the next day, to the surprise of her hostess, this good little girl ate pie. "How is it"—was asked—"that you eat pie to-day, but took none yesterday?" "Oh,"—was the naive response—"I didn't like that kind of pie."

The murmur of laughter that greeted this little anecdote gave way to a subdued silence when the evangelist, in the most solemn earnestness, thrust the lesson home to his hearers that they must not forsake only the sins for which they cared but little, but the sins which they loved, as well.

I beseech you,—he said—forsake the sins you cherish—forsake your darling sins. The storm-cloud lowers above the wicked man,

"And lips say 'God be merciful!'
Which ne'er said 'God be praised!'"

But the storm is at an end, and the wicked man returns again to his way. He has not forsaken it; he still cherishes it. But if he do not forsake it, and forsake it utterly, there is no joy ahead for him. Be not so wedded to your desires that you cannot spare them. You must spare them, or your future is one of joyless desolation and woe.

Let each one—the preacher concluded—say to-night to God, "I will forsake my way. Teach me to know my fault. Renew within me a pure heart. The paths of wickedness which knew me once shall know me no more forever. I have have forsaken my sins for all eternity."

An appeal from the evangelist asking those who had determined to forsake their sins, to arise, brought more than three-fourths of the entire multitude spontaneously to their feet, and the preacher led them in an earnest prayer for divine guidance.

Before bringing the meeting to a close Mr. Mills left the congregation for a few minutes and met in the parlor below two hundred or more who were desirous of consecrating themselves to the service of Christ. An impressive gathering was this. The entire people prostrated themselves on their knees before God, and from lip to lip passed the earnest, heartfelt prayer, "Lord, I give myself to Thee: take me as I am?" The pastors of the local churches uttered a word of cheer to the penitents, and more than one hundred presented their names with the desire to lead henceforth a Christian life. During this temporary absence of Mr. Mills, Mr. Greenwood conducted the meeting upstairs, where hymns were sung, and prayers were offered for those in the meeting below. Mr. Hemingway, formerly General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association in Chicago, told of the good work Mr. Mills had done in that city and its neighborhood.

The morning and afternoon meetings continue to be attended by throngs of people. The business men's meeting of to-morrow morning will be conducted by F. H. Andrews, in the Young Men's Christian Association rooms at 7:30. The topic will be "Prayer for Friends"—Job XLII: 10. The woman's prayer meeting, in the lecture room of the First Baptist church, at 2:45 P. M., will be on the same topic.

Sunday Mr. Mills will conduct a meeting for men, young men and boys, in the First Baptist church, at 10:30 A. M.; at 3:45 P. M. he will conduct a meeting for young people; at 7:30 P. M. a meeting for all classes. Sunday meetings for women will be held at the Crescent Avenue and Methodist churches at 10:30 A. M., to be conducted by local pastors. Monday evening, at 7:30, a Union meeting, addressed by Mr. Mills, will be held in the Crescent Avenue church. Mr. Greenwood and his large choir will sing.

HYMENEAL.

Reed—Compton.

The wedding of Miss Sophia Dall Compton and Dr. J. Howard Reed took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Halstead Compton, last evening, the Rev. Dr. Gallaudet of St. Ann's Episcopal church, New York, officiating.

The wedding was a very charming one. The bridesmaids were Miss Josephine Compton, sister of the bride, and Miss Hattie Middleton, cousin of the groom.

The bride wore a handsome costume of white ottoman silk, trimmed with brocade, and a veil. She carried a bouquet of white bride's roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Her ornaments were diamonds, including a magnificent crescent of the gems. The maids wore pink surah, and carried pink roses. The ushers' badge was a spray of lilies-of-the-valley. The bride's gift to each of her maids was a dainty Cupid's arrow of gold, set with diamonds and pearls.

The marriage ceremony was performed amid a bower of potted plants and chrysanthemums. The bridal couple entered the parlors while the sweet strains of the wedding march sounded from the distance.

The floral decorations at the wedding banquet were very elaborate and beautiful, and the supper itself was a grand affair. The number of guests was very large, and the display of gifts unusually handsome.

The happy couple have gone South on a wedding trip. They will be "at home" Thursdays, after December 1, at their new home, St. Nicholas avenue and One hundred and twenty-fifth street, New York city.

Old Comrades Express Their Esteem and Loss.

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Ruler of the Universe to call our esteemed Brother, Wm. E. Jones, to final rest, we bow in humble submission to His divine will who doeth all things for the best: but we feel we have lost an esteemed, honorable, worthy citizen and brother who, in his daily life, in acts of kindness, and genial presence, had always endeared himself to us; and we deem it fitting to bear testimony of our esteem and regard for him, therefore:

RESOLVED, That the members of the Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association attend his funeral in a body, and tender to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy, and be it further

RESOLVED, That these preambles and resolutions be spread in our minutes, a copy sent to the family, and published in the Central Times and PRESS.

IN THE ROCKAWAY VALLEY.

The Patriarch, and the Matriarch, as Pioneers From Plainfield.

POTTERSVILLE, Nov. 2, 1890.

DEAR EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Perhaps we can hardly be entitled to the cognomen of "Pioneers," for others have been to this delightful region before us, but so far as we can discover, few Plainfielders have wandered on the banks of the swiftly flowing Black River. Our esteemed fellow citizen, that successful fisherman, Andrew Vanderbeek, the elder, has cast his graceful line in its rippling waters, but to the excursionist and the Summer boarder this is an almost undiscovered country. A few select families have been coming here for years, but its hitherto great inaccessibility has kept its treasures hidden from the very much greater part of our sixty-two millions of population. All this is to be changed, however, the gems of purest ray serene that the dark unfathomed caves of the Black River bear, and the flowers that have hitherto been born to blush unseen and wasted their sweetness on the by no means, desert air of Rockaway Valley, are now placed in the sight of the world by the opening of a new railroad.

It is called the Rockaway Valley railroad. Its point of departure is White House and its present end is Peapack, distant twelve miles.

Its ultimate terminus, however, will be Morristown, where it will connect, by means of a cross-town electric railway, with the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western.

The building of this little road, the total length of which will be but twenty-five miles, has a history, and is an evidence of what can be done by two or three determined men. The men to take the initiatory steps were Serring Potter, of Pottersville, and J. E. Melick, a very civil and mining engineer. Mr. Potter is one of the prominent men who is to be found at the front in all good works. Mr. Melick is one of the four most eminent men in his profession who were selected by the U. S. Government to inspect the Union and Central Pacific Railways. He is about thirty-five years of age, and possessing a pair of mild and handsome brown eyes which do not reveal the power of grit and hold-fast which have enabled him to conceive, build and operate this little road in opposition to the apathy and obstruction of some little people who live along the line of the road, and who now begin to realize how greatly they are benefitted by its existence. It is the same old story, though, and pluck and quiet perseverance are winning the fight.

W. W. Sutton is president of the road, and Mr. Pidcock and Mr. Craig have been wise in their generation, evincing their wisdom by large financial investment to back the venture. There is no doubt that the investment will pay well, for it will be impossible to find twenty-five miles of richer country through which to run a short road.

Even to the sojourner in the land who is not "up" in agriculture, the appearance of the farm buildings tell the tale of thrift and success.

This is a great peach growing section, 300,000 baskets being an average crop. The failure this year has pinched a few of the farmers, but most of them are made of stern stuff and have good bank accounts and money at interest. When the peach failure became a fixed fact some of these available funds were immediately turned into fine dairy stock in order to increase their out-put and income in that direction—a method of recouping which was only available by reason of the outlet furnished by the new railroad, an outlet which was spurned by some of them, at first, but which "has come to stay" and which like Shakespeare's gentle rain from Heaven, falling upon the plane beneath, is destined to be a blessing to the just and unjust, to the wise and the unwise.

But agricultural products—wool among them, and we saw many fine flocks of sheep—are not the only ones in which the Rockaway Valley is rich and for which it is destined to become famous.

Large quantities of manufactured hardwood lumber and of iron ore which is capable of yielding Bessemer steel of superior quality are already shipped from Pottersville. Coal is believed to exist in paying quantities, and an immense bed of the very finest Kaolin has just been discovered.

Arrangements have been made to work the latter, and one of the largest manufacturers of the most superior pottery has made a contract for his supply.

The Black River, called by the Indians the Almatunk, has its rise in Morris county and is fed, upon its course, by many powerful and unfailing springs. It is not very wide, nor very deep, but the supply is so exhaustless and it comes with such an unceasing rush that here at Pottersville, where it has a "fall" of thirty-nine feet, the power supplied is believed to be second only to that at Minneapolis.

There are, doubtless, fortunes to be made in this broad valley, and, if the solid men of Plainfield who read THE PRESS, take advantage of this "tip" the Patriarch will be generous and charge them nothing for it. If his own pocket-book was plethoric, he would quietly take advantage of his foreknowledge to make it more so.

But how were the tottering feet of the Patriarch and Matriarch led to this promised land, to this land flowing with milk, honey, coal, iron ore, hardwood and Kaolin?

Why, by a modest advertisement in THE PRESS! All hail the power of THE PRESS, "Plainfield's only Newspaper!"

The advertisement announced that reduced rates would be made to excursionists to the Black River. "Apply to J. E Melick, Superintendent." So, being "upon pleasure bent" and having a "frugal mind," we thought we would excurt at "reduced rates." But the handsome superintendent aforesaid sat upon our case, and dropping one of the aforesaid lambient brown eyes on each of us, rendered his decision, videlicit to wit, namely, viz: that while we were away above the ordinary excurters in quality, we were aweigh below them in quantity. In short, that according to the multiplication table of the Rockaway Valley Railroad Company, it takes "ten excursionists to make one reduction." He also suggested that we seemed very much "reduced" already; and that we had better potter awhile around Pottersville until we had fattened up.

When we finally counted the cost of getting from Plainfield to Pottersville and return, one dollar and fifty-nine cents, and had credited the account with the pleasure and information we had received, we concluded a reduction in price was unreasonable.

For excursionists the attraction offered is the glen through which the Black River flows at Pottersville. It is a gem, indeed, and beautiful beyond description by the poor pen of a mentally impoverished Patriarch.

There is a narrow path leading upward, and barely wide enough for two persons. You have a race as is a race, cut through the solid rock in some places on the left. On the right are the glen and the river, and it is necessary that you shall put your arm around —, no, that I shall put my arm around the Matriarch to prevent her precipitation into the abyss. It is an interesting situation and proceeding, even when you have reached the great age of the P. and M., and are as sere and yellow as the Autumnal woods around you.

Three counties, Morris, Somerset and Hunterdon, as well as four townships, come to a point in the middle of the river in the glen. You cannot see the point, although it is there. What you can see is the boiling, bubbling river, hurrying and scurrying along between huge boulders and over its rocky bed, the rich moss and delicate ferns covering the rocks and the ground on every hand, the golden bank on the opposite side "more golden where the sunlight falls." It is a spot from which the sounds of the rude and madcap world are shut out; a spot where one would fain linger in silence and solitude while one's thought become attuned to high and heavenly themes.

Glen Onoko and the Switchback have been called the Switzerland of America: why may we not designate this little glen as a wee bit of Norway?

The sweetness of the surrounding country is in keeping with that of the glen; the hills do not rise to the height and dignity of mountains, but they are "everlasting," and their gentle and unending undulations are a continuous delight to the eye.

To those who are fortunate enough to know this place I have been painting the lily and adorning the rose—a work of supererogation; but it was a work of necessity in order to enlighten those, like yourself, who did not know that the lily lived and the rose existed.

Now of course you will become possessed with the desire to see for yourself, and, in connection therewith, let me give you a word of warning and advice. Warning: while your optics linger over the loveliness of the lily, or are gladdened by glimpses of the glen; while your olfactories revel in the rich odors of the rose; while your lungs swell with the surrounding zephyrs; and while your soul attunes itself to higher and heavenlier themes, as aforesaid, your stomach will not be idle, but will prepare to assert itself in a most vociferous manner.

Advice: when this stage is reached, repair to mine host Potter's and induce "Ma" Potter to enable you to line your interior with some of her superb buckwheat cakes. Then will your cup of happiness be full, indeed. That is, if you carry your cup in your stomach. Joseph's cup was carried in Benjamin's sack, I believe; but, as Rudyard Kippling says, that "is another story"—quite.

PATRIARCH.

P. S.—The Matriarch suggests that to mix up lilies, roses and buckwheat cakes, is a chronological error—so to speak. I tell you what it is, it takes a matter-of-fact matron to pull a poor, feeble man off his poetic perch and set him down on the cold earth "with a dull, sickening thud!"

THE PATRIARCH.

Real Fire Engines and an East River Wharf.

The "Midnight Alarm" is to be presented at Music Hall Monday night. It is an interesting play and deserves success. It is a melodrama, but without the overwrought situations that characterize most plays of this class. The story is interesting and holds the attention of the audience closely, while the serious part is pleasantly relieved by an entertaining strain of light comedy well brought out by the company. The staging is realistic and attractive, but not so prominent that the play is lost in the scenery. Good, strong and witty lines, dramatic situations, a swift movement of events, admirable stage setting, and a well balanced company, join to make a performance that is very enjoyable.

—The regular meeting of the Plainfield Bicycle Club will be held next Monday evening.

New Officers of the Public Library.

Among other matters of local interest crowded out of yesterday's issue, was the following account of the regular meeting of the directors of the Public Library. There were present Messrs Male, Baldwin, Babcock, Tracy, Tyler, Yates, Dumont and Stillman.

On motion the following communication, received from the mayor of the city, was ordered engrossed on the minutes, there having been no meeting since July, and hence this communication could not be received and engrossed before.

I, Job Male, mayor of the city of Plainfield, do hereby, pursuant to the provisions of law in that behalf, appoint Job Male, John B. Dumont and George H. Babcock to be Directors of the Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room, on the term of three years from the first day of July, eighteen hundred and ninety. Dated, Plainfield, New Jersey, June 30 1890.

JOB MALE, Mayor.

Mr. Babcock as a committee on nomination of new officers, presented the following:

President—Job Male.
Vice President—M. W. Tyler.
Treasurer—John B. Dumont.
Secretary—Wm. M. Stillman.
Art Committee—George H. Babcock, A.C. Baldwin, Jos. W. Yates.
Executive Committee—The President, Secretary and Chairman of the Art and Library Committees.
Library Committee—J. Evarts Tracy, Mason W. Tyler, H. P. Talmadge.

On motion the secretary then cast the ballot in their favor, and the nominees were declared duly elected.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Tracy for his valuable work for the library in obtaining a large number of government books.

Plainfield's Statistics of Life and Death.

The Secretary of the Board of Health, O. B. Leonard, who is Registrar of Vital Statistics of this city, has recently prepared his annual report for the State Bureau of Health, at Trenton. From the document just forwarded to the State Secretary, THE PRESS is permitted to compile the following interesting facts for the year ending October 1, 1890.

The number of marriages has been smaller than any twelve months during the past five years—only 67 reported.

There have been recorded 226 births, of which 119 were males and 107 females.

The total number of deaths were "cholera infantum," 21 cases; "paralysis," 15; consumption, 25; pneumonia, 20; heart disease, 18. Classified as to ages, there were 58 deaths of 1 year and under; 14 deaths between 1 and 5 years; 70 deaths from 5 to 60 years of age, and 61 deaths of 60 years and over. From these figures it is noticeable that more than half the deaths were among the very young under 1 year and the aged over 60 years old.

Edison Comes to Plainfield for a New Factory.

John Vetterlein is to begin next week the erection of a three-story brick building, 30x80 feet, on Exchange alley, in the rear of the Trinity Reformed church. The building will be used for manufacturing purposes, Mr. Vetterlein having signed yesterday a contract to produce 5 000 chamfer planes, after a new patent, each year, for three years. These planes are for cutting chamfers, or grooves, in wood, and as Thomas Edison, the inventor, is interested in the concern, it is supposed that the planes which Mr. Vetterlein's workmen are to manufacture will be used in preparing grooved strips of wood to incase electric light wires in buildings. Mr. Vetterlein will give employment to quite a number of people besides erecting a good building that may be counted a substantial improvement to the property of the neighborhood.

It Was Indeed a "Scatter."

For days before election the Republican hand organs were publishing columns of twisted figures to prove the McKinley bill a blessing. The heading day after day was:

THE McKINLEY BILL
"TO SCATTER PLENTY O'ER A SMILING LAND."

And so it did. It scattered the plenty of Republican votes, and made this indeed a smiling land.

"I find the doctors and the sages
Have differed in all climes and ages."

But I have found no difference of opinion among the female sages who have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a remedy for all ailments peculiar to their sex. "Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of weak back, chronic congestion, inflammation, pain and tenderness. The only remedy for such maladies sold under a guarantee. Particulars on bottle-wrapper. All druggists.

KILLED THEIR FELLOW-WORKMAN.

Two of the Suspected Murderers Caught, but the Third Still Missing with the Dead Man's Money.

Two men suspected of murder aroused a great deal of morbid curiosity at the North avenue railroad station this morning. Their names are Vicenzo Guffagholne and Francisco Camerato. They and Andrea Moriale were the last persons seen with Salvadora Figarotto before that fellow-Italian was found, three days ago, in a ditch at Somerville, with his throat cut, and with his corpse otherwise mutilated. The motive of the murder seems to have been to secure the possession of $120 which the dead man was known to possess. When the murder was discovered these three men, who had worked with Figarotto on the new Peapack railroad, were missing. Guffagholne and Camerato were found this morning among the Italians on the Lehigh Valley road at South Plainfield, and were brought to this city by Constable Austin Moore and interpreter Joseph Marino, their captors. After a vain search here for Prosecutor Steele of Somerset County the two prisoners were taken to Somerville and lodged in jail. They were not at all ferocious in appearance. One had a face that favorably impressed one as indicative of frank honesty. The other had a cruel mouth, and cold eyes. Both were clad in corduroy, and their boots were weighted with heavy clods of clay from the bank in which they had been working. They were handcuffed together. Their companion under suspicion, Moriale, is still missing, and is said to have gone to Florida. It is supposed that Moriale has the dead man's money.

Somerville's Second Murder This Week.

The village of Somerville was again aroused by the news that a murder had been committed, yesterday, when the body of Patrick McCue, an itinerant umbrella-mender known throughout the county as "Paddy the Bum," was found in a barn with a great jagged hole in the side of his head. A peculiar knobbed walking stick which he carried, and which seems to have dealt him the cruel blow while he slept, is missing. His pockets were rifled of their contents.

Shook the Passengers up.

The ten o'clock train from New York, this morning, was run into from behind by an engine, and the passengers in the rear car especially were badly shaken up. The train stopped for some reason a mile or two before reaching Elizabeth, where the accident occurred. No one was hurt.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Workmen Mashed to a Jelly by a Falling Stone Pier.

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., Nov. 7.—A terrible accident occurred here, resulting in the instant death of two men and the serious injury of another.

Workmen were engaged in building a new wall under a large stone pier supporting the railroad track running into Swartley's flour mills. Without a moment's warning the pier began to settle. The workmen heard the crash and started to run.

Daniel Taylor was caught and crushed to death, his head being mashed to a jelly, and every bone in his body broken. William Pettit stumbled and fell, and Samuel Riegel fell over his prostrate form, and to this circumstance Pettit owes his life, as Riegel was instantly killed.

Pettit laid for over half an hour held down by heavy stones, with the body of Riegel on top of him. He talked with the men engaged in rescuing him and directed their movements, all the while suffering intense agony. He is badly injured.

Gen. Booth Buys a Brewery.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—Gen. Booth, of the Salvation Army, proposes to make an immediate test of his scheme for the relief and moral elevation of London's poor, and has bought at a cost of £4,000 a brewery establishment at Shoreditch, which he will convert into headquarters for a colony.

Will Reside at Buckingham Palace.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—There is a persistent rumor afloat that the Prince of Wales is about to leave Marlborough House and reside henceforth at Buckingham Palace, which huge edifice is only occupied by Her Majesty three or four days out of the year, greatly to the public disgust.

The Czarewitch Lionized in Vienna.

VIENNA, Nov. 7.—The Czarewitch visited the various Archdukes and afterward placed a wreath on the tomb of the late Crown Prince Rudolph. He dined with the Emperor and was tendered an official reception. He has been greatly lionized during his stay here.

Thirty Horses Perished.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—A large brick stable near Nineteenth and Brown streets, this city, owned and occupied by Abraham Barry, was burned during the morning. The flames spread so rapidly that the 30 horses in the building perished, although strenuous efforts were made to get them out. Loss $11,000.

Collision in Trenton Tunnel.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 7.—The New York express on the Pennsylvania Railroad crashed into a local passenger train here. None of the passengers were seriously injured. The engineer and fireman of the express train jumped, the former breaking an arm and the latter a leg.

The Duchess of Marlborough's Debts.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Heavy judgments have been entered against the Duchess of Marlborough on default for debts contracted at Birmingham, England, aggregating $676,121, representing money loaned her at that place.

Weekly Payment Bill Killed.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Nov. 7.—In the Legislature a bill compelling corporations to pay their employes weekly was killed by a vote of 96 to 125; also a bill exempting soldiers from the payment of poll tax.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

NEXT THE HEAD.

Such a dear, but such a dunce,
Was the rosy little lass,
Perfectly content to be
At the foot of her small class.

Once we promised she should have Almost any thing she would
On the day when she could say
She above the others stood.

Naught she seemed to heed the wish,
Loitering on the schoolward way,
Never looking in her book,
All absorbed in endless play.

Judge then, our surprise, at last,
Each day slipping like a bead,
When she carelessly remarked
Next the head she stood, indeed.

Next the head! Enough! Enough!
She should choose that afternoon
From the dolls that moved their eyes,
Said mamma, and sang a tune.

Who, it happened then, we asked
In our scholar's class might be—
O, the innocent blue eyes!
"Rosy Grey," she said, "and me."

THE IRON MAID.

How Its Arms Closed About the Neck of the Collector.

FRANK HODSON swore. Before him stretched the long suburban street, its dreary distance marked by rows of gas lamps; behind him a waste land—once a garden, now a vast rubbish-heap—and from the brick-fields beyond came a faint, sickly smell of burning bricks; and on the railway embankment, built up above squalid gardens and dismal yards, he could see a red star gliding swiftly away from him. His last train had gone, and the dull beat of the policeman's feet echoed in the silence. Nine miles from London, and not a chance of a hansom! The recording angel doubtless took in the situation at a glance and erased the execration in the approved manner. Hodson had spent the evening with a friend, and, aided by tobacco and whisky and soda, the hours had fled so quickly that Frank, looking suddenly at the clock, found that he had but four brief minutes in which to reach the station, half a mile away. He did his best, but by a fatality the train was punctual, and the unfortunate man was left stranded, with no alternative but a nine-mile walk through streets deserted as those of Pompeii. As he mused dolefully over the prospect a porter came out and locked the station door, and from him Hodson obtained a brief direction as to the shortest way to town. He set out, wearily, looking at the stretch of lamps vanishing in perspective; and as he walked street after street branched off to right or left, some far-reaching and others ending abruptly in a piece of waste ground and a heap of sand. By degrees, as he walked on, the houses improved; the suburban builder had allowed himself a wider scope, and for the artistic comfort of those whose business kept them all day in the dreary city had placed twin plaster lions to guard the approach of each flight of steps. The gardens, too, were somewhat larger; here and there green leaves shone under the lamps and Hodson smelled mignonette. The road began slowly to climb a hill, and, looking up a side street, he saw the half moon rise above the plane trees. Resolutely he pressed on, listening for the wheels of some belated hansom; but into that land of men who go to the city in the morning and return again in the evening the hansom rarely comes, and Hodson had resigned himself a second time to the walk, when he suddenly became aware that some one was advancing to meet him along the pavement. The man was strolling rather aimlessly, and looking about him; he was, therefore, no policeman; he wore a silk hat; he was, therefore, respectable. The two men met each other under a lamp, and, strangely enough, found each an acquaintance.

"Mr. Mathias, I think?" said Hodson.

"Quite so. And you are Frank Hodson. You know, you are a man with a Christian name, so I won't apologize for my familiarity. But may I ask where you are going?"

Hodson explained the situation. "I think I have only about five miles further," he concluded.

"Nonsense; you must come home with me. My house is close by. In fact, I was just taking my evening walk when we met. Come along; I dare say you will find a make-shift bed easier than a five-mile walk."

Frank suffered himself to be led along, feeling a little surprised at so much geniality from a casual acquaintance at the club. Mr. Mathias took him up a side-street, and stopped at a door in a high wall. They passed through the still, moon-lighted garden, and into an old red-brick house with many gables, and Hodson sighed with relief as he fell back into an easy chair. There was a shaded lamp which threw a bright, white light upon the table where it stood, but left the room in shadow, and Hodson could only see that it was long and low and seemed filled with objects which might be furniture. Mr. Mathias sat down in a second arm-chair and looked about him with a curious smile. He was an odd-looking man, clean-shaven, and white to the lips, apparently between fifty and sixty.

"Now I have got you here," he began, "I must inflict my hobby upon you. You knew I was a collector? Yes, I have devoted myself for years to collecting curiosities, which I think are really curious. But we must have a better light."

He advanced to the middle of the room and lighted a lamp which hung from the ceiling, and as the bright light flashed round the wick from every corner and space there seemed to start a horror. Great wooden frames connected with ropes and pulleys stood against the wall; little tables glittered with bright steel instruments, carelessly put down as if ready for use; a screw and vise loomed from one corner, and in another was a saw with cruel jagged teeth.

"Yes," said Mr. Mathias, "they are, as you suggest, instruments of torture. Some—many, I may say—have actually been used for that purpose; a few are reproductions after ancient examples. Those knives were used for flaying; that frame is a rack, and a fine specimen. But these are all European; the Orientals, of course, are much more ingenious. There are the Chinese contrivances; you have heard of the 'heavy death?' It is my hobby, this sort of thing. It gives me the greatest of luxuries—the luxury of terror. But I must show you my latest acquisition. Come into the next room."

Frank Hodson followed Mr. Mathias. The weariness of the walk, the late hour and the strangeness of the surroundings made him feel like a man in a dream—nothing would surprise him. The second room was like the first, full of strange, ghastly instruments; but beneath the lamp was a platform, and on it a figure. It was a large figure of a woman cast in some dark metal, her arms stretched forth and a smile upon her lips; it might have well been intended for a Venus, and yet about it there was a deadly look.

Mr. Mathias looked at the thing complacently. "Quite a work of art, isn't it?" he said. "It's the Iron Maid. I got it from Germany; it was only unpacked this afternoon; indeed, I have not yet opened the letter of advice. You see that very small knob above the breast? Well, the patient was bound to the maid, that knob was pressed, and the arms slowly tightened round his neck. You can imagine the result."

As Mr. Mathias talked he stood on the platform and patted the figure affectionately. Hodson had turned away, and was gazing abstractedly about him. He did not hear a slight click; it was not much louder than the tick of a clock; but he heard a sudden whirr—the noise of machinery in motion. He turned around. And never has he forgotten the anguish and the terror on Mr. Mathias' face as those relentless arms tightened about his neck, or the shriek that ended suddenly in a choking groan. The whirring noise had suddenly changed to a heavy droning sound. Frank tore with all his might at the iron arms, and strove to wrench them apart, but utterly in vain. The head had bent down a little, and the iron lips were upon the lips of Mathias. It was five minutes before the Iron Maid unclosed her arms.

* * * * *

The letter which accompanied the figure was found unopened upon the table. It was read at the inquest. The German firm especially warned Mr. Mathias to be extremely careful in touching the Iron Maid, as the machinery had been oiled and put in thorough working order.—St. James' Gazette.

Invention of Steel Pens.

Mr. Joseph Gillott was a Birmingham working jeweler in 1830. One day he accidentally split one of his fine steel tools, and being suddenly required to sign a receipt, not finding his quill pen at hand, he used the split tool as a ready substitute. This happy accident led to the idea of making pens of metal. It was carried out with secrecy and promptitude, and the pens of Gillott became famous. The manufacture of metal pens has been as important as any invention connected with business and education since that of printing. There are now numerous firms which produce as many pens every day as all the geese in England could have supplied in a year. There is still, however, a large demand for quills and quill pens; but for common use, in these days of universal education, the importance of Gillott's first invention is incalculable.—Leisure Hour.

TREATED FOR BUGS.

How Sid Moore Kept Two Niggers from Voting.

LANK fellow, charged with having kept two negroes from voting at a Congressional election, was brought down from the mountains of East Tennessee and arraigned before the United States Court at Nashville. The only witness was one of the judges of election who swore as follows: "These here two negroes was brothers, and thar names was Lige an' Tom. The day befo' the election me an' the niggers was a-settin' on a log at the cross roads when Sid Moore, the prisoner, he come along. The niggers was a-talkin' about votin' at the time, an' Sid he jest stopped long enough to 'low he would bet 'em money that they didn't vote. They swore they would, an' I thought they would, fur thar wa'n't gamer niggers in the whole community. Wall, the day came, an' ever' minit I was expectin' the niggers to come up an' vote, but they didn't, an', more than that, we ain't heern of them sense."

"What have you to say to this?" the prosecuting attorney asked, addressing the prisoner.

"Ain't got much to say. Never was much of a talker."

"But did you keep the men from voting?"

"I never said a word to 'em after I seed 'em at the cross-roads."

"But they have not been seen since that time. What became of them?"

"Wall, sah, I wa'n't 'p'inted to look after them, I don't reckon."

"It has been hinted that you made way with them?"

"I kain't hep' whut's been hinted. It's about as much as we kin do to pay

HE WOULD BET 'EM MONEY.

'tention to whut's done in this here world, let alone whut's been hinted."

"Didn't you shoot them?"

"Didn't see 'em after I left 'em at the cross-roads."

"You live close to the negroes, don't you?"

"Yes, right in sight an' in hearin'."

"What did you do after you got home that evening?"

"Wall, I didn't do much of any thing. I recolleck standin' out not fur frum the house an' shoutin' to my son Bill."

"What did you say to him?"

"Wall, I 'lows, 'Bill, I am goin' to put that late watermillion in the fodder stack an' I bet you it will keep till Chris'mas.'"

"Is that all you said?"

"That's all I said loud enough for the niggers to hear over in thar cabin, but next mornin' when I went out to the fodder stack the millon was gone. An' long about dinner-time a man came along an' said he had seed the niggers a-runnin' toward a doctor that lives over in the next county. Ain't no doctor clost to whar we live. Useter be one thar, but he killed a hoss a-tryin' ter doctor him an' he had to move out."

"You say the watermelon was gone?"

"Yas, an' I had been savin' it—was a late one an' growed in the sweet pertater patch."

"What did you do to the melon?"

"Put it in the fodder stack, I told you."

"But what did you do with it before you put it in the stack?"

"Toted it from whar it growed."

"But didn't you put something in it?"

"Oh, yas; some feller come along an' 'lowed, he did, that I couldn't keep the thing—'lowed that the bugs that air powerful fon' of 'millon would eat it up. I then axed him whut would keep 'em off an' he 'lowed that he had some stuff that would make 'em powerful sick at the stomick, an' I axed him to let me have some of it. He done so, tellin' me at the same time that I would have to cut a small hole in the 'millon an' pour the stuff in. 'Lowed, he did, that it wouldn't kill the bugs, but would make 'em powerful sick. Mebby them nigners thought it was their 'millon an' mebby they eat some of it, an' if they did they will be able to come home after while of they didn't eat too much. I didn't invite them to steal the 'millon, an' thurfo' didn't keep 'em frum votin'. When I 'lowed the day befo' thot they wa'n't gwine to vote, I didn't know but that they mout find a late 'millon somewhar an' eat so much they wouldn't feel like votin'. Man's got a right to put stuff in his 'millons to keep the bugs frum eatin' 'em. Hain't he, jedge?"

"I don't see how we can hold him," said the judge. "The charge is for interfering with an election and not for dosing a melon."

"Much obleeged to you, jedge, powerful obleeged to you; an' ef you ever come out my way in the season, I'll give you a 'million that hain't been treated fur bugs."—Opie P. Read in Arkansaw Traveler.

A GREAT PHYSICIAN.

He Maintains His Dignity Under Very Trying Circumstances.

OLD DOCTOR Pomp was called to attend Anderson Buck, upon whom pneumonia had spread its blighting hands. Old Pomp, after looking at Anderson's tongue, said:

"Got a tongue like er steer."

"Whut yer say?" asked Anderson's wife.

"Say his tongue looks sorter queer."

"Does yer think yer ken cure him, doctor?"

"Dat 'pens on how well he gets erlong chile. Ef he gits well, I thinks dat I ken cure him, but if he dies, den I thinks dat he'll be outen my reach. We's got ter wait 'velopments in er serious case like dis heah one. Now, I'll leab yer three doses o' medicine," beginning to wrap up white powders. "Dis is number one, dis is number two, an' dis number three. Gin him number three fust. We's got ter work backwards in er case like dis."

"Wall, sah."

"Is yer got it down?"

"Yas, sah."

"Wall, now, doan' yer make no mistake. I'll be roun' in de mawnin', an' see how he's gittin' erlong."

There were several women standing in the door-yard when the doctor called next day, and the wailing of grief, coming from within the house, assured the physician that the worst had come; however, he did not turn away, but entered the house.

"Doctor, he's dead!" moaned the woman.

"So I see, madam. Has yer got de papers whut wus roun' dem powders?"

"Yas, sah, heah da is," reaching up and taking them from the mantel-piece.

"Lemme see 'em. Which one did yer gin fust?"

"Dis one, I thinks."

"Yas, and dat wus number two. How yer 'speck de po' man ter lib when yer gin him de middle powder fust? Dat would break down de constertushun o' er eladn'. Heah yer's had dat po' man strugglin' 'tween de third an' fust powder. Doan' see how he stood it so long. Wall, kain't 'speck er doctor ter do nuthin' long es folks is so keerless. Good-day, madam. Es yer's got so much trouble on yer han's, I won't speak o' money matters dis mawnin'. Will be round arter de funeral."—Arkansaw Traveler.

His Circulation.

Western Physician (to dying editor)—Your circulation is terribly run down, Hank. I fear you can not last—

Editor of the Boomer—How'd you find it out, doc? If the foreman gave me away, I'll—

Doctor—Why, by feeling your pulse, of course. My poor friend, I fear you an not live an hour longer.

Editor—Oh, is that it? I thought you had dropped onto the fact that the circulation of the Boomer has come down to fifty-three copies although I have been making advertisers believe I'm still printing two hundred and ten.—Munsey's Weekly.

Hearing and Telling.

The conversation had turned on gossiping servants.

"As for me," remarked Jones, who was present, "my dream is to have only two, one of whom should be deaf and the other dumb. The deaf rascal wouldn't be able to hear any thing, and the dumb one couldn't repeat what he happened to hear."—Judge.

Both Indisposed.

Miss Bleecker—I'm under the weather this morning.

Miss Beaconstreet (of Boston)—I, too, am beneath the meteorological phenomena.—Judge.

Hard on the Family.

Ethel—Have you any remembrance of your great-grandfather, Clara?

Clara—Excuse me, but we never speak of him.

Ethel—Why, is he tabooed?

Clara—Well, I've been told that he married beneath him, and that after that time the family never took any notice of him.—Judge.

AN ART NOTE.

Mr. Henderson Smearleigh, the renowned artist is now in Africa—

And he will not return this autumn.—Life.

News from Home.

Italian Guide—Yessa, mees; all our cities hava patron saints, same as in America.

Fair Tourist—Same as in America?

Guide—Yessa. I hears alla bout America from my bruzza. He keepa fruit standa in New Yorka. New Yorka hava patron sainta—Sainta Patrick.—Life.

Wit of a Deep-Veined Humanity.

Aunt Kate—I do wish you would give him more encouragement, Lucy. He may be a little conceited, but his wit never makes you angry with him.

Lucy—No. It just makes you feel sorry for him.—Life

"OH, IF MOTHER WERE ONLY ALIVE!"

All through life she has known a mother's watchful care. She now is a young mother, and gains strength but slowly. She would "give worlds" to do everything for her precious baby, but cannot; the doctor is so strict, and does not sympathize with her, "as mother always did."

That baby has unfolded in the young mother's heart, new emotions. She has a living responsibility, and requires strength to enable her to perform a loving duty. At such a time, too much care cannot be taken, and the Vegetable Compound is indispensable.

Missionary Work--Not in Africa---In Plainfield.

We want to convert everybody to be of our views; that is to pay only the actual value for the goods they receive. This can be accomplished by becoming patrons of our store. We sell for cash, and you do not have to pay other people's bad debts. Glance over our prices and see for yourself how much you will reduce your housekeeping expenses by buying from the originators of low prices in this city.

We make a specialty of Teas and Coffees, handling all kinds that grow; New crop Tea, (all kinds) 35c lb, worth 50c; Coffee, way down! Try our combination (Nicaragua Java & Santos) 32c, worth 40c; finest produced Elgin and Phila. Creamery Butter, 28c lb; good Creamery, (as sold in most stores for best) 25c; fresh Dairy, (used for both table and cooking purposes) 22c; best Cocoa in the market 38c; Pearl patent flour, (has no equal) $6 75 bbl; Pilsbury's best XXXX, $6 75 bbl; best Kerosene, 150 test, 10c gal; strictly Virginia sweet potatoes, 40c basket, (⅔ bush); Granulated Sugar, 7c. Call and get prices on other goods. REMEMBER, we carry the finest line of Groceries ever offered to the public; and the reputation that we enjoy fully attests the success of our efforts. BEAR IN MIND—We do not advertise any one article in particular as a leader to mislead the public but our full line right through will be found to be at least 25 per cent. less than any other store in Union county. AND DON'T FORGET—That we call for and deliver orders promptly to any and all parts of the city, free of charge; on Saturdays till 9 P. M. Special attention given to mail orders.

AN ANARCHIST RIOT

Lucy Parsons and Several Ringleaders Arrested.

HERR JOHANN MOST ESCAPED.

Prompt Work of the Newark Police Prevented Bloodshed.

Captain Glori Felled by a Blow—An Anarchist Shouted "Down With the Police" and Was Clubbed by a Detective—They Wanted to Talk About the Chicago "Martyrs."

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 8.—Local anarchists, assisted by Mrs. Lucy Parsons and Herr Most, attempted to hold a meeting here last night, celebrating the third anniversary of the execution of Chicago anarchists.

A riot ensued, and but for the prompt work of the police bloodshed would have followed. Under the name of the International Workingmen's Society, Saenger Hall was engaged a week ago, the proprietor not being aware of the character of the people to whom he had rented it until flaming posters announced the meeting. He refused to admit them to the hall last night.

A big crowd assembled outside. Mrs. Parsons mounted the hall stoop and started to harangue the crowd. Police Captain Glori at once interfered and notified her to desist. She became defiant.

"Down With the Police!"

Captain Glori stood up and said: "Mrs. Parsons you had better not attempt to speak, as trouble will ensue, and I will be compelled to arrest you."

She turned and defiantly cried: "I will speak! I am Lucy Parsons! Arrest me! That is what I want!"

At this instant a smooth-faced young man who stood near her, shouted to the crowd: "Will you, citizens, be intimidated by a handful of policemen! Down with the police!"

Captain Glori Struck.

The captain seized the fellow, and the next instant was stunned by a blow from behind. His assailant was felled by Detective Cosgrove and both men were rushed to the 4th precinct station house.

Meanwhile Mrs. Parsons was wisked away to police headquarters and locked up in a cell, accused of inciting a riot.

The crowd then became turbulent. Suddenly the police patrolmen and detectives grabbed the ringleaders, hurried them into the patrol wagon and carted them off to the Fourth Precinct Station. Then the officers dispersed the crowd. Nine prisoners were captured. There was great excitement for a while, Herr Johann Most escaped.

BIRCHALL MUST HANG.

The Cabinet Council Decide that No Clemency Should be Shown.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 8.—Sir John Thompson, Minister of Justice, reported to the Cabinet of the Dominion Government on the Birchall case, recommending that the sentence of the Court, that he be executed on November 14, be not interfered with. After due consideration of the case by the Cabinet, the recommendation of the Minister of Justice was adapted.

The Cabinet was unanimous in its opinion as to the guilt of Birchall and consequently decided that the law should take its course. The Governor-General signed the order in council and the State Department willl at once notify the sheriff of Oxford to proceed with the execution.

In Trouble for Kissing.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Nov. 8.—Dr. Fennimore Smith, a physician of Guttenberg, was arrested here charged with being a disorderly person. Mrs. John Acker, the wife of School Trustee Acker, and another woman came out of their residence on Park avenue and the doctor attempted to kiss the two women. Mr. Acker, hearing the women scream, rushed out and knocked the doctor down. The doctor was then placed under arrest and Recorder McDonough held him for examination.

A Female Postal Clerk Suspended.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Mrs. Margaret Watkins, a clerk at the general delivery window in the postoffice in this city, has been suspended by orders from Postmaster-General Wanamaker for using offensive language towards Richard Quay, the son of Senator Quay of Pennsylvania. The circulated account of the affair has it that young Quay asked for his father's mail at the delivery window and some one standing near remarked "He's dead. It goes to the Dead Letter office now," and Mrs. Watkins who was on duty at the window thoughtlessly repeated the remark. Superintendent Bell, of the city delivery, admits that he made the remark which Mrs. Watkins repeated.

Mr. Chamberlain's Tariff Ideas.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—In an interview Hon. Joseph P. Chamberlain, M. P., son-in-law of ex-Secretary of War Endicott, strongly maintains that the McKinley or any tariff law that is so near the line of prohibition would be beneficial to England and detrimental to America in that the Americans cannot compete with England in the South American markets and in other foreign and neutral countries.

The Godfrey-Smith Mill.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Everything is in readiness for the glove contest between George Godfrey, the colored heavyweight pugilist of Boston, and Ed Smith, of Denver, which has been announced to take place at the Puritan Athletic Club, Long Island City, next Tuesday night. There has been some betting in this city with the odds slightly in favor of Godfrey, say at $100 to $80.

Death of a Railroad President.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 8.—Nehemiah Allen Leonard, president of the Connecticut River Railroad, and one of the leading lawyers of the Hampden County bar since 1850, is dead, aged 65 years.

GOV. BEAVER PRESIDED.

The Irish Visitors Greeted by Another Large Audience in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—The meeting held last night at the Academy of Music by the Irish Nationalist leaders was very successful. The crowd was large and the enthusiam great.

The applause first broke out when Mrs. Parnell walked upon the stage and took her seat. The tumult occasioned by her entrance had hardly died away when the entrance of Governor Beaver, accompanied by Messrs. Dillon, O'Brien, O'Connor, Harrington, Sullivan and Gill was the signal for another outburst that shook the building. Governor Beaver took the chair, having Mr. Sullivan on his right hand and Mr. O'Brien on his left.

T. P. O Connor was the first speaker of the evening. Mr. O'Connor spoke for over an hour and his remarks were frequently interrupted by applause. Speeches were also made by Messrs. Sullivan, O'Brien and Dillon and ex-Mayor W. B. Smith of this city. At the conclusion of the speeches Michael J. Ryan announced that in the two days stay of the distinguished Irishmen in this city they had collected over $16,000.

HIS MOTHER AVENGED.

A Young Pole Claims that is Why He Killed His Father.

WOODBRIDGE, N. J., Nov. 8.—Stanisloff Virschkowsky, a young Pole, stabbed his father, Josef Virschkowsky, in the abdomen during a quarrel Monday night at Perth Amboy, inflicting a wound from the effects of which the injured man died last night. The murderer fled, but was arrested at noon near this place. He resisted, but was finally taken into custody at the muzzle of a gun and lodged in jail. He says his father murdered his mother in Poland.

Trying Election Prisoners in New York

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—U. S. Commissioner Deuel during the day held court in the Federal building to consider the cases of the persons arrested upon John I. Davenport's warrants the day before election for alleged false registration, an offense punishable by law of Congress with fine or imprisonment. Upon examination John Sherwood and Thomas Duane were held on a charge of illegal registration and were committed to Ludlow Street jail in default of $250 bail to await the action of the grand jury. Three of the other prisoners were discharged and the rest were remanded to enable them to produce evidence in their defense.

Killed Himself Because He Had the Grip.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Ephialet Brown, a well known farmer of Kiamtore, went out to his barn last evening ostensibly to husk corn. After fastening a rope to the highest rafters and adjusting the other end about his neck he jumped, falling about ten feet, breaking his neck. He was experiencing a second attack of the grip, and his sufferings caused him to commit suicide.

Mexico Releases an American Prisoner.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 8.—Upon the demand of the American Consul at Juarez, the Mexican authorities have released Henry Henderson, the colored citizen, who escaped from jail at Juarez, but was recaptured on American soil and dragged back to Juarez by a Mexican official. The Mexican authorities have given the Consul assurances that the offending Mexican officer will be severely punished.

Complete Returns from Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 8.—Complete returns from every county in the State foot up a plurality for Pattison for Governor of 16,835, a Democratic gain as compared with the vote for Governor in 1886 of 59,584. Though Delamater, the Republican candidate for Governor was defeated, his colleagues on the State ticket are elected by decisive majorities.

Gold in West Haven Rocks.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 8.—All the folks in West Haven are indulging in visions of wealth, for an assayer has said that a piece of metal picked up by Jacob Prahen, a farmer of the town, is composed largely of gold and copper. The farmer and the assayer have dug a quantity of the metal, and it will be sent to Bridgeport to be smelted.

Pullman Sleeper Thrown from a Trestle.

DULUTH, Minn., Nov. 8.—The Omaha Pullman sleeper Sarmatia from Minneapolis, was thrown from a trestle during the morning, and falling 20 feet, lighted on its side in about three feet of water. The car is a complete wreck. Twelve persons went down with the car and all were more or less bruised.

Grant and McAllister Duck Shooting.

ANNAPOLIS, Nov. 8.—Mayor Grant of New York, with a party of friends, passed through Annapolis on his way to South River on a gunning expedition. He will be the guest of the South River Gun Club. He was accompanied by Ward McAllister, Rollin M. Morgan and others.

Brennan Off to Fight Danforth.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 8.—"Reddy" Brennan, the Streator lightweight who is to fight Tommy Danforth in Arkansas to-morrow morning, left last night for Memphis. He was accompanied by Hugh and John McManus, who trained him, and a delegation of St. Louisans.

THE NEXT SPEAKER

Several Democrats Would Like to Wield the Gavel.

SOME TALK ABOUT THE SENATE.

A Claim is Made of a Possible Tie in the Upper Branch.

The Rumor that Mr. Wanamaker Has Failed Positively Denied—Meeting of the Cabinet—Senator Spooner May be Appointed Associate Justice—Senator McPherson Talks About the Presidency.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The fight for the Speakership of the Fifty-second Congress has begun before the smoke of battle has cleared away. The candidacy of McMillan, of Tennessee; Mills, of Texas; Blount and Crisp, of Georgia; Bynum, of Indiana; Springer, of Illinois, is already announced by their authority, and Flower, of New York; Mutchler, of Pennsylvania; McCreary, of Kentucky, and others are mentioned by their friends.

Daniel Lockwood, of Buffalo, the Cleveland nominator, is being boomed for the place by John Wiley, while General Spinola is understood to be willing to wield the gavel.

A rumor is out that ex-President Cleveland has stated to a friend that his choice for Speaker is Mr. Mills, and another rumor that Charles A Dana will do his utmost to defeat the gentleman from Texas.

WORKING FOR THE SENATE.

Democrats Assert that a Tie is Possible in the Upper Branch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The interest in the political situation deepens. It almost looks as if the Senate might be dangerously near a tie. Friends of Senator Moody of South Dakota are quite alarmed. They are in receipt of dispatches from Moody himself, which seem to confirm the previous reports that the Farmers' Alliance has captured the South Dakota Legislature, and will elect the Senator who will succeed Moody on March 4 next.

Mr. Moody's successor will not necessarily be a Democrat, but he will vote with the Democrats, so it is claimed, on tariff issues, and possibly on other questions. If Farwell in Illinois and Teller in Colorado should happen to have Legislatures returned adverse to their re-election, it is quite possible that on tariff questions the Senate may be a tie, or may even have an adverse majority of one to the McKinley bill.

The Republican Senators here are not worried over the political outlook, and assert that they will retain a majority.

NO TRUTH IN THE REPORT.

A Baseless Rumor About the Failure of Postmaster-General Wanamaker.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Dispatches were received here from Western cities making inquiry as to the truth of the rumor to the effect that Postmaster-General Wanamaker had failed. These inquiries were preceded by private messages to the Postmaster-General that such stories were current.

Marshall Cushing, private secretary to Postmaster-General Wanamaker, telegraphed to Philadelphia to ascertain what foundation there was for the reported failure of John Wanamaker, and in reply was informed that there was no truth whatever in the report.

Will Spooner Succeed Miller?

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—A new candidate for the vacancy on the Supreme Court Bench has come forward since the election. He is Senator Spooner of Wisconsin. The Senator was one of the President's main supporters in the Senate. It was Senator Spooner who spoke for the Administration last session, and the Senator is to Gen. Harrison the cleverest of all the Republicans in the upper House.

Cabinet Meeting.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The first meeting of the Cabinet since the elections occurred at noon, Secretary Rusk and Attorney-General Miller only being absent. The President outlined and discussed the points that will be covered in his message to Congress, the several secretaries making suggestions as to the points touching their respective departments.

Senator McPherson's Views.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—In an interview about Presidential candidates, Senator McPherson, of New Jersey, said: "We can go anywhere almost in the country to get our candidate. The field is broadened. We are not dependent upon New York and disturbed by her local quarrels. If they will not settle their differences we are not obliged to go to New York for our President."

Presents His Letter of Recall.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Don Emilio de Muruaga, the Spanish Minister, called at the White House, in company with Secretary Blaine, and presented his letter of recall.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

EXPLOSION OF A SHELL.

One Man Killed and Four Others Seriously Injured.

STATEN ISLAND, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Shortly after 2 o'clock a shell exploded in a casement of the lower fort at Fort Wadsworth, killing one man and injuring four others.

The men were at work tapping shells, which work consists of filling the shells with powder and getting them ready for use.

It is not clear just how the accident occurred, but it is believed that some loose powder got into the primer, and when the caps were being placed in position, the powder exploded the shell.

The last shell was about to be completed and Nathaniel Chapman was standing in front of it, when it exploded, and he was thrown with great force against a stone wall, his neck being broken and part of his abdomen was blown away. He was dead when picked up. John Davis, J. J. Keegan, George Heirness and C. Cook, who were in the casement at the time, were more or less injured, but they were all able to walk to the hospital to have their wounds dressed.

CLOSE IN CONNECTICUT.

The Board of Canvassers Will Have to Decide Who is Elected.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 8.—Comparison of the newspapers election figures with the first two sets of returns at the office of the Secretary of State shows numerous petty changes. Eighteen scattering votes disappear and 36 of the 84 Prohibition votes cast in Waterbury, previously reckoned in, are not counted in the official returns. The result of these and other slight changes is that Morris, Dem., for Governor, has an apparent majority.

The Senate is Democratic, the House Republican and joint ballot Republican. Some think the present administration will hold over until the General Assembly in January decide the disputed questions.

Nothing is likely to be determined formally and officially until after the meeting of the Board of Canvassers which occurs this month. On the face of the returns, not counting the votes reported rejected, Morris has a majority.

An apparent error just discovered in the official return from Milford gives Merwin, Rep., 18 additional votes, reducing Morris' apparent majority to 27. There are 36 Prohibition votes in Waterbury and 126 Republican votes in Bridgeport not reckoned in these figures, which if counted, leave Morris in a minority.

The Situation in New Hampshire.

NASHUA, N. H., Nov. 8.—There is no doubt that the Republicans will have a special session of the present Legislature called for December. It is now Republican by 35 majority, and the terms of the members does not expire until January. They will then officially recognize the new census returns and will admit the new members, giving them a majority in the Legislature. A conference of the leading Republicans is being held on the matter at Concord.

Tax on American Lard.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Information has been received here that the Peruvian Government had passed a new tariff law, to take effect February 1, 1891, imposing a tax of 15 cents Peruvian silver (5 cents of our money) per pound on all foreign lard, presumably with the object of encouraging native production. The news of this prohibitive tax created a stir on the Produce Exchange, as Peru takes $300,000 worth a year of the best quality of lard from this country.

The Port Reading Railroad.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—The Port Reading Railroad is the title which has been adopted for the extension of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad from Bound Brook to Port Reading. The charter of the company has been recorded at Trenton, and it is the intention of the Reading management to push the road to an early completion.

One Way to Beat the McKinley Bill.

MONTREAL, Nov. 8.—The heavy duties imposed upon Canadian eggs by the McKinley bill has resulted in the building on the frontier of a large poultry barn, half in the United States and half in Canada. Hens will be fed on the Canadian side and will cross the frontier to lay their eggs.

Another Victim of the Syracuse Fire.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 8.—The remains of a human body were dug out of the ruins of the Leland Hotel during the morning. Only the skull was intact, the bones of the other parts of the body lying separate on a mattress. The remains are supposed to be those of Mary Doyle, one of the servants of the hotel.

Paroles Granted Ohio Convicts.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 8.—Among paroles granted by the penitentiary managers last night were those of Fred H. Bragins, the Cleveland editor sent up for three years for forgery, and John H. Simons, treasurer of Darke county, convicted of embezzlemeut and sentenced for six years.

Wages Advanced on the Lake Shore Road.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 8.—The wages of the freight engineers and firemen in the employ of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad Company have been increased 20 cents a day. The engineers are advanced from $3.50 to $3.70, and the firemen from $1.65 to $1.85.

British Exports and Imports.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The returns of the Board of Trade for October show that the exports have increased £590,000 and the imports decreased £490,000 during the month as compared with those for the corresponding month last year.

Ex-Governor O'Neal Dead.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 8.—News has been received here of the death of ex-Governor Edward O'Neal, at his home in Florence.

DR. KOCH'S TRIUMPH

His Cure for Consumption Pronounced a Success.

GERMANY'S RULER TO AID HIM

The Kaiser Regards the Discovery as a Subject for National Pride.

Closure to be Applied in the British Parliament—Lord Sackville's Nephew Drowned—Balfour Well Received in Ireland—Miss Riordan Shot Dr. Bright, Want President Harrison to Resign.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The interview between Professor Robert Koch and the Emperor resulted in the drafting of a bill for presentation to the Reichstag on its reassembling, empowering the government to appropriate a large sum to enable Dr. Koch to devote himself entirely to the task of educating the staff of army physicians in the methods of preparing the lymph and administering it to patients.

A central depot will be established in every province for the preparation of lymph, which will have connected with it a hospital where the poor will be treated gratuitously.

The Kaiser regards the discovery as a proper subject for national pride, and considers it to be his duty not only to secure it for his own countrymen, but to enable the whole world to share in its beneficial results. As statistics prove that quite one-half of all the sickness in the German army arises from consumption, the Emperor is also interested in the new method of curing that disease from a military point of view.

Dr. Hirschwald, the publisher, himself a medical authority, says that no scientific man of repute in Germany entertains any doubt of Dr. Koch's triumphant and complete success. Since beginning his experiments the latter has found that it is not necessary to use metallic substances in preparing the lymph, and has therefore discarded them.

THE COMING PARLIAMENT.

Debate to be Cut Off by the Application of Closure.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—A Cabinet council was held during the forenoon at which the question of enforcing the right of closure during the coming session of Parliament was discussed. It is believed that most of the Ministers object to allowing the opposition to talk very much during the session, as the Conservatives have nothing to gain by any further debate on the issues now before the country.

It is expected that the Liberals and Nationalists will propose an amendment to the address from the throne, demanding that the Queen dissolve Parliament. Under ordinary circumstances this would bring on a prolonged discussion of the Government's past record and future policy; but according to the present temper of the Conservatives, it is likely to simply be voted down, debate being cut off by the application of closure.

The party in power shows no sign of an inclination to head the frequently expressed will of the people that a change of administration should be made.

Want President Harrison to Resign.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The ignorance of English writers on American topics is again illustrated by some of the comments in the papers regarding the American elections. It is actually declared in more than one editorial that President Harrison and his Cabinet ought to resign now that the country has repudiated their policy. The idea that the American governmental system is radically different from the English seems not to have occurred to these writers.

Miss Riordan Shot Dr. Bright.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The woman arrested for shooting Dr. Bright, of Oxford, is Miss Kate Riordan. It is supposed that she was made furious by the prospect that Mr. Bright's daughter was about to marry Mr. Haines, who had formerly paid attentions to Miss Riordan. Mr. Haines declares that he was never engaged to Miss Riordan, and that she is laboring under an insane delusion.

Terrible Storms in Great Britain.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Storms and floods prevail throughout Great Britain. Many houses in all parts of the country have been unroofed, bridges swept away; and wharves battered to pieces by rushing winds and sweeping waters. It is already known that vessels plying in the coasting trade have been wrecked by the furious gales and enormous seas.

Chief Justice Coleridge Recovering.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Lord Chief Justice Coleridge slept well last night and this morning awoke feeling refreshed and in the possession of increased strength. His physicians do not consider his ailment serious and look confidently for his speedy recovery and the early resumption of his judicial duties.

Wounded by Young Bernhardt.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The duel between Sarah Bernhardt's son and M. Bourey, a dramatic critic of the Courier Francaise, was fought near Paris. The weapons used were swords. M. Bernhardt slightly wounded his antagonist on the sword arm, whereupon the affair was closed.

Paris Journals Pleased.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The Paris journals hail the Democratic victory in America with satisfaction, and express a hope that America will now adopt a wiser economic policy. The press generally urge the Government to abstain from a policy of prohibition against American goods.

Three Hundred Persons Were Killed.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Intelligence is received from Shanghai of the killing of 300 persons by an explosion at the Chinese Government powder works, at Tai Ping Fu. The mills were entirely destroyed. The cause of the explosion is not known.

CUSHING WHIPPED.

Knocked Out by the Paterson Lad in the Nineteenth Round.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The sportingmen from this city who witnessed the glove fight for $1,000 a side between Austin Gibbons of Paterson, N. J., and Mike Cushing of Williamsburg, N. Y. near Providence, R. I., say there was very little sharp work throughout the fight, there being several rounds in which no blow was struck. What fighting there was, however, was generally forced by Cushing, who had an advantage in two rounds which he failed to follow up.

The nineteenth and last round lasted scarcely a minute. The men came together but Gibbons rather forced the fighting, following Cushing up. After a little sparing he led with his left on a feint and swinging his right for the third time in the fight he landed on the already swollen cheek of his opponent.

Cushing dropped his hands, staggered across the ring and dropped on his side to the floor. He seemed to try and save himself, but his shoulders fell over and he stiffened out apparently unconscious.

The referee slowly counted the seconds, his friends called to him to get up, there was a convulsive shiver of his frame and he seemed to struggle to arise but could not lift his head.

The time was up and his seconds raised him from the floor, while a shout went up from Gibbons' friends.

The fight occupied just one hour and thirteen minutes.

Gibbons was apparently unharmed and the only mark on Cushing was the big punch on his left cheek which had split open and was bleeding. He took his defeat to heart when he rallied but was still dazed when the witnesses left him to the care of his seconds.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

—No Sunday evening services will be held at Warren Mission during the continuance of the meetings held by the Rev. Mr. Mills.

—Doane & VanArsdale, the shoe merchants, of No. 22 West Front street, have an extra force on hand for Saturday night trade.

—The Saturday gospel temperance meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held as usual tonight at their rooms, 73 West Front street The subject will be "Samuel the Reformer," I Samuel I: 3. All are invited.

—On the completion of the new station at Somerville the present telegraph office will not be needed there. It is reported that the building will be removed to Bound Brook, for the use of Dispatcher Frech and the telegraph system at that place.

—The revival services of next Tuesday will be devoted especially to the worship of God, and the day will partake of the nature of a second Sabbath. Further announcements of the various meetings of that day will be made in the churches tomorrow.

—Westfield could not do enough Thursday, for Gazelle Engine Co., No. 1, of Plainfield; for it was remembered concerning that awful fire of 1874, how nobly they responded to the call for help to battle against the fire that threatened to wipe the fair town of Westfield off the face of the earth.—Westfield Standard.

—The entertainment to be given by the Royal Arcanum Council next Monday night promises to be eminently successful. Already more than two hundred and fifty tickets have been taken, and as the Arcanum room will not accommodate a great many above this number there will be but a few more tickets disposed of.

—A North Plainfield correspondent writes that there ought to be a Borough ordinance that would take care of the sportive Ethiopian stable-hand who makes a practice of using insolent language to passers-by on a certain section of Mercer avenue. His insulting performances will soon, it is feared, become a public nuisance, and consequently they should be promptly and effectually discouraged.

—The burning of the State Experiment Station will prove a severe loss unless it is promptly reconstructed. The experiments in cattle food and milk were of inestimable value to farmers as well as to the State, and there is little doubt that the State will rebuild the Station on an improved plan. The services of these experiments to the general public are worth all the money that will be expended on them.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

—Too much care can not be given to the selection of spectacles and eye glasses, as poorly-fitting or improperly adjusted glasses will undoubtedly injure the sight. It is also difficult for some persons to obtain glasses which will enable them to read with ease and comfort. It is announced, therefore, that Caleb Dickinson has secured for three days only, Nov. 26, 27 and 28, the services of a skilled optician, Prof. Frederick A. Jones, who will examine eyes daily and prescribe properly-fitting glasses. Mr. Dickinson especially invites the attendance of those having headaches and nervous troubles, as these affections are in many cases entirely removed by suitable lenses.

—Table Talk for November is on hand to cheer the body with its pleasing presence and delicious contents. Among the many good things to be found in this number, that will deeply interest the housewife, is a Thanksgiving dinner prepared by its editor, Mrs. S. T. Rorer, whose fame for good dishes is world wide. Mrs. Rorer gives three bills of fare, with quantities for twelve persons, and tells one how to make everything the menu calls for. Thank giving, of all days in the year, is the one to lift you from the burdens of care and trials, and readers are advised to secure this number. The subscription price is 10 cents a number, $1 a year. Table Talk Publishing Company, 1617 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

—Van Emburgh & White's store is unquestionable a bonanza to those in search of good goods at low prices. This large store has every inch of space filled with bargains. The cloak department is larger this year than ever, and during the next few days will contain bargains in ladies' and misses' jackets and cloaks. They are all fresh from the manufacturer and are the latest in design and material. Not only bargains in dress goods, but in hosiery and underwear, which the firm are selling at extraordinarily low prices. The rear of this store is devoted to housefurnishing goods, and housekeepers will find it to their interest to visit this department. The firm are offering special values this week in hall and parlor lamps. A very handsome parlor lamp at $2.19 is a great bargain.

TRIFLED WITH GOD: DOOMED FOREVER.

Heart-Rending Story of a Gay Young Woman—Eternity of Heaven, or Hell!—Another Powerful Meeting of the Mills Revival Series—Penitents Confess Their Christ.

The Mills revival continues to be productive of great results. The list of converts increases daily, and in large numbers. Last night another hundred penitents signified to the great evangelist their desire henceforth to lead a Christian life. Many of these will be brought into fellowship with the local churches, which will reap a vast and lasting benefit from the work of the preacher on whom all eyes in this entire city are now turned.

The theme of the meeting last night was the immediate need of repentance. The congregation was the largest of the week, and all were visibly impressed by the earnest truths presented. The power of song was again manifested in the moist eyes and heart felt expressions resultant from the magnificent music welling from the throats of the organ and the people Especially impressive was the familiar hymn "Almost Persuaded," sung by the choir and congregation, and the solo by Mr. Greenwood, "Where Will You Spend Eternity?" Both of these followed closely after a most powerful, heart searching sermon by Mr. Mills, and were therefore peculiarly effective.

The evangelist first dwelt on the many attributes which made one's heart not right in the sight of God, and after instilling plain truths as to what should be done to set one's heart right he gave a forcible exposition of the need of instant penitence and conversion.

A deeply affecting incident related by the preacher was the story of a gay young woman who had been touched by the spirit of revival then prevailing in the city of her home One night she went to her room and pondered over the question "Where shall I spend Eternity?" After some thought she inscribed on a bit of paper this pledge: "If God shall spare my life for six months I will give my heart to God." But a moment more and she realized what a cold forbidding compact this was, so she scratched out the sentence she had written and substituted the words "If God shall spare my life for three months I will give my heart to God." This too aroused within her a sense of wrong, and she decided once more that this might be too long to wait. Within a month she was to do something which she knew to be sinful, and against the desire to commit this evil pleasure she made no attempt to struggle, but decided to become a Christian as soon as the fleeting enjoyment she had planned for the end of that month was over. So she scratched out the three-months pledge, and wrote, "If God shall spare my life for one month, I will give my heart to God," and so she left the paper. Twenty-eight days from that time she was found dead in her room. She had died without warning, and had passed into eternity without God and without hope. She had been trifling with God.

The lesson of this story was self-evident, but in tones of the most infinite love for his fellow-men the evangelist continued to urge his hearers to come to Christ, to come to Christ at once. Now was the accepted time. Let there not be an instant's delay. Let all even this very night give their hearts to God, and devote themselves to the Master's service.

The result of the preacher's pleading was evident in the large numbers who arose from all parts of the meeting-place and confessed Christ as their Saviour, and in the further numbers that assembled at the after-meeting in the basement parlors and grasped the hand of Mr. Mills as a token that they had resolved to enter on the Christian life. The sight of all these people, young and old, was a sublime one, and many touching incidents occurred as the converts acknowledged before mankind and the world their penitence and were welcomed into the Christian fold.

Great numbers have already been helped to a holier and supremely happier living by these meetings, and the spirit of revival is still on the increase. To-night a Sunday school conference of superintendents and teachers will be held in the First Baptist church, and much good is expected therefrom. Special union services will be held to-morrow as announced in thv Sunday service column.

The Camera Club to Exhibit.

The Camera Club intend to give another of their interesting exhibitions during Thanksgiving week, from Nov. 23 to 29; and as their new club rooms in the post-office building have been fitted up with every facility for picture making, it is expected that this exhibit will surpass in every respect all that have heretofore been held in this city. Citizens of Plainfield should appreciate the endeavor on the part of this club to educate and foster a love for the beautiful in art; and it is hoped that they will show their indorsement, and encourage the club, by visiting in large numbers this exhibition.

To Speculate on Real Estate.

The Land's End Company filed articles of incorporation with the Clerk of Union county, at Elizabeth yesterday. The company is organized for the purpose of speculating in real estate in Union county, and the capital is placed at $500,000. The incorporators are Dr. James S. Green, Howard H. Paul and Edward W. Ward.

Don't Mangle Him.

Now the turkey's being fed
With good provender instead
Of the stuff the farmer formerly did starve him with,
And Thanksgiving day he'll woo
Your encomiums if you
At Collier's get the knife and fork to carve
him with.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Head Usher George Cornwall, and his efficient corps, deserve great credit for the executive ability shown in disposing comfortably of the crowds at the Mills meetings.

Mrs. Anna B. Buchanan, mother of Mrs. T. J. Gillies of Madison avenue, died last night from a stroke of paralysis, at the home of her son, Edward Buchanan, Montague, Mich.

We said nothing—remarks the Somerville Democrat—against the Republican nominess during the campaign. We will not now. Charley Reed is a good fellow, but he is young enough yet. Defeat won't hurt him. He can stand it.

Edgar R. Hoadley, with whose stories many of Plainfield's young people are familiar, is a resident of Westfield. His pen is very busy with his writings, but he also finds time to attend to his other duties as Secretary of the Southern Railroad Company.

Hundreds of people have been highly pleased with the great church organ music at the Mills evening meetings, but not all have known who was the organist, hidden from sight as she has been by the large choir. THE PRESS takes pleasure in letting the people know that the musician is Mrs. B. F. Barnes, wife of "the candy man." Her ability has won her high praise.

S. O. Doane of East Fourth street, father of Plainfield's Fire Chief, is very ill. Two physicians, Drs Davis and Rushmore, were with him yesterday till nearly midnight. His trouble is something like a rupture of the bowels, and an operation was performed at noon today, in hope of saving his life. Dr. Hedges was assisted in the operation by the doctors mentioned above. The result will not be known for a day or two.

The Handsome Young Men Were From Plainfield.

Union County's Official Figures.

The official canvass of the votes cast in Union county at Tuesday's election was finished yesterday by the Board of Canvassers at Elizabeth.

For Congress, Jacob A. Geissenhainer (Dem.) received 7,191 votes, Amos Clark, Jr., (Rep.) 5,634; Geissenhainer's majority, 1,557.

For Senator, Frederick C. Marsh (Dem.) received 7,300, John C. Rankin (Rep.) 5,601; Marsh's majority, 1,699.

For Sheriff, Wm. H. Hicks (Dem.) had 7,162 votes, James H. Clark (Rep.) 5,753; Hicks's majority, 1,409.

Plainfield News from Abroad.

(From the Bound Brook Chronicle)

Miss Mattie Humble, of Somerset street, Plainfield, has been visiting Miss Dedie Merlett in this town.

Joseph M. Eder has secured a position with the New Jersey Postal Telegraph Co., as night operator at Plainfield.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Amos E. Giddes and Miss Carrie Benward. The ceremony will be performed at the First Baptist church in New Market next Wednesday evening, November 12.

The Jury and the Race Tracks.

A number of well-known race track patrons were before the Union County Grand Jury yesterday to tell all they knew about the alleged gambling practices at the New Jersey Jockey Club and Linden Park grounds, particularly the pool-selling Among others placed on the rack was Secretary McIntire, of the New Jersey Club. A force of constables was serving writs until after midnight, Thursday.

No "Midnight Alarm" Monday.

"The Midnight Alarm" is not to come to Plainfield Monday night, after all. The manager of the Company asked for a change of date, which was refused, and the contract was canceled.

Food Adulteration.

The question of Food Adulteration is now occupying public attention more than ever before, and organizations are being formed in almost every State to prevent the sale of adulterated food or drink. The following letter voluntarily given, speaks volumes for the purity of Speer's Port Grape Wine:

N. Y., June 2, 1884.

MR. ALFRED SPEER, Passaic, N. J.

My Dear Sir:—The result of my investigations of your Wines convinces me that they are perfectly pure and free from foreign or delatorious substances. The best I have ever tasted, and is all that can be desired in a pure Port Wine. The Unfermented is especially nourishing, and where the action of alcohol is not required it is well adapted for invalids. I speak as a physician. Your Pedro Brandy fills a want long felt in the profession, for pure brandy can only be obtained with great difficulty. A. S. COMSTOCK, M. D.,

The Borough Council Elects a Freeholder to fill a Vacancy, and Transacts Other Business.

Mayor Place and Councilmen Emmons, Hegeman, Needham, Sebring and Smalley, were present at the regular meeting of the North Plainfield Council, last evening. Petitions were received and referred, for the construction of ditches along Summit avenue; a crosswalk over Somerset street at Regent street; and permission to remove R. Elliott's building at 60 Somerset street.

David Bodine's election as a member of Warren Engine company was referred and subsequently approved. The bond of the Electric Light company, in the sum of $10,000, was presented by Mr. Sebring, referred for examination, and later accepted. W. B. Codington, City Judge of Plainfield, is one of the sureties.

Chairman Hegeman presented the Street Committe's report. 876 feet of macadam has been laid on Craig place from Grove to Somerset street, costing $438.62 of which the property owners have paid $200. Washington avenue has been fixed; Vine street, re-graded; the upper part of Race street, turnpiked, and somework done on Somerset street, North side of Mountain avenue. The Committee has spent $3,987 66 and have on hand a balance of $291.54. There is $1,165.64 due the city from property owners for street work, against which certain bills are chargeable. The total assetts of the Committee, all told, are $796 04.

The following resolutions were adopted; by Mr. Smalley, that the Borough magistrate be requested to collect all fines and make a monthly report; by Mr. Emmons, that Fire, Water and Lamps Committee be empowered to remove stalls into the fire department building, and to purchase a set of double harness; by Mr. Sebring, that Jacob Long be chosen freeholder to fill the unexpired term of Wm. E. Jones, deceased; by Mr. Sebring, that the Lamps Committee be authorized to negotiate a loan of $800 for street lighting purposes; by Mr. Hegeman, that the Streets committee be given power to purchase 300 tons of crushed stone for the repair of Somerset street.

J. W. VanHorn was appointed a Special Marshal. Mr. Hegeman reported, as already stated in THE PRESS, that the Council had no authority to act in the project of opening Peace street. The matter was referred to the Corporation Counsel. The executed contract for electric lighting, was received and filed.

COUNSELOR MARSH RIGHT AGAIN.

The Supreme Court of the Same Opinion as He Regarding the Sale of Liquor in Clubs.

The most important decision rendered by the Supreme Court on opinion day was in the case of the Essex Club. The organization is a social club composed of wealthy and fashionable people of Newark and vicinity, and in connection with the club's restaurant, wines and liquors were accustomed to be furnished to members, who were required to pay for what they ate and drank, but the club reaped no profit from the business. The club was prosecuted for selling liquor without a license. The Common Pleas Court of Newark, Judge Lippincott presiding, held that the club was not guilty, for the law was not intended to cover a case of that kind. Judge Lippincott held that the distribution of liquor among the members of the club, in the manner described, was not a sale, nor was it the business of selling as a retail liquor dealer, or otherwise contrary to law.

An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, and that Court in an opinion by Judge VanSyckel reverses the court below and declares that the club violated the law and was amenable to the penalty.

The case has excited considerable interest in this community because of a written opinion obtained by the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein from Corporation Counsel Marsh. That organization, as is well known, is made up of the best element of the German citizens, and they were determined to strictly obey the law of their adopted country. The opinion of Mr. Marsh was directly the opposite of that of the Common Pleas Court of Newark, but the Turn Verein having asked for the opinion, accepted it and acted accordingly.

Some few individuals were disposed to prefer the opinion of the Common Pleas Court, but they were overruled, and the Turn Verein wisely concluded to wait until the Supreme Court should settle the question. In the light of the result, the Turn Verein may well congratulate itself.

A Plainfielder's Little Racket.

Patrolman Vogel found Joseph Sullivan, of Plainfield, and Matthew Murphy, an Elizabeth hack driver, disputing at Market and Plane streets, Newark, Thursday night, and arrested Sulivan, who was behaving in a disorderly manner. Murphy said that Sullivan came to him in Elizabeth and hired him to drive to Newark. Arriving there, Sullivan visited a number of saloons and wanted to discharge the hack, but refused to pay for its hire. Joseph was fined $5.

Accidents will happen, so that all will catch cold sometimes. You want to find relief by the easiest and best methods. The most effectual way is to take Hires' Cough Cure. In whooping cough and croup nothing equals it. Every family should keep this remedy in the house handy in case of emergency.

BILLS FOR THE STATE TO PAY.

Union County Freeholders Refuse to Settle With Election Officers.

The Union County Board of Freeholders met yesterday afternoon and declined to pay the bills presented by several of the election boards for stationery, the return of ballot-boxes and the conveying of the returns of the Constitutional Amendment election to the Secretary of State at Trenton. This action of the Board of Freeholders was based on the opinion of the County Attorney, who declared the new election law to be defective, as it made no provision for the payment of these disputed items. Attorney Ward said the Constitutional election was a State matter and did not concern the county. The messengers who took the returns to Trenton should, therefore, get their pay from the State authorities, and unless the Freeholders had legislative authority they had no right to pay the bills.

After some discussion the bills were ordered to be returned to the election officers for correction, with the instruction that they must look to the State authorities for compensation for the items in dispute.

The members of the election boards are indignant over the matter, particularly those who took the election returns to Trenton, as they have given their time for nothing and have paid out of their own pockets their car fare to Trenton. A meeting will be held by them to take some steps towards securing their rightful compensation.

The Freeholders will meet Thursday, Nov. 20, for the purpose of acting on the election bills for the recent election.

A Republican Reflects on the Vissisitudes of Politics.

[Editor Mason in the Bound Brook Chronicle.]

We have met the enemy and there is nothing left of us.

After the Republicans "view with alarm" Mr. Reed's defeat in North Plainfield, they can "hail with delight" the threshing Mr. Keyes received in his home township of Hillsborough. Neither candidate ran well at home.

The New York World is inviting correspondence from residents of this State as to New Jersey's greatest need. If our metropolitan contemporary is in a position to supply "long felt wants" it will please give us a few more Republicans.

There is a small crumb of comfort in the fact that up in Hunterdon county the Republicans elected a member of the Assembly for the first time since 1873. The Democratic nominee was a Pidcock man who was distasteful to the better element of the Democratic party.

The Car Stove Goeth.

The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company are just finishing at their shops in Reading the fitting-up of nine of their finest locomotives with apparatus for heating passenger cars by steam. The engines are to be used on the Bound Brook division of the road. The passenger coaches of the line are being fitted with the pipes requisite for this system of heating, it being the desire an intention of the Company to comply with the popular demand to abolish the car stove.

Somerset County's Official Figures.

The official election returns from Somerset county gives Fowler, Dem., for Congress, a plurality of 343 over Goodman, Rep., whose vote was 2,534. The vote for Keyes, Dem., for Senator, was 2,906, a plurality of 394 over Reed, Rep. For Assembly Bergen, Dem., received 2,920 ballots, or 443 more than Schomp, Rep. Van Derveer, Democratic candidate for County Clerk, received 2,845 votes, a plurality of 278 over Van Nuys, Rep.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

Brief notices will be inserted under this head free of expense, but must be delivered at this office not later than eleven o'clock on Saturday morning to insure publication.

Warren Mission Sunday school at 2:30 P. M. Young people's meeting Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. No Sunday evening services during the continuance of the evangelistic meetings by the Rev. Mr. Mills.

At the Church of the Heavenly Rest, the Rev. Dr. J. P. Taylor, rector, will conduct services to-morrow as follows: Morning prayer and sermon at 11 o'clock. Sunday school at 3 o'clock. Evening service and sermon at 7:30 P. M. Seats free. Strangers welcome.

Because of the religious services of Mr. Mills in Plainfield, Reform Hall will not be opened to-morrow.

At the First Unitarian church, Second place, to-morrow, the Rev. Hobart Clark, pastor, will preach. The services will be held at 10:30 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. Sunday school at 11:45 A. M.

The masses in St. Mary's church to-morrow will be at 8:30, 9:45 and 10:45 A. M. Vespers will be held at 8 o'clock in the evening. Sunday school at three o'clock P. M.

The First Church of Christ will meet at Vanderbeek's Hall, Park avenue, to-morrow morning and evening. The Lord willing J. B. Cleaver will preach. Morning theme, I Peter, IV; evening, "Results of Neglecting the Great Salvation." The church will hold meetings each night during the week.

Meetings at the Woman's Christian Temperance Union rooms to-morrow morning at nine o'clock, and to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock. The afternoon meeting will be led by Mrs. Tomlinson.

The following union services will be held to-morrow: In the morning at 10:30, in the First Baptist church, the Rev. Mr. Mills, the evangelist, will preach to men only. At the same hour, the Rev. Dr. Yerkes will preach to women only at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and the Rev. W. R. Richards will preach to women only at the Methodist Episcopal church. The Sunday schools will meet at their usual places at their usual time, and at 3:45 P. M. the Rev. Mr. Mills will hold a meeting especially for young people in the First Baptist church. In the evening at 7:30 Mr. Mills will preach in the First Baptist church. While none are excluded from that evening service, non-church members are especially invited, and members of the various churches are urged to attend the union services held in the Crescent avenue church, where the Rev. C. B. Mitchell will preach, and in the Methodist Episcopal church, where the Rev. C. L. Goodrich will preach. After Sunday the evening union services will be held in the Crescent Avenue church.

At Grace church, to-morrow there will be early celebration at 7:30 A. M. Morning prayer and sermon at 10:30 A. M. Sunday school at 3 P. M. Evening service at 7:45 P. M.

On account of the union services in other churches, there will be no preaching service in the Trinity Reformed church to-morrow. The Sunday school will meet promptly at 2:30 in the afternoon.

Services will be held to-morrow in the German Reformed church on Craig place, North Plainfield, at 10:30 A. M and 8 P. M. A weekly service will be held Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock P. M. Topic for next Wednesday: "Prayer."

The Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector, will officiate at the Church of the Holy Cross to-morrow. Holy Communion will be administered at 8 A. M. Sunday school will meet at 9:45 A. M. Morning prayer and sermon will be held at 11 A. M.; even song at 4 P. M.

"I find the doctors and the sages
Have differed in all climes and ages."

But I have found no difference of opinion among the female sages who have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a remedy for all ailments peculiar to their sex. "Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of weak back, chronic congestion, inflammation, pain and tenderness. The only remedy for such maladies sold under a guarantee. Particulars on bottle-wrapper. All druggists.

Booth and Barrett's Cottage.

RUTLAND, Vt., Nov. 8.—Edwin Booth and Lawrence Barrett have purchased a site and will erect a cottage for their own occupancy on the east shore of Lake George, near Hague, about thirty miles from Rutland.

A Woman Killed While Hunting.

BANGOR, Me., Nov. 8.—Mrs. A. F. Nickerson, of this city, while out shooting with her husband, was instantly killed by the accidental discharge of her rifle.

Stabbed for Insulting a Woman.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Thomas Marrion was fatally stabbed in the neck by Wm. Maguire, who was arrested. The men were on bad terms because Marrion, it is alleged, spoke in a very offensive manner about Mrs. Maguire.

Struck by a Train and Killed.

ASHFORD JUNCTION, N. Y., Nov. 8.—George Halstead, a well known merchant of this place, was struck by a passenger train on the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg Railroad and instantly killed.

Ready for Thanksgiving.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The President says that he will issue the annual Thanksgiving proclamation for the last Thursday in November in a few days. When asked what among other things he would ask the country to be thankful for, he wittily replied: "I presume it would in order for us Republicans to be thankful for what has been left us."

Creditors Recover Something.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The Controller of the Currency has declared a first dividend of 20 per cent. in favor of the creditors of the Gloucestor City National Bank of Gloucester City, N. J., on claims proved amounting to $27,456.32. The bank failed May 1, 1890.

Official Count Necessary to Decide.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 8.—Corrected returns mostly complete and a few estimated, from 76 out of 79 counties, give Merriam a plurality of 1,290. The corrections received to-day are mostly in favor of Wilson, and an official count will probably be necessary to decide.

Entertaining Stanley.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Mr. and Mrs. Stanley dined at Delmonico's last evening the guests of Mr. Burdett-Coutts. The explorer, his wife and party afterward attended the Garden Theatre, where they were recognized and cheered by the audience.

Powderly Starts for Denver.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 8.—General Master Workman Powderly left here to attend the meeting of the General Assembly of the Knights of Labor, which will be held in Denver, commencing on Tuesday of next week.

SATIRE IN WILLS.

Queer Documents Left Behind Them by Eccentric Old Fellows.

One might suppose that will-making was any thing but a merry occupation, and yet the drollery of the wills that some eccentric old fellows have left behind them could hardly be surpassed, says the New York Ledger. Dean Swift could not have concocted a more bitter joke than that of the testator who, after reciting the obligations he was under to a particular friend, bequeathed to him, at the bottom of the first page of his will ten thousand —— dollars, of course, thought the delighted legatee; but, on turning the leaf, the bequest was discovered to be ten thousand thanks. What a wet blanket for "great expectations!"

Just as odd was the codicil of the death-stricken humorist who left to certain of his dear relatives "as many acres of land as shall be found equal to the area inclosed by the track of the center of the oscillation of the earth in a revolution round the sun, supposing the mean distance of the sun to be twenty-one thousand six hundred semi-diameters of the earth from it." This was a century ago; and as the problem could not be satisfactorily worked out, the legatees were kept at a mean distance from the property all their lives.

A very neat reproach was conveyed in the will of an uncle who bequeathed eleven silver spoons to his nephew, with the remark: "If I have not left him the dozen he knows the reason;" the young scapegrace having stolen the twelfth spoon some time before.

WITH THE DOCTORS.

Suggestions of Popular Interest Made by Physicians of Note.

The parched tongue in fever, a physician suggests, may be much relieved by the application of glycerine in water.

It is reported that a diet of fresh, sweet buttermilk has often been found favorable, and even effectual, to the cure of Bright's disease.

Foreign bodies in the alimentary tract, such as pennies, bullets, etc., may be removed more easily by large amounts of pulverized slippery elm taken into the stomach.

The Chinese, who reject scornfully nearly every application of Western medical science, are, according to the Governor of Hong Kong, firm believers in the advantage gained from vaccination, and submit to the ordeal with a cheerfulness and philosophy which are characteristic of this wily Oriental. Protection by vaccination is especially required in Hong Kong, owing, as Sir William des Vœux points out, to the frequency with which small-pox is introduced by steamers coming from all parts of the world, and to its fatal prevalence when it has once obtained a footing.

Dr. G. W. Barr writes in the Therapeutic Gazette that iced tea has none of the physiological action of theine if it is kept ice-cold for a short time. He says that he has known a man of nervous temperament, who is kept awake all night by a single cup of tea, to drink a half-gallon of iced tea during the evening and sleep soundly at his usual time of retiring. Others, made very "nervous" by hot tea, have been able to drink large quantities of iced tea with no appreciable effect. If the tea grounds are allowed to remain in the liquid the iced tea is usually kept long enough before drinking to dissolve more tannin than is usual in hot tea; hence the tea should be strained as soon as removed from the fire.

ACCORDING to the Archives de Medecine Militaire the German army has the lowest death rate, 3.97 per 1,000, while the Spanish has the highest, 13.40 per 1,000. Next after Germany comes Belgium, with a mortality of 4.7; then Great Britain, with 5.13; then France, with 6.06; then Austria-Hungary, with 6.94; then Italy, with 7.74, and finally Russia, whose 8.88 brings her next (though longo intervallo) to Spain. The most prevalent malady—pulmonary tuberculosis—counts more patients in the German army, however, than in the French, the figures being 3.12 for the former, as against 2.6 for the latter; though, on the other hand, the actual deaths from it are fewer in the German than in the Belgian or French army, the proportion being respectively 0.83, 1 and 1.11 per 1,000.

THAT TERRIBLE WEAKNESS.

Why So Many Women Are Faint, Weak, Tired, Nervous and Exhausted.

Women are great sufferers from nervousness, weakness, nervous prostration and debility. Thousands of girls droop and languish in the close, confined atmosphere of shops, factories or offices, and hundreds of thousands wear out their nerve force and power in household cares, family bereavements and responsibilities, and work which never ends.

Here lies the great strain upon the nervous system of women. Here is the cause why so many women complain of being weak, nervous, tired and exhausted.

They have little or no rest; their life is one continual round of work. What wonder that such women go to bed at night fatigued, and wake tired and unrefreshed in the morning! What wonder that they become worn out, so to speak, in nerve and vital power! What wonder that they have great weakness, exhaustion, pain in back and limbs, together with other distressing complaints which are always caused by loss of vital strength and vigor? Of how many thousands of women is the above a true and exact transcript of daily life? They have worn out and exhausted their nerve force and physical power. They must work, but it follows as surely as the day follows the night that they must receive from some source a renewal of nerve force and physical energies, or the human machine will soon cease to run at all.

The great nerve invigorant and female restorative is Dr. Greene's Nervura. No remedy in the world is so sure to bring back the bloom and color to the wan and faded cheeks, the brilliancy to the hollow and haggard eyes, the lightness and elasticity to the weak and weary step, the strength and vitality to the unstrung, shattered and worn out nerves. It is the greatest of all tonics and regulators, and cures all diseases. It is purely vegetable and harmless and can be procured at any druggist's for $1 per bottle.

GLAD TIDINGS OF HEALTH.

I wish to say, for the benefit of others, that I was taken sick with Heart Disease. I had two scientific physicians, and was under their care seven or eight months, but constantly grew worse, lost 75 pounds of flesh, and was so weak I could not raise myself in bed, and the doctors said I could be no better. But, hearing of Dr. Greene's Nervura, I commenced taking it, and in a week I began to feel better. At present, after using it a few months, I am able to walk and ride out, have gained 40 pounds in weight, so that I consider that Dr. Greene's Nervura saved my life, for which I feel very grateful.

MRS. E. M. BASS,
Orford, N. H.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

COLONEL GASCOM.

His First Essay at Humor and How It Ended.

[Written for This Paper.]

OFTEN, while attending church fairs Colonel Gascom, editor of the Sayton Herald, was called upon to make a speech. The Colonel always responded in his happiest vein, and as the ladies connected with the fairs were all anxious to see their names in print, his effort was loudly [applauded], and he was complimented so highly (by the aforesaid ladies) that it began to dawn on him that he was throwing time away writing dull editorials when his real talent demanded he should be a humorist. And a humorist he would be! One day he spent many hours preparing a humorous article, which he was sure would stagger his readers. At the same time he thought it best to try it on the foreman, who seemed to be a very intelligent man.

Colonel (to foreman, who has just entered for copy)—John, I have here an article entitled "Autumnal Reveries." It is humorous.

Foreman (who, by-the-by, is looking for an increase in his salary)—I always did say you ought to write humorous articles. You are so witty in conversation.

Colonel—Thank you, John. I would like very much to read my article to some one before venturing to publish it.

Foreman (smelling a rat, but still bearing in mind the raise)—I would be most pleased to hear it.

The Colonel reads the article. When the editor is not looking at him his foreman's face is as joyless as a closed summer resort; but should the editor look up from his copy he would find his face wreathed insunny smiles. There are only a few things short of crime a man won't do when he wants his salary raised.

Colonel (after reading the article)—Now, John, I want your candid opinion. What do you think of it?

Foreman (the wicked man)—That, sir, is one of the wittiest productions of the age. (Laughs long and loud.) Why, sir, that lays over any thing Mark Twain ever wrote. Very funny—very!

Colonel (banding him the copy)—Put it on the first page. And—John!

Foreman (an unaccountable thrill of anticipation coming over him)—Yes, Colonel.

Colonel—I have been thinking, John, that you are worth more than twelve dollars a week to me. Hereafter I will make it fifteen.

Foreman—O, thank you! thank you! (To himself as he goes out)—Taffy beats strikes every time!

At twelve o'clock Colonel Gascom went out for his midday lunch, but when he got as far as the door, he observed dark clouds gathering, and, fearing rain, he went back to his office for his umbrella. The Colonel's office is separated from the composing-room by a thin partition which does not reach to the ceiling, and as he heard his name mentioned in conversation in the composing-room, and feeling pretty sure the foreman was regaling the compositor with the many good points with which his "Autumnal Reveries" abounded, he resolved to play eavesdropper. The following is what he heard:

"HOLD ON! THAT'S A DEAD STEAL."

Foreman—And just to think I had to laugh at that stuff!

Colonel (to himself)—And that's the man whose salary I raised three dollars!

Compositor—I guess the poor devil is losing his mind.

Foreman—Brace yourself for another dose. (Reads)—"This is the season when the considerate road agent warms the shivering passengers on the Western train by covering them with a revolver and—"

Compositor—Hold on! That's a dead steal. I read that somewhere.

Foreman—I would say the whole thing was stolen if it wasn't so poor.

Compositor—I hope he hasn't got off any old coal-dealer jokes or stove up chestnuts about fixing up the stove-pipe.

Foreman—He hasn't, eh? Pass that beer. Just listen to this: "These are to the man who has to put up a stove not so much the piping days of peace as the piecing days of pipe, which reminds me that the coal question is up for discussion. The price of coal will go up, but the weight will remain stationary at seventeen hundred pounds to the ton. Very fuel weigh over seventeen hundred and fifty pounds and the man who expects more must be something of a fuel himself. Now is the time to get coaled before the weather does."

Compositor—Hold on! Break away! Turn over a few leaves and see if you can't strike something fresh.

Colonel Gascom (grimly)—Oh, I'll strike something fresh in a few minutes.

Foreman (turns over three pages and reads)—The Johnnie who has been at the seaside for the past three months studying, with a powerful glass, the passing ships that happen to be in a line with the shapely female bather with short skirts, has now deserted the seaside, having purchased a bald-headed ticket—presumably from a scalper—can now be found with a double-barreled opera-glass focusing the ballet-dancer, whose costume is not unlike that of the Cheyenne bride, consisting principally of a six-inch grin and three streaks of paint, and an occasional paste diamond."

Compositor (shouting)—Shut down the brakes. Pull up where you are! I'm only human, and I can't stand any more of that stuff!

Colonel Gascom (entering suddenly with a bound and yell of rage)—Come on, both of you ungrateful whelps! Take that! (smites the foreman with an old electrotype, nearly scalping him, and almost simultaneously kicking the compositor into one corner, upsetting a galley rack with ten or twelve columns of live type. The foreman and the compositor rally, and a general closing up ensues, when a policeman rushes in and arrests the trio).

Next day, the judge, having heard the story, honorably discharged the foreman and the compositor, and fined Colonel Gascom twenty-five dollars. It is useless to say that a close observation of the Herald would fail to reveal a humorous article by Colonel Gascom, entitled "Autumnal Reveries."

LOVE'S SACRIFICES.

A True Tale of a Strictly Fashionable Summer Resort.

Pauline—a maiden.

Fitzwilliam—a man (that is what is called a man at college, i. e., an eighteen-year-old boy.)

She—Fitzwilliam, it is now a month since first we met, and during that time we have been much together.

He (languidly)—Even so; a month. By Jove! it seems like a year, doesn't it?

She—During that time we have been on the most familiar terms. I have done every thing I could to amuse you, and make your stay here agreeable. I have mended your tennis blazer; I have sung to you in the pale moonlight. I have taken you out numberless times in my naphtha launch, and likewise in my village cart. I have had papa send you wines and cigars from the city, and I have spent my entire personal allowance in presents for you. I have permitted you to kiss me at reasonable intervals, and have not insisted on your telling me a dozen times a day that you loved but me alone.

He (drowsily)—I guess you're right, Pauline.

She—Now, don't you think that it would be just and fair for you to make some sacrifice for my sake? Not such a great sacrifice; just something to prove that you really have an affection for me.

He (royally)—Pauline, I will be more than just and fair. I will be generous. I will give you—ah—permission to tell the other girls at the hotel that I have kissed you.—Tom Hall, in Life.

She Might Better Change Places.

Mrs. Tangle—The cook is so independent that it's often hard to say whether she is boss or I. Indeed, it's only once a month that I feel sure about it.

Mr. Tangle—And when is that?

Mrs. Tangle—Oh, when I pay her her wages.—Light.

A SERIOUS QUESTION.

Mrs. Wellesley Vassar—Why are you so dejected, Miranda? You have every reason to be elated after having taken the senior prize in classics, and your essay on "Deductive Philosophy" won the admiration of all the faculty. So well-equipped a girl should—

Miranda Vassar—That's just the trouble. How—how can I find a husband who is able to sew buttons on, and cook, and mind the—the—oh! (Weeps.)—Puck.

Found Him Out at Last.

Rev. Mr. Squeegee (to Sunday-school class)—Well, children, what did Ananias do?

Johnny Cute—He wrote the weather reports.—Texas Siftings.

COURTSHIP IN ROLLAND.

Tobacco Plays an Important Part in Forming Engagements.

Thackeray explained the prejudice of ladies against tobacco as being due to the superior claims of the latter on the affections of young men. Yet the great novelist could not but have known that in many countries tobacco plays a very important part as a preliminary to courtship and the closer union of the sexes.

In certain parts of Holland when a young man thinks he has found his affinity it is customary for him to call for a match to light his cigar at the door of his loved one's house. This little subterfuge is intended to arouse the parents of the girl to the fact that something is in the wind. If a second call with a similar object is made soon after, no doubt is left of the young man's intentions, and the parents proceed to investigate the young man's character and antecedents, with a view of ascertaining his eligibility as a member of the family.

When he calls the third time, always for a match to light his cigar, they are prepared to give him an answer. If his suit is regarded with favor he is politely requested to step inside for the first time, and is served with a light. If he is not accepted he is refused a light, and the door is shut in his face without further ceremony. But, having prepared for this contingency, the downcast suitor will in all probability light his weed with a match from his own box and walk away musing on the transitory nature of all earthly things.

When the accepted suitor is invited to enter the house, he, as a matter of course, informs the parents which of their daughters has captivated his fancy. When this is settled the young woman steps forward and they join hands. While the engagement is by no means considered a settled fact even at this important stage, yet it is stated as a truth that when, on the occasion of the young man's third visit, his inamorata has offered him a second cigar, which he has smoked in the house, the engagement has never been canceled.

ROUSING THE LION.

Why Mr. Terry Will Paint the Streets of Detroit Red with Blood.

"I was a-going along," he said within hearing of a Detroit Free Press man as he stood at the sergeant's desk in the Woodbridge street station—"I was a-going along, saying nothing to nobody, when a feller as was a-standing in a doorway calls out to me:

"'Hello! Pumpkins, how's your ma?'

"My name is not Pumpkins; my name is Terry."

"'I see,' said the sergeant.

"'And my ma has been dead for twenty-three years."

"Yes."

"And in a very genteel way I explained to the stranger that he had made a mistake."

"Yes."

"But what does he do but beg my pardon and call me Mr. Hayseed. That is not my name; my name is Terry. He calls me Hayseed, and wants to know how the squash crop is coming on."

"I see."

"I saw that he was mistaken, and I tells him so, but what does he do but begs my pardon again and call me Mr. Turniptop, and ask the price of cabbages."

"I see. You hit him?"

"No. I comes down here for advice."

"Advice about what?"

"As to whether he was making fun of me and I should give him the all-firedest licking a feller ever got."

"Why, certainly."

"Very well. I will return. I will smash him. I will knock his head off. I will render him a wreck."

He started out and was gone ten minutes. Then he returned and said:

"Couldn't find him, but I'll leave my coat, vest, collar and tie here and go out and walk up and down and let some other feller tackle me. I think there's a feller on the corner now who'll call me Mr. Cornstalk and want to know if the price of tater-bugs has riz, and you telephone for a doctor and watch my smoke."

NOBLE MISS GARY.

The Daughter of a Chicago Judge Relieves a Sick Seamstress.

Miss Fannie Gary, a young and wealthy lady of Chicago, worked two weeks recently in a common tailor shop of that city. The story is a pretty one, with an heroic vein running through it. Mary Anderson worked in the shop referred to, and three weeks ago Miss Gary noticed that Miss Anderson was going rapidly into a decline by reason of the hard work and long hours of the shop, so she proposed sending her to a pleasant summer resort to recuperate.

"I can't go," said the girl. "The boss tailor will not let me leave unless I find some one to take my place, and I can't find anybody."

Miss Gary promptly met the case.

"You go," she replied, "and I will take your place."

Miss Anderson went to the country and Miss Gary went to the tailor shop. For two weeks she left her pleasant home every morning at six o'clock, clad in a neat, plain black dress, and found her way to the shop. She stitched all day long at the coarse cloth, reaching her home again at seven o'clock in the evening. It was not until Miss Anderson returned from her summer vacation that it was whispered about that the daughter of Judge Gary had been working for two weeks in a Division street tailor's shop.

Such a noble act of self-sacrifice will not, perhaps, rank in the estimation of many with the daring acts of a Grace Darling or an Ida Lewis, but for all that it suggests much food for very pleasant reflection.

Curious Bird's Nests.

At a recent meeting of the Zoological Society, says Chambers Journal, the photograph of a curious form of bird's nests was exhibited by Prof. Flower. The nest was that of a horn-bill from South Africa, which bird lays its eggs in a hole in a tree trunk. After the female bird has begun to sit her companion walls her in by filling up the aperture in the tree with clay, leaving a small opening, through which he passes to her a daily supply of food.

THE Capitol at Washington is the largest building in the United States. It is 715 feet long and 324 feet wide, covering three and one-half acres of ground. Its dome is 307½ feet high. The dome is fifth as to size among the greatest domes in the world.

A CURIOUS trap at the Patent Office is an imitation rat that has a piece of toasted cheese stuck on the end of a little spear that projects from his nose a short distance. When a real rat comes to nibble at the cheese the spear jumps out about six inches and impales the unfortunate.

PREPARING TO DIE

Birchall More Thoughtful Over His Execution.

HIS WIFE SUMMONED HOME.

Her Last Parting With the Doomed Man Will Take Place To-Morrow.

The Material for the Scaffold Brought Into the Jail Yard—Birchall Makes His Will So that His Wife Will Get Money Due Him—He Receives Another Note from the "Colonel."

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 10.—As the day for Birchall's execution approaches interest in the affair is daily increasing. He was, perhaps, a trifle more thoughtful to-day, but it may have been that the thoughts of the young wife he is soon to leave a widow sobered him from his usual careless demeanor.

Birchall saw the first indications of the preparations for his execution when the material arrived for the scaffold from which he will be launched into eternity on Friday. He made no sign that he realized what was going on. The scaffold will be erected in the western yard of the jail. The iron weight that will be attached to the other end of the rope to be used for the hanging has also arrived. It weighs 350 pounds.

Birchall Makes a Will.

Birchall expected to come into a considerable fortune next spring and is making his will so that his wife will get the money. He is in fair spirits, but his wife's anguish appears to upset him. He cares very little for himself, but exhibits wonderful attachment to the little woman who has stuck to him so faithfully. The feeling against him is very bitter. The pulpit and the press are nearly unanimous for his execution.

Birchall received a card from the "Colonel," dated as before, from Jackson, Mich. He still persists that he did the shooting, and not Birchall. The card was submitted to an expert and compared with Birchall's writing, and he pronounced it to have been written by the prisoner. He had no doubt about it, and no hesitation in saying so. This was an unexpected break in what appeared at first to be a very neat little chain.

Mrs. Birchall Called Home.

Mrs. Birchall has received a dispatch from her father in London to return home immediately. The last parting between the doomed man and his wife will take place to-morrow or Wednesday. Birchall, it is understood, has asked his jailer to allow him to meet his wife for the last time in the jailer's office outside the sight of the iron bars, that she may carry away in her memory a brighter recollection of the surroundings of their parting than if she took leave from him through grated bars or iron netting. It is not likely the request will be granted.

HE LOST HIS MONEY.

A Neat Piece of Work by New York Green Goods Men.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 10.—A neat piece of work by New York "green goods" men came to light here last night, when John Hirsch, of Germanville, Iowa, opened a package which he thought contained $5,000 of good money and found five $1 bills and 100 slips of paper.

Johann was notified from New York last week that a legacy of $5,000, left by a deceased aunt, Charlotte Blume, awaited him. At the Jersey City station he was met by two men who represented themselves as lawyers. They took him to a hotel and counted $5,000 in good money. Then to protect him against thieves, as they said, they did the money up in packages and told Hirsch not to open these until he reached home. He paid them $500 of his own money and started West.

Great Naval Demonstration.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The launching of the cruiser Maine has been fixed for November 18, and will probably take place then, though there was talk of postponement until the arrival of the Brazilian fleet. The affair will be made a great naval demonstration, in which all the United States vessels in the port of New York will participate.

Seeking Health in the Adirondacks.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Ex-Minister to England E. J. Phelps and Mrs. Phelps, accompanied by Dr. Loomis, of Burlington, Vt., are quartered at the Hotel Asperand, Saranac Lake. Mrs. Phelps is in very poor health and will probably remain in the Adirondacks the coming winter. Mr. Phelps will return to-morrow.

Not Summoned to Rome.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 8.—Cardinal Gibbons has received from Rome a positive contradiction of the Statement recently published that Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul had been summoned to Rome on account of the views expressed by the Archbishop on public school education in this country.

Operator Escaped and Fireman Killed.

ALTOONA, Pa., Nov. 10.—A stock train crashed into and completely wrecked the signal tower at Port Royal on the Pennsylvania Railroad. The operator escaped death by jumping from the tower, but the fireman of the train was killed.

A Woman Hangs Herself.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Mrs. Margaret Higgins, aged 35 years, committed suicide last evening by hanging herself at the home of an Italian with whom she had been living. Despondency and remorse over her past life was the cause.

Laborers Lose Their Wages.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Irving Beck, the contractor who undertook the work of removing the debris from the Leland Hotel fire, has disappeared with $1,000, the wages due his 100 workingmen.

THE FAMINE APPEAL.

The American Committee Will Not Solicit Aid at Present.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—The American Committee for the relief of famine in Ireland has issued a statement announcing the temporary withdrawal of its appeal to the American people.

At the time the appeal was issued, the committee says, there was no reason for believing that the distress which would follow the potato crop in Ireland would be relieved otherwise than by American generosity, no steps having been taken by the British Government to meet the crisis. The first effect of the action of the American committee was to provoke flippant denial from the Government press that distress existed or that famine was threatened. Nevertheless, the developments of the last month have confirmed the committee's warning, and the British Government has been spurred to investigate the situation and undertake a system of public works in the distressed districts, which by affording partial relief will at least postpone the threatened famine.

VICTIMS OF DIPHTHERIA.

Neighbors Refuse to Go Near a Widow and Her Children.

NEWFANE, N.Y., Nov. 10.—A peculiarly afflicted family is that of Mrs. John Wilson, of this place, a widow with three daughters and two sons. Her son Charles contracted malignant diphtheria while visiting in Lockport last week, where two children had died. He returned home, and the whole family contracted the disease. Two daughters, Edith and May, have died, and the third one is expected to die hourly.

For several days the family had no attendance, and their condition and suffering were pitiable. The neighbors refused to go near them for fear of contracting the disease. Dr. Palmer, of Lockport, took charge of the case, secured a professional nurse, and hopes to save the mother and son.

Warrants Out for Smith and Godfrey.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Steps are being taken to prevent the fight between George Godfrey, the colored heavyweight of Boston, and Ed Smith, of Denver, Col., who are advertised to fight in the new Puritan Hall, Long Island City, to-morrow night. Sheriff Goldner submitted an affidavit to District Attorney Fleming, in which he alleged he had reason to believe that the law relating to prize fighting was about to be violated in Puritan Hall. The district attorney submitted the affidavit to County Judge Garretson, and asked that warrants be issued for the principals in the fight, and also a search warrant to enter the building. Several warrants were issued, and the sheriff has explicit orders in relation to serving them.

Escaped from a Sinking Vessel.

OSHKOSH, Wis., Nov. 10.—News has reached this city of the sinking of the Ossian Cook, a freight-laden boat which plies between this city and points on the Upper Fox River. It appears that when the boat reached what is known as the Upper Cut, near Northport, a small town on the Fox River, it in some way ran against a snag and sunk almost immediately. A man named Otto went below and tried to stop the leak and was drowned. All the rest of the crew were saved.

A Pugilist Charged With Murder.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 10.—David A. Greever, a wealthy cattle man who was shot Friday afternoon by Charles Clifford, the New York lightweight pugilist, died from the effects of his wound yesterday afternoon. Clifford will be arraigned to-day charged with murder. Mrs. Clifford, over whom the quarrel was held, has disappeared. It is thought she may have concealed herself, fearful of being charged with complicity in Greever's murder.

An Old Engineer Dead.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Isaac Vrooman, one of the oldest engineers in the employ of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad, died at his home in this city yesterday, aged 65 years. He had been in the employ of the road since 1852, and for the past 20 years ran the Utica accommodation train. He was well known over the entire length of the road.

Gov. Hill Will Preside To-Night.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Governor David B. Hill arrived in the city last night, accompanied by Colonel EcEwen. To-night he will preside at the reception to Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon, the Irish leaders now visiting this city, and will return to Albany on Wednesday. The Governor was feeling in the best of health and spirits, but declined to talk politics, as he said he had "talked out" before election.

Found Dead on the Highway.

ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 10.—The body of John McKeon was found in the township of Livingstone, about four miles from Orange Lake, early in the morning, beside the road near a brook. On one side of his head was a large wound, that might have been inflicted by a sharp stone. McKeon was seen going up the mountain yesterday with an unknown man who has not been seen since.

THE PRESIDENT BUSY

Preparing His Annual Message to Congress.

REPORT OF SECRETARY RUSK.

He Expresses a Hopeful View of Agricultural Affairs.

The Speakership and the President—Rumored Alliance Between the East and West—Senator Quay and the National Committee—Reception of the Brazilian Squadron.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The President is engaged in the preparation of his annual message to Congress, and much of the material for it will be supplied to him by the members of his Cabinet. Their annual reports will furnish a great many suggestions which he will repeat to Congress, with such recommendations as seem to him appropriate. But such important topics as the tariff and the silver question the President will discuss in his own language and from his own viewpoint.

This is what he is engaged upon every morning, seated at the square desk that stands between the two long windows in his office on the second floor of the Executive Mansion. He is not making a consecutive story of the message, but it is being written piecemeal, and the pieces will be put together by the President, with the assistance of Private Secretary Halford, when the message is complete.

It will go to Congress either Monday, December 1, or the Tuesday following, and if custom is followed, a messenger will leave the Executive Mansion the day before with sealed, printed copies of the message, to be delivered in New York to the leading newspapers and to the representatives of the press associations. In the meantime, the only persons who have been made acquainted with the contents of the message are Miss Sanger, Mr. Pruden and Private-Secretary Halford. The President may read extracts from it to one or two of his confidential advisers, but only the three persons named will have seen the full document.

SPEAKERSHIP GOSSIP.

An Alliance May be Formed Between the East and West.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—With the return of members of Congress to the city the contest for the Speakership of the next House begins to assume local interest and importance. The fight for the position will be waged warmly during the coming winter, and will undoubtedly have its effect even on the deliberations of the present House of Representatives.

The most interesting phase of the discussion of the subject at this time is the question of its relation to the contest for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency in 1892. One of the current bits of gossip is that an alliance may be formed between the East and the West in the Speakership contest, with a view to an arrangement for the Presidential nomination.

Prominent Democrats now in the city say that the Democratic strength in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland, West Virginia, part of Pennsylvania and part of Virginia can be thrown for a Western candidate for the Speakership in exchange for Western votes for an Eastern candidate for the Presidential nomination. Governor Abbett of New Jersey, ex-Governor Black of Pennsylvania, Senator Barbour of Virginia and Senator Gorman of Maryland are counted as favorable to such an alliance.

In this combination the candidates for the Presidency most spoken of are Whitney and Hill, while it is current gossip that the friends of Cleveland and Pattison in the East may form an alliance for the election of a Southern candidate for Speaker in exchange for Southern votes in the Democratic National Convention.

Secretary Rusk's Annual Report.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The Secretary of Agriculture has presented his annual report to the President. He expresses a distinctly hopeful view of agricultural affairs, indicating the obvious benefits to farmers of certain legislation which he specifies. By comparing prices at Chicago for October 16 of 1890 and of 1889, he shows a marked increase in the values of agricultural products, especially of cereals.

A Rumor About Senator Quay.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Among the reports discussed by the political gossips is one that Senator Quay would resign the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee as soon as he returns from Florida, and that Mr. Clarkson would be his successor.

Stanley's First Lecture.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Mr. Stanley's first lecture will take place at the Metropolitan Opera House to-morrow evening, and will be a remarkable event. All of his auditors are expected to appear on that occasion in full dress.

A LIVELY SCANDAL.

An Aged Capitalist Sued for $30,000 on a Serious Charge.

SOUTH ACTON, Mass., Nov. 10.—There is a lively scandal in connection with the suit for $30,000 which Mr. Arthur Hughes brings against Mr. James Tuttle for alleged alienation of his wife's affections. Mr. Tuttle is 73 years old, and Mrs. Hughes is not yet 30.

Mr. Tuttle has got a few hundred thousand dollars in the bank and elsewhere, and is one of the leading men in the town. He has a wife and two children, both of whom are married and have children.

Mr. and Mrs. Hughes have lived in town about a year. She is said to have a divorced husband and a child by him.

The allegation upon which the suit is based is that Mr. Tuttle and Mrs. Hughes were discovered in a compromising situation in a corn field a short time ago. The man who claims to have made the discovery does not have the best reputation for veracity. Mr. Tuttle denies the allegation and says it is a case of blackmail. He admits going to the corn field with Mrs. Hughes, and says they went after corn.

MET A TERRIBLE FATE.

A Woman Set Fire to Her Night-Clothes Early in the Morning.

RUTHERFORD, N. J., Nov. 10.—Mrs. Frederick Perkins, of South Rutherford, feeling restless during the morning, went down stairs to start a fire in the stove at 3:30 o'clock. After using a match she threw it on the floor.

It fell on a piece of paper, which blazed up and set fire to her night-clothes. She ran screaming upstairs to the room where her husband was sleeping. He, awakened by her screams, caught up a blanket and tried to smother the flames, but his efforts were useless, as the fire had already burned nearly every stitch of her clothing.

Dr. J. H. Hollister was immediately summoned, but Mrs. Perkins was beyond medical assistance, dying in a few minutes. Mrs. Perkins was the mother of five children.

A Clever Swindler Arrested.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Angelina E. Conrad of Brockville, Ky., and Walter Willard, alias "Big Walter," a noted swindler whose picture is in the rogues' gallery, were arrested by detectives who followed them from Newark, N. J., where he met Mrs. Conrad, introducing himself by a queer symbol on a telegraph blank which each carried. At police headquarters Inspector Byrnes learned from Mrs. Conrad that she had come from Kentucky to buy $3,000 worth of "green goods" from Willard. He was locked up and Mrs. Conrad was detained at headquarters to appear against him.

This May Mean a Big Strike.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 10.—The General Grievance Committee of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Firemen, Trainmen, Switchmen and Order of Railway Conductors of Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, including both the Northwest and Southwest system, are on their way here, where they will present a schedule of wages to General Manager Wood. They will also ask that other grievances against officials of certain divisions be investigated. The committee number about 30 men.

New Candidate for Senator.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Friends of the Hon. Edward Murphy, Jr., chairman of the Democratic State Committee, are urging him to become a candidate for the United States Senatorship. It is understood that Governor Hill favors his candidacy. Mr. Murphy declines speaking on the subject beyond saying that a United States Senatorship is a great honor. There are good reasons for believing that Mr. Murphy will consent to enter the race.

The Yonkers Mystery.

YONKERS, N. Y., Nov. 10.—The mysterious gentleman who calls himself James H. Edgar has sent Mr. Perrin H. Sumner no more letters. The latter is anxiously waiting for the mysterious one to make good his promise that he will appear in the flesh. The suicide still sleeps unknown in his grave in Yonkers, and James H. Edgar is still wrapped in obscurity. Every one knows where the body of the suicide is. That is the difference between the unknown and Mr. Edgar.

Democratic Seats Will be Contested.

WATERBURY, Conn., Nov. 10.—Naugatuck elected two Representatives this year, the recent census showing a population of over 500. The seats of the two Democrats elected will be contested. The Republicans claim that the increased population was not officially announced, and the election is consequently illegal. Leading Democrats hold that the election was legal, Bristol having done the same thing in 1880, without opposition and without official announcement.

Decorating Anarchists' Graves.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—Armsful of flowers, sympathetic speeches and a parade of 2,000 sorrowing friends marked the celebration of the fourth anniversary of the execution of the anarchists, Spies, Parsons, Engel and Fischer. Decorum characterized all the exercises. The speeches, in comparison with old-time fiery utterances, were mild almost to tameness.

Reception to Dillon and O'Brien.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 10.—A convention of Irish societies completed arrangements for a parade and reception to Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien Wednesday evening. Military and civic parades will also be held, also a mass meeting in Infantry Hall.

Five Dwellings Burned.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 10.—Fire about midnight destroyed five dwellings in the central part of Tremont. All the buildings except one, a two-story brick house, were frame structures. Loss estimated at $25,000.

LYNCHERS EXPECTED

Bold Attempt to Rescue a Negro Prisoner.

THE JAIL GUARDED BY TROOPS.

Danger of a Riot Between Whites and Blacks at Annapolis.

Bertha Phipps Identified the Prisoner Who Assaulted Her—All Sorts of Threats Made Against the Jailers if they Allow the Prisoner to be Harmed—Twenty Rioters Arrested.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 10.—Another attempt was made last night to rescue the negro Ernest Forbes, who was arrested on Friday, charged with assault upon Miss Bertha Phipps, a young girl living with her widowed mother and uncle in the country. Sheriff Armiger had heard that an attack would be made upon the jail during the night, and attempted to take him to a place of safety. He had got only a short distance from the jail when he was espied by some colored men. They immediately gave the alarm and a rush was made for the deputy and his prisoner. A general fight between whites and blacks followed. The deputy, however, succeeded in getting his prisoner into a store nearby and locking the door.

In the meantime the mob increased to several hundred persons, mostly colored, who clamored for the prisoner and attempted to break open the place. The sheriff soon summoned a posse of men, who with the aid of the police drove the mob back. A number of shots were fired. One officer was slightly wounded in the face and another in the arm.

Threats to Burn the Jail.

Several negroes were wounded in the melee and the greatest excitement prevailed. Threats were made to burn the jail down, and a strong guard was kept on the premises all night. The Governor's Guards, about 40 muskets, were ordered out. These had the effect to disperse the crowd, but it was not until 3 o'clock this morning that quiet was restored. In the meantime the sheriff took the prisoner back to jail, where he is securely guarded.

About 20 negroes were arrested and put in jail for inciting a riot and assaulting the deputy and police. One of the rioters was severely wounded in the head by a pistol shot. The Sheriff expects an attack upon the jail at any time.

It was reported to-day that the girl had died. She was only 15 years of age, and was going to the field to milk the cows last Thursday when she was attacked by Forbes. He crept stealthily up behind her, threw her down and stuffed her apron in her mouth. She was found some time afterward lying unconscious in the field. When she recovered she identified Forbes as her assailant.

GEN. BOOTH'S SCHEME.

His Novel Plan to Help the Poor the Chief Subject in England.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Archdeacon Farrar delivered an earnest address at Westminster Abbey in support of the scheme of General Booth for the redemption of England's poverty-stricken masses.

The announcement that the archdeacon would speak on this topic had attracted such a throng of people that after the Abbey had been crowded to its utmost capacity thousands were turned away, unable to gain admission.

General Booth's novel and alluring plan is now one of the chief subjects of public interest. Twenty leading clergymen of Great Britain have signed an appeal to the people to raise the $5,000,000 which General Booth thinks would be required to successfully carry out the enterprise. Cardinal Manning and most of the Protestant bishops have endorsed the plan. The Prince of Wales has written General Booth heartily approving the scheme, which he describes as an intelligent and promising effort "to aid the people whose welfare is near my heart."

Queen Victoria's Speech.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—It is expected that the Queen's speech on the opening of Parliament will be unusually short, and that no new measure of importance will be announced, except perhaps a bill providing for free or assisted elementary education. The ministerial programme will consist mainly of the legislative remnants of the last session, including the Tithe, Irish Land Purchase, Irish Local Government, Employers' Liability, Savings Banks and Scotch Private Legislation bills.

Labor Law Reforms Asked for.

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 10.—The Provincial Workmen's Association, which is a sort of Nova Scotia order of Knights of Labor, is petitioning Parliament to enact a law making eight hours a day's work for miners; to prohibit the employment of boys in or around the mines, who are under 12 years of age, and to prohibit the employment of boys unable to read or write and do arithmetic up to fractions.

Advocating a Republic in Belgium.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 10.—Meetings were held throughout Belgium in support of the eight-hour day and universal suffrage. Many of the speakers advocated the establishment of a republic. A large amount of money was collected in view of a general strike. Handbills were thrown over the walls of the barracks in Brussels enjoining the soldiers to co-operate with the workingmen.

Reception to the Count of Paris.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The Count of Paris is expected to arrive at Stowe, the seat of the late Duke of Buckingham, which he has leased from the Duchess of Buckingham, this afternoon. The mayor and corporation will give the Count a reception, and the town is decorated in his

SAW THEIR DAUGHTER DIE.

An Effort to Remove a Mole from a Girl's Cheek Results Fatally.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—The death of Marion C., daughter of Darlington T. Jones, of 6041 Yale street, Englewood, Ill., occurred at the Presbyterian Hospital while undergoing a surgical operation for the removal of a small mole on her right cheek.

The case is an extremely pitiful one. Marion was a beautiful girl despite the fact that a small mole had made its appearance on her right cheek. It was this small defect which was primarily the cause of her death. Her parents were very anxious that their daughter should appear well in society, and the mole was a constant source of annoyance of them. Then, too, they feared that it might develop into something more serious. After considerable deliberation it was decided to have the blemish removed by a surgical operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones selected the Presbyterian Hospital as the institution for the operation to be performed. It is said it was Dr. Charles Parkes, member of the surgical staff of the hospital who plied the knife.

Marion was placed on the operating table, and preparations were made by Dr. Parkes for administering the usual anæsthetic. A cloth was saturated with chloroform and applied to the girl's nostrils. So brave was she that she offered to hold the cloth in place while the surgeon was placing his instruments in position in readiness for the operation.

Then, with her parents standing beside her, the young girl sank into a sleep from which she was never to awake.

The mole was removed and restoratives applied in order to resuscitate the patient. The effort resulted only in a convulsion, which ended in death. When Dr. Parkes was forced to announce the sad fact Mr. and Mrs. Jones refused to believe it. But when they finally realized the truth their grief moved even the attendants, who are accustomed to such scenes, to tears.

Dr. Parkes when seen had little to say for publication, further than the girl was given chloroform in the usual manner, and instead of reviving she went into a convulsion and died.

WILL FORSAKE HER WEALTH.

Miss Mary Abell to Emulate the Example of Miss Drexel.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 10.—Miss Mary S. Abell, daughter of the late Arunah S. Abell of the Baltimore Sun, will take the white veil at the Convent of Visitation in Georgetown in January. She entered as a postulant some time ago, and for nearly a year has been preparing for the novitiate.

Miss Abell, who is one of the wealthiest women in this State, has, like the rest of the family, always been a devout member of the Catholic Church, but not until after her father's death did she make up her mind to renounce the world.

It is understood that by her father's will she came into possession of some $2,000,000 worth of property, all of which is safely invested in real estate. Only the three sons—George, Edwin and Walter—are interested in the newspaper. As the property was given direct, and is not held in trust, Miss Abell can dispose of it as she deems proper, and rumor has it that she has determined to emulate the example of Miss Catherine Drexel and give all her possessions to the Church.

There are three other sisters, two of whom are married. One is the wife of a merchant named Brady, who is now in business in the West, and the other married Col. Victor L. Baughman, the present Comptroller of the Maryland State Treasury.

The announcement has created a decided sensation in church circles.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Mr. Stanley declines to talk further in reply to his critics.

Princess Marie, the wife of Prince Waldemar of Denmark, has been delivered of a male child.

Signor Succi began the fifth day of his fast in New York under the observation of watchers and physicians.

The carding and spinning departments of the Harrison Woolen Mills at Woonsocket, R. I., have shut down.

It is understood that the leading hide and leather men of the United States will attempt to advance prices if conditions are favorable a few weeks hence.

The Suffolk county (Mass.) grand jury reported an indictment of thirty counts against S. S. Drew, a former dry goods merchant, for cheating. Drew still remains in jail unable to get $10,000 bail.

John Schmuckler, aged 24, of Muncy, Pa., visited relatives in Reading and was found dead in bed suffocated by gas. The gas was turned on full. The verdict of the coroner's jury was accidental death.

The Democrats of Michigan are still claiming that the Senate will stand 16 to 16, with the Lieutenant-Governor casting the decisive vote. The Republicans claim it by 17 to 12, not including three Patrons of Industry.

The State Arbitration Board of Massachusetts has again suggested a conference between the Morocco manufacturers of Lynn and their workmen. No conference is likely to be agreed to, however, at which outsiders will be allowed to be present.

Slight changes in the official count of Pennsylvania bring Pattison's plurality up to 17,258. Watres, Rep., for Lieut.-Governor has 18,075 plurality, and Stewart, Rep., for Secretary of Internal Affairs, 17,120 plurality. The Legislature will be 20 Republicans on joint ballot, a loss of 52.

The Worcester Light Infantry, Company C, Second regiment, of Worcester, Mass., voted to make an excursion to Baltimore next spring to celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of the passage of the company through that city on its way to the front with the old Sixth regiment.

The Carnegie Company has purchased the plant of the Allegheny, Pa., Bessemer Steel Company and will begin to operate it at once. The acquisition of this mill will enormously increase the influence of the Carnegies, as it virtually gives them a monopoly of the steel-rail industry in the United States.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Hugo Weigmann and his daughters, Lillie and Ida, are in Boston, the guests of A. Korman, a former citizen of Plainfield.

Miss Eleanor T. Morrison, of Plainfield, assistant teacher in Mme. Alberti's Delsarte school, New York, is visiting at the residence of the editor of this paper.—New Brunswick Home News.

Frank Deitz, the gentlemanly business manager of A. M. Palmer's "Aunt Jack" company, was in Plainfield today arranging to produce that excellent play at Music Hall on Saturday evening.

Freeholder Vanderbeek, E. P. Thorn, James Manning and W. J. Pierson, of this city, with Wm. M. Cornwell and Dr. Pierson of New York, left to-day for duck shooting at Barnegat Bay. They will be gone until Thursday.

On Wednesday evening at the home of the bride, 14 North avenue, will take place the wedding of Miss Flora May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Garretson, to H. Ellsworth Gayle. The Rev. Mr. Schenck will officiate.

Aaron F. Carpenter, who has been visiting his family in this city, has gone South again, where he is the owner of a phosphate deposit on the Rappahanock river, Virginia, that is practically inexhaustible, although large quantities, for which there is an unlimited demand, are daily shipped to market.

The fiftieth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Albro Lyons, whose home for so many years was on Central avenue, this city, took place at their present residence, St. Felix street, Brooklyn, one evening last week. A large number of guests were present, including some Plainfield friends. Among the gifts were one hundred dollars in gold.

They Feel Very Sore in Bergen.

Bergen county Republicans were thunderstruck Tuesday night to hear that Englewood township, the home of William Walter Phelps, had given Cadmus (Dem.) for Congress a majority of 253. It gave Phelps 134 in 1886, and was counted on as surely Republican. The organ of the party in the county, the Hackensack Republican, pays its respects to the township in this wise: "Englewood is the home of bankers, importers, and commercial lawyers, whose business is in New York, and who are thoroughly imbued with the free-trade heresies of that importing city. They are opposed to the McKinley bill, favor a low tariff, and consequently they voted the Democratic ticket, and carried everybody they could with them. Englewood village is politically a repugnantly rotten spot—a festering sore of Mugwumpery. It is a natural breeding place for the Mugwump maggot. They are as thick there as fleas on a woolly dog in August, and they are of course opposed to the Republican party and its policy."

There's Millions in It.

Daniel F. Lewis, President of the Brooklyn City Railroad Company, and son of the late Wm. B. Lewis of this city, has made public the details of a scheme by which certain capitalists, organized and incorporated as the Bay Ridge Park Improvement Company, propose to develop land lying between Third avenue, Brooklyn, and New Utrecht, Bath Beach, and Bensonhurst, L. I. The ground has been purchased by the company and it is to be laid out in streets, lighted by gas, and sewered. Mr. Lewis is President of the corporation.

The City Railroad Company has secured a franchise to connect the property with the Bay Ridge ferries, and will construct an electric railroad along Second avenue from the Brooklyn city line at Sixtieth street to Sixty-fifth street, to Third avenue, to Bay Ridge avenue, to Thirteenth avenue, to Eighty-sixth street, and then to the line dividing the towns of New Utrecht and Bensonhurst.

Westfield to Have a Y. M. C. A.

The movement for the establishment of a branch of the Young Men's Christian Association in Westfield has led State Secretary D. F. More to appoint the next district convention of the New Jersey Young Men's Christian Association to be held at Westfield, November 28-30. After the convention the organization of a Westfield branch will follow. All of the churches are in favor of the project, and already there is a canvass of candidates for the offices on foot. The programme of the convention includes business meetings November 28 and 29, a platform meeting November 29, and a union meeting in one of the churches Sunday evening, the 30th. Several excellent speakers are promised.

A General Tie-up

Of all the means of public conveyance in a large city, even for a few hours, during a strike of the employes, means a general paralyzing of trade and industry for the time being, and is attended with an enormous aggregate loss to the community. How much more serious to the individual is the general tie-up of his system, due to the strike of the most important organs for more prudent treatment and better care. If too long neglected, a torpid or sluggish liver will produce serious forms of kidney and liver diseases, malarial trouble and chronic dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are a preventive and cure of these disorders. They are prompt, sure and effective, pleasant to take, and positively harmless.

OBITUARY.

Harvey Fisk.

Harvey Fisk, father of Messrs Charles and Pliny Fisk of West Seventh street, composing the firm of Harvey Fisk & Sons, bankers and dealers in United States bonds at No. 28 Nassau street, New York, died Saturday at his country home, Wilburtha, N. J., after a protracted illness, in the sixtieth year of his age. Mr. Fisk was born April 26, 1831, in Vermont, and was the son of the Rev. Joel Fisk, a Presbyterian minister, who at one time occupied a pulpit and held a pastorate in Montreal, Canada. While in Montreal, Harvey acquired such a knowledge of French that he secured a place as a teacher, giving lessons in French in payment for instruction in other branches of learning. In this way he acquired a good grammar school education, and was placed in a drygoods store when he was seventeen years old, in Trenton, N. J. After serving his apprenticeship there as a clerk, he went to New York and secured a place in the American National Bank. He soon became thoroughly conversant with the banking business and was afterward for some time with the Bank of the Commonwealth, and in March, 1862, started business for himself.

He had been suffering with Bright's disease for many years, and during the last year had been unable to attend to his business, spending most of his time in travel or at his country home. He was a man of modest nature, and, though on terms of intimacy with many great political leaders, had no political aspirations of his own. His life was devoted to his business and his family, while his mind followed with pleasure the success of the Nation of which he ever felt proud. He was for many years identified with the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, and was a member of the building committee at the time of its erection. Mr. Fisk leaves a wife and family, consisting of five sons and three daughters, all of mature age.

The funeral will take place Wednesday at the country home in Wilburtha, and the burial will be at Ewing churchyard, near by.

Since Mr. Fisk's illness, the business has been conducted by his sons, Harvey C., Charles J., Pliny and Edward. Alexander, the youngest son, has been taking care of his father during his illness, and, having but lately left college, has not yet identified himself with the banking house. The three daughters are Miss Bertha, Miss May and Miss Eva. Their father leaves a large estate.

Samuel H. Jacobus.

Samuel H. Jacobus, of this city, died at Colorado Springs, Col., Saturday afternoon. On Tuesday, October 28, Mr. Jacobus, accompanied by his wife, started for the West in search of relief from consumption. The sudden change to a higher altitude was not beneficial, and his death occurred just one week from the day he arrived in Colorado Springs. A wife and four children survive him, one of whom is now in Europe on a pleasure tour. Mr. Jacobus was a son of the Rev. Melancthon Jacobus, who was pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Brooklyn, and afterward senior professor in the Allegheny Seminary at Allegheny, Penn. After leaving Princeton College S. H. Jacobus went into business with the Jones Lock Company, at Pittsburg, of which concern he subsequently became a partner. His wife was Miss Elizabeth Patterson, one of an old and representative Pennsylvania family. Six years ago ill health induced Mr. Jacobus to retire from business and move to Plainfield, where his health became improved. The burial will be at Pittsburgh.

He Blames it on "Sewell's Satellites."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:

As a Republican (with a big "R") I rejoice at the downfall of Sewell-ism in New Jersey, and more especially its discomfiture in Union county; and still more in its practical rout in the city of Plainfield. Oh! what a spectacle! From what seemed to be an insurmountable majority in our city, Sewell-ism has brought us Republicans down to a meagre majority, that is only nominal. How long! Oh, how long! will the Republicans of our fair town continue even to recognize the Satellites of the ex-Senator, who assume to control the Republicans of Plainfield, but who are unable to "deliver the goods"?

FROM PRESS TO PULPIT.

Two One Time Newspaper Men Who Are Now Bishops.

A New York man-about-town says that Bishop Vincent, formerly of this city, and Bishop Fowler, are two of the best known men in that metropolis, where both have been familiar figures for many years. Their lively and practical interest in educational matters is well known. Bishop Fowler made New York his home, and was for eight years editor of the New York Christian Advocate. To that great religious journal he gave a circulation and influence which it had never before enjoyed. During the greater part of his life Bishop John H. Vincent was a resident of Plainfield. At his home here and in New York he did the brain and pen work which built up the great Summer school at Chautauqua, and established far and wide the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle. Since his elevation to the highest office in his church, he has removed to Buffalo. While discharging all his duties as a Bishop he devotes his time, in large degree, to the educational work of the church.

There are many points of similarity between Bishops Fowler and Vincent. They are about of a size and do not look unlike. Both are handsome men, with large, expressive eyes and big heads, on which the hair is thin. One is fair, the other dark. Both are wonderfully gifted with fluency of speech. Bishop Fowler was, in his youth, a newspaper reporter in the West. It is said he was a rather wild young man. One day he came to the conclusion, as he himself has said, that he must either preach the gospel or be eternally lost.

Bishop Vincent visits New York whenever he has an opportunity. He is thoroughly in love with the metropolis, and believes there are many good people there. About two weeks ago, while spending a day at St. Denis Hotel, he took great pleasure in speaking of the education of the people in connection with church work. He believes that true education and Christianity go together. He talked with pride of the work of the Chautauqua Circle, which has enrolled 150,000 persons in the United States.

RELICS OF WAR-TIME.

Critique Gives His Ideas on Republican Tactics and Negro Credulity.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Saturday morning fourteen-year-old Martin Galbraith was accosted by a thirteen-year-old negro lad, Henry Bundy, who inquired if he were a Democrat. Being answered in the affirmative the negro took a pistol from a companion and fired at young Galbraith, and a timely movement of the latter was all that prevented a fatality. As it was, he received a bullet in the hand, and his assailant went his way. Bundy is reported to have declared his intention of murdering all the Democrats he could find, and it is needless to say that he is a Republican and is probably in his right mind.

I remember overhearing a conversation between two boys, one white and the other a negro, during the last Presidential campaign. The colored lad asserted his fealty to Harrison, and, his companion inquiring the reason for such suicidal principles, said: "Why am I a Republican? 'Cause if Cleveland is elected all us colored folks will be sent back to slavery. That's why I'm a Republican!" And Mr. Cleveland had already served nearly all of the most able administration since the days of Lincoln. This only goes to show to what low and false methods the Republican spoilsmen will stoop in their desperations. They have worked the same bogie story on the freed men ever since the war, and the old and utterly unreasonable fairy tale is only now beginning to lose its potency. Still there are now countless negroes who see in Democracy and progress the symptoms of slavery and oppression, and the case of Saturday ought to bring the truth home to the more reputable Republicans and show them the harm that is being wrought by the willful misrepresentation of the campaign leaders of their back-number party.

If young Galbraith's would-be murderer had seen fit to prolong his crusade no one can say to what it might not have extended, or what enormities it might not have brought about. The negro vote is a large one, and the Republicans intend to keep it by whatever means seem necessary, and the negro voters appear to enjoy being hoodwinked and bulldozed. Perhaps, however, when they have to pay ten or twenty, or even fifty per cent., more than now, for the necessities of life, and when their wages come down at the same time to meet the demands of the glorious tariff their ballots have helped to bring upon us, they will realize that the war was fought and finished twenty-five years ago; that the slavery of the present impoverishes the purse and not the body, and then they may learn to cast their ballots with a conviction of right and not a feeling of terror. CRITIQUE.

Fooled by the Man Who Robbed Them.

There is locked in jail at Easton, a thief confessedly guilty of robbing the house in Bethlehem of two women who came to this city, Saturday, in search of some of their missing property. They showed Capt. Grant a letter from the detective who had made the arrest, in which he stated that his prisoner said the stolen goods were pawned in Plainfield. The Captain and the two women made a careful search through pawnbroker Dreier's books, but found nothing they were in search of. The disappointed women left for home satisfied the thief had misled them.

Democratic Primaries.

The Democratic voters of the City of Plainfield are requested to meet at the Democratic Headquarters on Front street on Thursday evening, November 13, at 7:30 o'clock, to place in nomination ward candidates for Common Council, and also to elect delegates to the City Convention, to be held at the same place on Friday evening, Nov. 14, at 8 o'clock, to nominate a Mayor, Assessor, Collector, Treasurer, Member of Board of Education, and three Commissioners of Appeal. The number of delegates to the City Convention will be based upon the Democratic vote cast at the last election.

MULTITUDES OF CONVERTS.

MORE THAN A THOUSAND PEOPLE PUBLICLY GIVE THEMSELVES TO CHRIST.

The Most Memorable Sabbath Plainfield Has Ever Known—Marvelous Results of the Mills Revival—Wondrous Work of the Great Evangelist—The Hearts of Three Great Congregations Melted to Tears of Repentance and Joy.

The magnificent spectacle of a vast multitude giving their hearts to God, acknowledging before the world that they accepted Christ as their Saviour, and publicly consecrating their lives to the service of the Master, gladdened the eyes of the Christian people of Plainfield yesterday.

During the week Evangelist Mills won many souls to Christ, but the many scores of conversions during the week were but a handful compared to the hundreds who professed penitence at these Sunday services.

At the Sunday morning meeting in the First Baptist church none of the gentler sex was admitted. Union services for women were held in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, where the Rev. Dr. Yerkes preached, and in the Methodist Episcopal church, where a sermon was delivered by the Rev. W. R. Richards. Both of these services were well attended, and the meetings were full of the deepest interest.

The service for the masculine portion of the people, however, was where the godly man whose especial divine gifts have wrought such marvelous results, both in our own midst and elsewhere, continued his labors. The house was filled with men. The sight was a most impressive one—all these sturdy, broad shouldered people, some heads of families, some rich in the promise of youth, some nearing the end of earthly existence, and all eager to hear the message from the zealous preacher who had already brought some member of their household, some friend, or other loved one, to a full knowledge of the beauties, joys and glories of the Christian life.

The music that welled from those hundreds of throats was full of power and beauty, as the singing of a great gathering of men always is, and richly attuned the heart-strings of the people to respond in glorious unison to the touch of the Musician whose holy presence could be felt by all who listened to the teachings of the inspired evangelist.

The text for the occasion was the opening sentence of the sixth chapter of Amos: "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion!"

Much of the sermon was a sharp admonition to professing Christians to be faithful to their profession, and to work unceasingly for the Master's cause. To profess Christianity and then to lie at ease and be careless and slothful, and do nothing for the Lord but flatter one's self on one's goodness, was to give cause for great displeasure and wrath from on High.

The preacher urged delinquent church members to rouse up from their lethargy and set about their Father's business. They must not be like the steamboat whose whistle was so big, and whose boiler so small, that every time the engineer blew the whistle the steam all went out of the boiler and the boat had to stop till steam could be made again. They must be rather like the palm tree, that was good for three hundred and sixty-five good things, that spread itself from a tiny seed to a sequestered grove and brought forth an oasis, a fertile, life-saving spot, amid the arid wastes of Afric's desert sands.

There were too many who kept their religion for Sunday, who engaged in questionable practices throughout the week, and then arose to a late breakfast the morning of the Sabbath and let the foul sewer of the Sunday newspaper run through one's mind, and went to church and tried to have the filth washed away by the preacher's words, and listened to music in an unknown tongue by a heathen choir, and heard a sermon on metaphysics and mythology and numerous other ologies, with a spice of Mohammedan religion thrown in. There were too many who said "Oh, bother religion! I want none of it during the week. Business is business, and religion is religion. Religion, you stay here. Business, you stay there. Don't you dare to mix or mingle! We work during the week and let religion alone. Sunday we are tired, but we pay the minister to be good for us, and we get our soothing balm from him once a week in the pulpit, and that's enough."

There were too many who when religion entered their manufactory, ground it to death among the wheels of their machinery, or strangled it when it appeared at their desk, or deliberately kicked it down stairs when it came into their office.

No man was so happy and prosperous as he who mingled business and religion. When Mr. Mills was about to begin revival services in another town he sought out a shoe manufacturer who was to assist him, as a member of the evangelistic committee, in arranging the details of the programme. When he called at the man's office he found him in the midst of a great press of business, but a cordial greeting was given, and the manufacturer said, "I'll go out with you now." Mr. Mills said "No: you have your business to attend to now. When you are at leisure call at my hotel." "Why, sir,"—the manufacturer replied—"making shoes isn't my business. My business is to do the will of my Father." And he straightway gave up two hours of the busiest part of the day to assisting to prepare for the coming of Mr. Mills. Later on, the same manufacturer said to Mr. Mills, "I want you to come to my factory today and speak to my working people about religion." In consequence of this expressed desire a meeting of the employes was held in the large packing room. The men and women, some with gibes and profanity on their lips, assembled in the room and seated themselves about on the stacks of boxes, and filled the room from wall to wall and from floor to ceiling. Their employer addressed them in a few simple words, saying, "Men and women, I'm anxious about your souls. I'd rather have you good men and good women than to make money out of you. I've called you all in here together to get you interested in your own salvation. I'd rather pay you your wages today for learning to love Christ than for making shoes for me to sell." A glorious time resulted. Mr. Mills and his teachings were eagerly received, and a great many gave themselves to God. A year or two later Mr. Mills again met the manufacturer, and in response to the question "How is the shoe business?" learned that the utmost prosperity had followed him. "At the time of that meeting"—said the man—"the trade was in a bad state. A great strike was imminent, and had it reached our factory, as was threatened, we should have been swept away before it and lost everything. The religion that our men and women got that day was lasting. They are good Christians. They are prospering, and so am I. I made so much money last year that I have bought out my partner's interest and own the whole concern, and we are all, employing and employed, happy and contented together, like one great family. I tell you, it's a paying as well as a sublime thing to have religion and business hand in hand."

The religion of Christ's Sermon on the Mount, that was the religion to be practiced. It was as suited to the nineteenth century as it was to the days when Jesus was upon the earth. Let one practice it, and he would experience transcendant bliss; let all practice it, and earth would become a heaven indeed, a paradise of God.

Concluding his morning sermon, Mr. Mills pleaded with the men to re-consecrate themselves and all their possessions to God, to practice Christianity every day in the week, to let their good works abound, to infuse their religious fervor into everything, and life-long happiness and plenitude, as well as eternal joy, would follow.

Sunday afternoon, in accordance with the instructions given by Mr. Mills at Saturday evening's conference, the superintendents and teachers of the Sunday-schools gave up the lesson of the day and devoted themselves to talking to their classes as though they were talking to the children of their own family at home, concerning the salvation of their souls. Many expressed a desire to begin the Christian life, and all were in a receptive mood for what Mr. Mills had to say at his Sunday afternoon meeting for young people.

Sixteen hundred souls, or more, were present in that great gathering. The First Baptist church was crowded to its utmost capacity. Every nook was filled. Crowds were obliged to stand, in the aisles and along the walls. It was one of the grandest sights Plainfield has ever witnessed.

When Mr. Mills began to preach his eyes filled with tears of gladness at sight of the sea of eager faces. The opening of the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes—"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth"—was his theme, and he preached a beautiful sermon. Urging the people to give their hearts to God while they were still young, he related pathetic incidents of people who had neglected God in their youth and whose closing days were blighted by the sad realization that all their years had been wasted. Every year was wasted that was not devoted to Christian service. The way to have a good time was to be a Christian; the way to be supremely useful in the world was to be a Christian. And the time was now. It was not right, it was not safe, to delay. A young girl had been deeply affected by a meeting very similar to this. She was almost persuaded to be a Christian. But she did not heed the pleading of the Spirit, and went to her home without acknowledging Christ as her Saviour. Some months later she lay on her dying bed. Her old pastor called to see her. "Don't ask me to be a Christian"—she said.—"I can't be; I don't want to be. Whatever desire I may have had has vanished, and it will never come back." The pastor pleaded, but all in vain. She referred to the meeting of months ago and said: "At that time I was almost persuaded to be a Christian, but I steeled my heart against the urging that it might be my last chance of entering the Kingdom of the Lord, and I wrote something in my hymn-book, and since I wrote that I have had no longing, nothing but darkness. The minister pleaded with her to ask to be forgiven what she had written, but she was not to be moved, and after she had forced him to promise not to open her hymn-book to see what she had written, till after she were dead, he was obliged to leave her. She died. The pastor picked up her hymn-book, and in great fear and trembling opened its pages. The writing that met his gaze was this grim sentence: "I'll run the risk!" She had run the risk. She had refused God when God was pleading with her. She had run the risk, and had died without God and without hope.

The happiness and beauty and usefulness of the life of a young Christian was aptly illustrated in the evangelist's story of a boys' band in a church where he had been pastor.

One evening at the close of a meeting he had urged those who desired to lead a Christian life to remain a moment with him, but everybody went out and left him alone, heavy hearted. Presently a boy's head appeared at the door, and then a boy's body, and head and body together came up the aisle, and then another boy's head and body appeared, and then another, till five boys had returned. They were all eager to be Christians. "Well, boys,"—asked Mr. Mills—"what is it to be a Christian?" "You tell us"—they said. But the child knows as well as the grown man what being a Christian means, and so he made the boys tell him. "Well, boys,"—he continued—"now that you have given your hearts to God, what will you do for the cause of Christ?" "We'll go to church,"—they answered—"and to Sunday school." That's good,"—he replied—"but what else?" "You tell us"—they said. "No, you tell me,"—he answered, and so they promised to do something the next day for God, and to report to him next evening. In the afternoon they appeared. "We had a prayer meeting"—they said. "That's good"—he replied.—"Who was there?" "Oh, just us five"—was the answer. "Don't bring me any more such reports as that"—he charged them. Next day they came again. "We had another prayer meeting,"—they said—"and two other boys were there." "Now you're on the right track"—was his comment. "Keep it up." And so those boys continued to work till they had a noble little band of twenty-five. Mr. Mills used to peep in, sometimes, at their meetings, to see what he could learn of their methods of work. This is how they used to conduct their meetings. The leader would say, "Billy, you pray," and Billy would pray; then, "Sammy, you pray," and Sammy would pray; then, "Jimmy, you pray," and Jimmy would pray; then, "Johnny, you pray"; and if Johnny wouldn't pray they'd get up and put Johnny out. The boys worked zealously, and did much good; their leader brought his father, an infidel, his mother, not a Christian, and his two sisters, all to God, and made good Christians of them, besides a large number of companions.

'T were a long, though a pleasant task, to recount all the reasons why the evangelist urged the young people to give their hearts to Christ. His pleadings were divinely eloquent, and touched the hearts of all. One could almost feel the presence of the Holy Spirit. The most stony heart was melted; all eyes were moist; every soul was prayerful.

When, at the conclusion of his sermon, and after songs of infinitely tender invitation, Mr. Mills asked those who desired to follow the Master to arise, hundreds sprang to their feet, and raised their hands in an attitude of supplication and consecration. It was a subject for a master artist—that vast expression of mute soul-stirring eloquence in the faces of that throng of penitents. Scarcely a Sunday school class but was represented in that multitude of converts, and in many cases whole classes rose in a body. Anthems of hallelujah arose from the throats of the choir and people, and enraptured souls pictured to themselves the celestial joy in Heaven over repentant sinners.

At the after-meeting in the basement of the church fully eight hundred were present, and the entire throng arose in one body and openly confessed Christ. It was a moment of supremest happiness. Those who thus publicly acknowledged their desire henceforth to lead a Christian life were the best material for Christian soldiers the Master could desire—bright-faced boys all earnestness and full of youthful determination, and womanly young girls all tenderness and loveliness. On the faces of all shone a radiance never surpassed.

Again was the church filled to overflowing, at the evening meeting for all classes, despite the fact that the Rev. C. B. Mitchell preached to one large congregation at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and the Rev. C. L. Goodrich to another at the Methodist Episcopal church.

The text of Mr. Mills was from the third verse of the twentieth chapter of Revelations—"Behold, I stand at the door and knock!"—and the picture he presented of Christ imploring the sinner to open unto him the door of his heart was full of the sublimest pathos. The door of the heart could be opened only from the inside. The hand of no one but the sinner himself could pull back the bolt. Christ was waiting to become a guest in every bosom. Would the sinner receive or reject him? Christ would not always plead. Yet a little while, and the time for all pleading would be past. The awful consequences of delay in accepting Christ were vividly pictured in the heart rending fate of one of his own dear friends—a physician in Colorado. This man had been greatly touched by the Spirit of God, but instead of surrendering to the implorings of Jesus he fought desperately against Him. He would not surrender himself to Christ. To witness that struggle between God and man was terrible. The physician seemed like a madman. Mr. Mills besought him to give himself to the Lord at once. He promised to do so at the meeting that night, and then grew calmer. At the meeting he did not appear; he had been called away by a patient. He grew indifferent in the matter, and then put off the matter by saying, "I'll become a Christian some time this Winter." The Winter passed, and he was not only still unconverted but had begun to sustain his physical strength, which had been greatly strained by overwork, by the use of alcoholic stimulants. Other months passed. He became a confirmed tippler, then a drunkard; his former worldly prosperity vanished; he was a disgrace to manhood. Finally, in the extremity of his shame, he took poison and was buried in a drunkard's and a suicide's grave.

"That man's prospects"—said Mr. Mills—"were as hopeful as the prospects of anyone here to-night. The Spirit pleaded with him; the Master knocked; but he would not listen, he would not let Him in.

"I do not tell you this story because the telling is easy. The very recollection of it wrings my heart in poignant anguish. But I want you to realize what I told him—what I besought him, in the utmost earnestness, to realize—that God would receive the sinner to His bosom now, but that I had no authority to say that He would receive him in the future. The Spirit is pleading with you. Give yourself to God to-night."

A great many stood up, at the close of the sermon, and acknowledged thus publicly their desire and intention of becoming Christians. An after-meeting followed, and the body of the church was filled. Hundreds arose and said "I am determined to lead a Christian life," and hymns and prayers that made every heart almost too full of emotion for utterance followed.

A "Quaker benediction," in which everybody shook hands with one another in token of the penitents' welcome to the fold of Christ, brought to a close one of the most memorable days Plainfield has ever known.

TO-MORROW A SECOND SABBATH.

Business Places to Close, and the Day to be Given to God.

Plainfielders will to a great extent observe to-morrow as a second Sabbath. Special services will be held as follows:

8 to 9 A. M.—Neighborhood prayer meetings at private residences, to be arranged as households may desire.

9 A. M.—Special prayer meetings in all the churches.

10 A. M., 3:30 P. M., and 7:45 P. M., preaching by Mr. Mills in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

2:45 P. M.—Union prayer meeting in the Crescent Avenue church.

The proprietors of a large number of business places have pledged themselves to close either all day or part of the day, and several will close at 6:30 every night this week. Among the closers are the following:

Miss C. E. Clarke, Thompson Park, Vanderbeck & Sattels, B. T. Barnes, J. Hervey Doane, Caleb Dickinson, Garret Q. Packer, Powlison & Jones, George Fairchild, Edward Love, U. B. Crane, E. M. Laing, A. C. Horton and W. L. Gavett & Co., 10 to 12; W. H. Sebring, R. W. Rice, A. M. Griffen, J. P. Laire, J. J. Heideloff, J. C. Pierson, Jr., W. F. Adams, H. P. Reynolds, R. J. Shaw, R. M. Steile, J. G. Miller, The Moy Pharmacy Co., L. W. Randolph and Geo E. Williams, 3 to 5; Geo. W. Rockfellow, 10 to 1 and 3 to 5; Seely Edsall, 10 to 1 and 3 to 5; Alburtus Swaim, 10 to 1 and 3 to 5.

H. A. Pope will close at 6 p. m., and at 6:30 p. m. each evening the remainder of the week, as will also A. M. Griffen, J. P. Laire, J. J. Heideloff and J. C. Pierson, Jr.

Other Services This Week.

Mr. Mills will preach every night this week at the Crescent Avenue Church, at 7:45 o'clock. There will be singing by Mr. Greenwood and the large choir.

Prayer meetings will be held every morning, except Tuesday, at 59 North avenue, from 7:30 to 8:20 A. M. These are especially for business men.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

The Pierson Hardware Co.

Are at the apex of the heap,
In the line of Stoves and Ranges—
All because they are good and cheap.

Now if you have got a beau,
And contemplate a plan
Of furnishing your kitchen—
PIERSON is the man.

Their Tinware and their Hardware,
Housefurnishing Goods and Lamps,
Makes one feel as if they would like to have
A pocket full of stamps.

So call and see, and you'll agree
That what we now relate
Is not at all a fable,
But wise to contemplate.

And when into your kitchen
You by chance do look around
And see the many useful things
That at PIERSON'S you have found,

You will then unto your friends relate
That story, old and true—
That to step into their store
Is to purchase more and more,
Until you find you got the earth and
cannot get no more.

HOUSEWIVES' DUTIES.

Good housewives all the daily war
Against King Dirt and General Muss,
Should always be in dust—in dust—
Should always be indust-rious.

And we, though toiling busily
Through sunlit or through gloomy hours,
Should not neglect our men—our men—
Should not neglect our men-tal powers.

We should not use the goods of earth
As mere utilitarians do;
But we should con—should con—should con—
Should con-template earth's beauties, too.

If we have toiled beyond our strength,
And stolen hours from sleep away,
We should make rest—make rest—make rest—
Make rest-itution while we may.

Now housewife, pray take this advice,
Its wisdom you'll perceive at length,
Don't be a fool—a fool—a fool—
A fool-ish waster of your strength.

'Tis hard to live without the pale
Of true success, and toil alway;
You should get in—get in—get in—
Get in-terest on what you pay.

Now, blessings be on housewives all
Whose steps in duty's path are bent,
And may they march beneath the ban—
The ban—the ban-ner of content.

ON A FAST FREIGHT.

The Wild Trip of a Heavy Train Down a Grade.

EACH man settled back into his seat, and the boys began their yarn-spinning. Railroading was the subject, and each had something to say of terrible wrecks or hair-breadth escapes.

"I railroaded some myself," said a stranger sitting over by the door, and who so far had taken no apparent interest in the stories told by the boys. "I quit several years ago, after some years of hard work, for I was firing, and you all know that's no child's play. I ain't ashamed to say that our trip took all the ambition out of me. I was on the Santa Fe road, running between Las Vegas and Wallace, and part of our run was over the Glorietta mountain, the pass by which the road crosses the Rocky mountains. From the top of the pass to Lamy junction was forty-five miles, and the grade 185 feet to the mile. The road is carried through canyons and along the mountain side, and in no place is there a quarter of a mile of straight track until you get down to Canyon siding. From there to the junction is six miles of pretty straight track, but the same heavy grade. There was no air-brake on freight cars in them days, and the boys used to have to set 'em pretty tight to keep from going down too fast. Any of you been over that part of the road?" and the speaker looked inquiringly at his audience.

"I have," said a tall, powerful-looking brakeman, "and I would not care to twist on that mountain. It beats any thing I ever worked on, and I've been on some tough mountain roads."

"It was in the winter," said the stranger, resuming his story. "I was firing for George Young. Our engine was a heavy twelve-wheeler, and to her great weight alone I attribute our escape. Freight traffic was very heavy on the road at this time and nearly every train was in two sections. We would run two sections to the top of the hill, and then one engine would take both sections down the mountain. On the day of which I speak we left Las Vegas before daylight, pulling the first section of a heavy train, and made it all right to the head of the pass. We were the first train over the road that day and about two inches of snow had fallen, so the track was pretty slippery. When the other train had arrived we made the two sections in one and were ready for our trip down the mountain. The other engine helped us over the pitch of the hill and then ran back to Los Vegas. We had hardly got over the hill when the train began running pretty fast and George whistled for brakes while I set the tank brake as hard as I could. We could see the three brakemen doing their best to check the train, but their efforts were of no avail, for when three miles from the top of the hill we were running forty miles an hour and could do nothing to check our headlong speed. Just below the Wylie bridge is a curve and then we saw that the caboose was gone. Seeing they could not check the train, the brakemen had crawled back to the caboose and pulled the pin, thus severing their connection with the train, knowing that they could soon stop the caboose with the powerful brake with which it was supplied. They had left us to our fate, expecting to find us somewhere at the bottom of the canyon, as it did not seem possible that we could keep the track at the high speed we had now attained. Relieved of the caboose the speed of the train increased and the swing of the engine made it hard for us to keep from being thrown out of the cab. Our only chance lay in staying with the engine, as jumping was out of the question. On the one hand was the canyon, five hundred feet deep, and on the other the mountain rose like the wall of a house, and we would roll under the train and be cut to pieces. All this time George had kept the whistle going and this, together with the roar of the train, could be heard fifty miles off. It was a cold morning but neither of us needed an overcoat for the perspiration stood on our faces in large drops. 'We may pull through yet,' I shouted to George. He made no reply but the look of despair on his face showed me he did not believe it.

"We were now running at the rate of sixty miles an hour and it seemed to me that the engine would leave the track every moment. At Canyon siding was a gravel bank where the gravel train used to load up between trains, and in loading, the flat cars stood on the main track just below the switch. What my feelings were as we neared the end of the canyon and shot around the last curve into the straight track I can not describe, for there on the main line stood the gravel train of seven cars and the engine nowhere in sight. We afterwards learned she had gone back to the junction for water while the cars were being loaded. This they had plenty of time to do, according to the time-card, but we were nearly an hour ahead of time. The flats were left in charge of a young man named Webber, a new arrival from the East. As soon as he saw us coming he jumped on the cars and let off the brakes, and the cars began to move at a rate that soon unloaded what gravel they had on board. On dashed the flying freight train, past the gravel bank and the group of frightened laborers, while half a mile ahead the flats were skipping along with the speed of an express train. Webber was holding on to a brake wheel, once in awhile looking back at the train that seemed to pursue him like fate.

"The six miles to Lamy junction were covered in less than as many minutes, and we rushed like a cyclone through the yard and past the side track where the work train engine had sought safety not five seconds too soon. The flats were now about one hundred yards ahead. About two miles below the junction was a rise in the grade of about eighty feet to the mile. The length of the grade was about three miles, and we had strong hopes, if nothing happened, of stopping her by the time we got to the top. It was evident the flats could not go much further at the terrific speed they had attained, for they were jumping three feet clear of the track, and the only wonder was that the couplings held. Suddenly like a flash the head car jumped the track and the rest followed like a flock of sheep, and with an awful crash piled up into kindling, burying poor Webber under the pile. It came so suddenly that before I could realize what had happened the wreck was left behind and we were dashing up the other grade. For the first mile I could see no difference in our speed, and then the grade began to tell. Slower and slower moved the train, and half a mile from the end of the up grade we regained control of it and had to steam to the top of the hill. As we came to a stop I looked at the clock in the cab. It indicated 7:45. We had left the head of the pass at 7:05 and had run forty-nine miles in forty minutes. George now gave his engine an examination, but with the exception of the right wrist-pin she was as cool as could be expected. Soon afterward the yard engine came out and helped us back into the yard, where the train was overhauled and the cause of the runaway found. There were only six good brakes in the entire train of fifty-two cars.

"As soon as we got into the yard a party was made up to look for poor Webber. We were soon at the scene of the wreck, where half a dozen men were already at work. It was the worst wreck I ever saw; nothing but a pile of kindling and the brave fellow was almost at the bottom. Every one worked with a will, but it was only after two hours' hard work that the broken and crushed form of poor Webber was laid on a mattress in the little tent at the side of the road. He was still alive, but died in a very short time. Every bone in his body was broken. His mother had arrived in Las Vegas only a few days before and was sent for. A special train brought her down in care of the superintendent, and there were few dry eyes in that crowd as kind hands assisted the broken-hearted mother from the coach and over to the little tent where lay her only boy. Mrs. Webber was cared for by the company, who gave her a life annuity. The boys took up a subscription and placed a handsome granite shaft over poor Webber, who was buried close to the wreck. After the inquest and funeral we went back to Las Vegas and I took my time. A few mornings after, this is what I saw in the looking-glass."

The stranger lifted his hat. The hair on the front of his head was white as snow, while the rest was jet black.

"What became of the caboose? They slacked it down to Canyon siding and left it there and then skipped. They were never seen in that part of the country again."—Detroit Free Press.

—Stranger—"I'm very glad to have met you, and would be pleased to have you call on me at your leisure." Editor—"Leisure? What's that?"—N. Y. Journal.

NOT GOOD FRIENDS.

The Relations Existing Between Bismarck and William I.

New Stories of the Jealous Differences Between Them—The Old Kaiser Didn't Like His Chancellor's Preponderance in the Affairs of State.

"Prince Bismarck and the Hohenzollern," is the title under which the Breslauer Zeitung has given to the world a new and astonishing version of some events in recent German history. At first the articles under this head were regarded as a trifle too sensational to be worthy of credence. Corroborative proof of the truth of them has, however, come from various sources in the last two or three weeks, and all the German dailies have been forced to discuss the relations of the ex-Chancellor and William I. in the new light. "At no time," says the Breslauer Zeitung, "did the legendary relations of unruffled serenity exist between Emperor and Chancellor. With every new success the Chancellor's desire to rule increased beyond measure. Success and ambition raised his position to such an unusual height that it began to overshadow the throne. King William saw this in 1867, and looked about for a remedy. At that time he said to the Crown Prince: 'This man has grown too great for us. We must get a substitute, and I ask your help in my efforts to find one.' The Crown Prince turned at once to Herr Von Gruner, Assistant Secretary of the Interior in the old Liberal Ministry. For an unknown reason the plan to elevate Von Gruner to Bismarck's position fell through. We know, however, that ever since this affair Prince Bismarck has cherished the deepest resentment against Von Gruner, and when the honored old man on his seventieth birthday was elevated to the rank of Real Privy Councillor, Prince Bismarck did the unprecedented act of preventing the publication of the event in the Reichsanzeiger, thus confining the Excellency of Herr von Gruner to the limits of the court. We also know that after this episode the Chancellor felt uncertain in his office and regarded with jealousy every gifted and favored Minister who might in any way be considered a rival. And with some justification, for the feeling that possessed the King in 1867 grew stronger with the next fifteen years. The position of the Chancellor became ever more despotic, his irritability ever greater, his presence in Berlin ever more infrequent, his requests for release from his official duties ever more persistent. Why did not the King grant these requests? Simply on account of the extreme difficulty of finding a man equal to assuming Bismarck's heritage.

"The age of the King was also of moment. In 1867 King William might have felt able to carry on the Government with the aid of a new Minister. Ten years later, after his eightieth birthday and with a constitution shaken by the Nobeling attempt at assassination, such an effort was out of the question. Thereto were to be added the marvelous successes of the Chancellor and his ingenuity in finding a way out of the most desperate straits. So the Emperor eventually resigned himself to his painful position as the less of two evils. From such considerations came the famous 'never,' if it was ever spoken, when Bismarck handed in next to his last request from him for relief from duty. The last request was refused so coolly by the Emperor that Bismarck never made a move toward making another one."

Among the many journals that have published circumstantial evidence of the correctness of this new view of an old subject is the Frankfurter Zeitung, which says:

"As the relations between Bismarck and Emperor William I. have become the subject of general discussion, it may be interesting to know how fully conscious the Chancellor was of the sensitiveness of his imperial lord as to the common report of the Minister's preponderance in the Government. Bismarck frequently related to his most intimate friends this story: During the French war Bismarck and the King sat one afternoon in the same compartment of a train that halted at a way station for water. German peasants were discussing the war on the station platform, and one of them shouted: 'Yes, yes, the Bismarckians are coming.' The King asked at once: 'What did that man say?' Bismarck answered that he had not understood. There was a long silence. Then the King said: 'The people should understand that the troops are mine, not yours.' 'Since then,' added the Chancellor, 'my wife has often reminded me of this little conversation, and, whenever I have been in danger of hurting the pride of my old Lord, has warned me: Remember the Bismarckians.'"

The memories of Privy Court Councillor Schneider, recently published, contain numerous incidents illustrative of the ill-feeling with which William I. regarded the tendency of his people to ascribe all good and great German things to his Chancellor.

The Queen's Family Circle.

At this time her Majesty's family circle numbers fifty living descendants, including sons and daughters, grandsons and granddaughters, great-grandsons and great-granddaughters. Besides whom she has four sons-in-law, four daughters-in-law, five grandsons-in-law and one granddaughter-in-law. The Queen has lost one son and one daughter, five grandsons, one granddaughter, one great-grandson and one son-in-law. If these were living her family circle would number seventy-four.

He Had Tried Very Hard.

They tell this little story of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Walking in a friend's garden one day she asked the gardener: "Have you ever read 'Uncle Tom's Cabin?'" The perplexed fellow slowly unbent himself. He was unwilling to wound the sensibilities of Mrs. Stowe, and he wished to say the most for himself. And so he felt himself getting very red as he stammered: "Well, not exactly, ma'am. Not as you might say 'read it,' but I've tried to, ma'am."

THE DRESS IS FINISHED, SO AM I."

A gorgeous costume flashed beneath the brilliant lights of a ball-room; "a queen of society is radiant to-night."

The nervous hands of a weak woman have toiled day and night, the weary frame and aching head have known no rest—for "the dress must be finished in time."

To that queen of society and her dressmaker we would say a word. One, through hot-house culture, luxury, and excitement, and the other, through the toil of necessity, may some day find their ailments a common cause. The Vegetable Compound will enable both to meet the demands of society. Send stamp for "Guide to Health," a beautiful illustrated book.

NO FEAR OF DEATH

Birchall as Thoughtless and Careless as Ever.

RESTLESS DURING THE NIGHT.

He Laughs at Those Who Think He Would Commit Suicide.

Disturbed Over the Idea of an Autopsy. Anxious that His Body be Secretly Entombed — Closely Watched by the Guards—Mrs. Birchall to Reside in Woodstock After the Execution.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 11.—J. Reginald Birchall, the murderer of Frederick C. Benwell, has only three more days to live. On Friday he will be hanged by the neck until dead, which will end the last scene of one of the greatest murders of interest to two continents.

As the day of his doom draws nearer Birchall is apparently becoming resigned to his fate. He declares that he has no fear of death and says that he would rather be killed on the scaffold than in a railroad accident. His manner varies at times and occasionally he is silent and despondent. He doesn't sleep soundly and is very uneasy during the night in endeavoring to sleep. During the daytime he is as thoughtless and careless as ever.

He laughs at those who think that he would attempt to cheat the gallows and says: "I am not of the stuff that suicides are made of."

Vainglorious to the last, he regrets the possibility that the doctors will cut him open in their post mortem examination, and is anxious that his body be secretly entombed in a bricked vault lest it be stolen by some graceless members of the medical profession, whom he describes as rubbing their hands in ecstacy at the prospect of laying hold of him after he is dead. The guards keep a close watch of the prisoner, fearing that he may commit suicide.

He Grieves for His Wife.

Birchall has but little to say concerning his own salvation, but when he does it is with the object of learning the condition of his wife. During one of his reflective moods he was heard to say: "Poor dear, poor dear!" When asked to whom he was alluding he replied: "Why, who is the law inflicting the greatest and most lasting torture upon? My poor little wife. Of course I grieve for her, and thousands of others feel as I do."

It is said that Mrs. Birchall intends to take her residence here in Woodstock in spite of the wishes of her father to return to her home in England.

THE FINAL DIVIDEND.

Creditors of Jay Cooke & Co. to be Settled With at Last.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—A final dividend on the estate of Jay Cooke & Co., who failed in 1873, is announced by the trustees. The liabilities when the firm failed were nearly $11,000,000. By compromises, litigation and other processes this sum was reduced to $6,451,000. There were 3,200 creditors when the firm failed, the banks and the Government being the largest.

The final dividend will be 1 3-4 per cent. in cash on $5,451,000 and 8 1-2 shares of Northern Pacific preferred stock, 3 1-2 shares of Oregon Steamship & Navigation Company stock and three-quarters of a share of preferred stock of the St. Paul & Duluth Railroad to each $1,000 of claim to creditors holding that amount and upward. With the payment of the final dividend the affairs of the estate of Jay Cooke & Co. will be wound up, and the total amount of cash paid on it will have been 15 1-2 per cent. on $6,451,000.

There has been no dividend paid since 1881, when the fourth one was distributed in cash to the amount of 1 1-4 per cent. cash and assets scrip to the amount of 5 per cent.

Lively Baseball Meeting To-Day.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 11.—When Director Henry B. Rea takes the floor at the Players' League meeting this afternoon, he will ask the Players' National League either to purchase the franchise of the Pittsburg Players' League Club or allow it to withdraw from that organization. This will mean a complete capitulation of the Pittsburg Players' League Club to the National League. The Players' League meeting will likely be a stormy one, as New York's action has aroused intense indignation among those prone to stand by their colors.

Doctors Puzzled.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Nov. 11.—The doctors appointed to examine into the mental condition of George Y. Thomas, who was alleged to have assaulted his brother at his mother's funeral two weeks ago, find that he is not insane. They confess that they have been much puzzled over the case, but believe that Thomas' hatred of his brother has some reasonable grounds, and that he has allowed himself to dwell upon it until it has become almost a monomania.

Fishermen Going to New Foundland.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Nov. 11.—Several vessels are fitting for New Foundland frozen fishing and the fleet promises to be the largest in the history of the fishery. Although there is a duty of ¼ of a cent per pound on all fresh fish not used for bait, it is believed the department will construe the law so as to exempt all fish brought in American vessels, while those in foreign bottoms will be subject to duty

What Constitutes a Scold.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 11.—Judge Dixon, of the Supreme Court, reversed the verdict of the Camden jury finding Albertina Baker to be a common scold and public nuisance. The judge held that the county judge erred in not instructing the jury that the woman's general reputation as a scold and not particular scolding scenes should govern their

THE IRISH DELEGATES.

The Reception in New York Attended by Over 5,000 Persons.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—When the Irish Parliamentary delegates entered the Metropolitan Opera House last evening, they were welcomed by the cheers of over 5,000 persons.

When John Dillon stepped to the front of the stage, galleries, orchestra and boxes vied together in thunders of applause. Not only once was this scene enacted, but every member of the party who spoke was similarly received.

Mr. J. J. O'Donohue, as the representative of the United Irish Societies, presented Governor Hill, whom he styled the American champion of Home Rule, as the chairman of the evening. Governor Hill, on rising, was received with great applause. The Governor, in a few well-chosen words, accepted the honor and cordially welcomed the delegates to the city and State. The list of vice-presidents was then read and a set of stirring resolutions adopted.

Speeches were made by all the envoys. The response to the appeal for financial aid surpassed the highest expectations of the delegates. For nearly an hour there was a scene of spontaneous generosity such as has rarely been seen in New York or in any other city. Subscriptions which, in the aggregate, mounted up to $33,000, besides $4,000 realized from sales of seats, were announced before the list was closed. And when it was announced that this munificence signified the overthrow of the last hope of the Tory Government in its efforts to subdue Ireland, there was a scene of rejoicing difficult to describe.

BRAKEMEN COMPLAIN.

They Lay Their Grievances Before the Lehigh Valley Superintendent.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 11.—The Grievance Committee of the Brotherhood of Railroad Brakemen of the lodges whose members are employed on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, called on General Eastern Superintendent Goodwin to lay before him a number of grievances they wish to have remedied. The grievances are the regulating of the brakemen's runs, an advance in wages, regulating promotions, and the payment of wages during suspension where an inquiry develops that the man suspended was blameless.

Superintendent Goodwin, when informed by the committee of their being members of the Brotherhood, refused to receive them as members thereof, and told them that had they come as employes of the road he would listen to their grievances. He told them, however, that he would bring the matter of their having called on him before the Board of Directors, and the action of that body would be communicated to the committee.

KNIGHTS IN SESSION.

The K. of L. Delegates Will Deliberate With Closed Doors.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 11.—The General Assembly of the Knights of Labor met here this morning. Prominent Knights from all over the country and Canada are present, among them being Mr. Powderly, A. W. Wright, of Canada, and Morris Wheat, of Ohio.

Mr. Powderly addressed a large and enthusiastic assemblage at the Colesium last night on "The Labor Situation of the Day."

The assembly will be in session for about two weeks, and will, among other things, elect officers for the next two years. All sessions will be held with closed doors.

Four Breaks by Burglars.

DEDHAM, Mass., Nov. 11.—Four breaks were made here by burglars during the night. At the postoffice, which is connected with the store of Charles H. Ellis, the safe was blown open and stamps to the value of $100 were stolen, and from the money drawer in the store $6 was taken. The residence of Luther G. Baker was entered and the safe opened by means of the key, taken from his pocket, and about $10 in money taken. T. Place's residence was entered and $6 stolen. Joseph L. Fisher's house was visited but no plunder was obtained.

The New York Assembly.

ALBANY, Nov. 11.—It is understood that the programme for the organization of the Assembly is almost arranged. William F. Sheehan is the only man who will be in the Speakership race. The clerkship promises to be a bone of contention. A swarm of candidates have appeared, but the contest has narrowed down to Walter H. Bunn of Otsego and Milton H. Northrup of Syracuse.

Suing a Railroad for Injuries.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov 11.—The Union Railroad Company has been served with a writ in a suit to recover $20,000 for injuries sustained by R. H. Vaile while a passenger on the Ocean street "bloomer" car which collided with a flat car laden with flagstones in September last. Wm. H. Sanford, of Milwaukee, who was also injured, is suing for $25,000.

British Restrictions Against American Cattle.

WHAT SECRETARY RUSK SAYS.

England Will Have to Abandon the Charge of Unhealthfulness.

Several Rumors About Cabinet Changes and Resignations of Ministers—Secretary Windom Watching Wall Street—General McKibben Buried To-Day—Mrs. Harrison to Visit Indianapolis.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The attention of Secretary Rusk was called to the report cabled to this country, in which Mr. Chaplin, the British Minister of Agriculture, is represented as opposing the removal of the restrictions of the British Government against live cattle from the United States. Said the Secretary:

"It is not likely that the British Ministry will undertake to discriminate against us, and just as soon as soon as a sufficient time has, in my opinion, elapsed since the last case of pleuro-pneumonia occurred in this country, I shall make an official declaration of its complete eradication, and shall strive to satisfy the British Government that the disease does not exist here. If this does not secure the withdrawal of these restrictions England will at least have to abandon the charge of unhealthfulness of our cattle as the cause. I unhesitatingly challenge Mr. Chaplin to point out a single case of pleuro-pneumonia now existing among American cattle.'

WASHINGTON RUMORS.

Gossip About Official Changes and the Organization of the Next House.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Rumors are flying around at a lively rate. The latest report is that Secretary Tracy will leave the Cabinet for the Supreme Court and that Representative Henry Clay Evans, of Tennessee, who failed of re-election, is to be made Secretary of the Navy.

The most sensational rumor states, on the authority of Gen. Batcheller, Minister to Portugal, that Charles Emory Smith, Minister to Russia, had resigned, and the mission was to be offered to Major McKinley.

Hon. Robert T. Lincoln emphatically denies the report that he was about to resign his post as Minister to England. He says he is simply in this country on leave and would return to his post at the end of two months and resume his duties.

The latest candidate for Speaker of the Fifty-second Congress is Mr. Outhwaite of Ohio, He said that, while he had not announced himself as a candidate, if the members of the next House should determine that he was the proper person for the honor, he saw no reason why he should not accept it.

Congressman Frank Lawler, the defeated Democratic candidate for Sheriff of Cook county, Illinois, will be a candidate for Sergeant-at-Arms of the House. Congressman John Quinn of New York, is being pushed for the House Clerkship.

Called in for the Winter.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—A dispatch from Ottawa says that all the fishery protection cruisers have been called in for the winter. Mr. Tupper, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, rejoices that there has been comparatively little poaching or violation of the fishery regulations by American fishing schooners. Captains of American vessels, he says, fully recognize the danger they incur by entering within the three-mile limit without a license.

Watching Wall Street.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The financial flurry in Wall street has been watched with interest at the Treasury Department, but no call was made on the Government to aid in restoring former values, and old financiers at the Treasury do not see that the Government can do anything in the present case. Secretary Windom remained at his residence all day at work on his annual report.

Gen. McKibben's Funeral.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The funeral of the late Gen. David B. McKibben took place this afternoon at 1 o'clock, from St. John's P. E. Church, Rev. Dr. Paine officiating. It was conducted by the Loyal Legion, of which Gen. McKibben was an active member. The interment will be at Arlington.

Mrs. Harrison Going Home.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Mrs. Harrison is planning to leave the city the latter part of this week for a visit to her old home at Indianapolis. She will not be accompanied by the President, as he is busily engaged in the preparation of his annual message.

Killed as His Father Was.

SODUS, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Ford Cunningham, aged 21, of Oswego, while coupling cars at Sodus Station, caught his foot in the guard rail. His left leg was cut entirely off above the knee and his right foot and ankle crushed. His father was killed in a like manner on the railroad seven years ago.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

ROMANCE OF MATRIMONY.

An Old Man Wants a Divorce from His Seventy-Year-Old Wife.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 11.—A short time ago Peter Martin applied to the courts here for a divorce from his wife Rosanna. Peter is 77 years of age and Rosanna 70, and they had been married a few months only. He says that she deserted him. She filed an application for alimony and counsel fees. On this application Judge Woodward has just filed an opinion in which he says:

"She does not deny having left the house, but says he treated her cruelly. She says: 'He took me home with him after we were married, and I had to get the supper ready the first night.' This certainly seems like a rather abrupt transformation from the romance of matrimony to its hard realities, but in view of the fact that the parties had reached such mature age, had been married before, and had families by first marriages, it would seem reasonable to suppose that the transition of the bride from the environment of the honeymoon to that of the kitchen, while evidently rapid, must still have been comparatively painless."

The judge concludes his opinion as follows: "On the whole, we do not think it our duty to make this order for alimony, and thus prolong the litigation between these now old people, who will spend the evening of their lives to much better purpose by coming together under one roof and living as man and wife than by a struggle to hasten that separation which, by the law of nature and without any aid from this court, must very soon occur."

THE GODFREY-SMITH FIGHT.

Both Pugilists in Fine Trim for To-Night's Battle.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The 25-round boxing match between George Godfrey and Ed Smith, to take place to-night at the Puritan Athletic Club, Long Island City, is the chief subject of discussion amongst the sporting fraternity to-day.

The men's arrival in town from their training quarters has stimulated the interest in the match to a white heat.

Both boxers report themselves in very fine condition and each is confident of winning.

The men are to box for a purse of $2,000, offered by the Puritan Club. Big gloves are to be used.

There is a good deal of quiet betting going on, and Smith seems to be a trifle the favorite, although backers of the colored man are not wanting.

There is not much likelihood that the match will be interfered with by the authorities, as it is an out-and-out boxing contest and not a fight. Tickets for the match are in great demand.

WALL STREET FEVERISH.

Stocks Reach the Lowest Prices Known for Years.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—There is a panicky feeling in Wall Street and failures are looked for owing to the violent plunge of share values. Large blocks were thrown overboard almost regardless of price, this showing conclusively that forced liquidations were in progress.

The uneasy feeling on the Street is largely due to the nervous state of apprehension that exists on the foreign stock exchanges.

In many instances the lowest prices known for many years were touched, a few of the stocks selling even lower than in the memorable panic of 1884.

Two New Railroads.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 11.—The State Department granted charters to two railroad companies. One is the State Line Railroad Company, extending from the New York and Pennsylvania State line near its intersection with the Genesee River, southerly to Perryville, a distance of two miles in the county of Potter. The other is the Erie & Shenango Railroad. It will be seven miles long from a junction with the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad near Girard, Erie County, to a junction with the Pittsburg, Shenango & Lake Erie Railroad near Cramsville.

Contesting Dick Quay's Seat.

BEAVER, Pa., Nov. 11.—The announcement that the election of Senator Quay's son, Dick, to the State Legislature from Beaver County is to be contested, has caused a good deal of a local sensation. Quay's opponent, Walter S. Braden, says he already has sufficient proofs to overturn the Republican majority of 169.

Rolling Mill Strike Settled.

READING, Pa., Nov. 11.—The strike in the Scottsville Iron and Steel Company's rolling mill at West Hamburg has been settled. The strike started because the superintendent found fault with an imperfect billet of iron and refused to pay for its production. The mill will resume operations at once.

The "Green Goods" Sharp Escapes.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Owing to insufficient evidence to hold him Judge Duffy reluctantly discharged Walter Willard, alias Big Walker, who was arrested Sunday on a charge of having decoyed Mrs. Angeline Conrad here from Brookville, Bracken county, Ky., for the purpose of selling her counterfeit money.

Wesley Batch Suicides.

BOSTON, Nov. 11.—Wesley P. Batch, one of the best known live stock commission merchants in the country, committed suicide at his office, No, 82 Devonshire street, by shooting. Business troubles were the cause.

His Head Severed from His Body.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11. — Alexander Hexter, senior member of the well known clothing firm of Hexter Bros, at 434 Market street, was caught between an elevator and the floor in his store and his head was severed from his body.

A Druggist Fined for Selling Liquor.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Nov. 11.—Edwin R. Burdick, keeper of the drug store in the Oriental Hotel, was convicted at Freehold of selling liquor and fined $500 and costs.

A THRILL OF HORROR

Bonny's Story a Startling Surprise for England.

THE TIDE IN STANLEY'S FAVOR.

A Belief that the Explorer Was Humane and Manly in Every Situation.

Gladstone Thinks that British Interest in the McKinley Bill Was Only Secondary—French Hatred of the Germans. An Opera Director Dismissed by the Manager to Prevent a Riot.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The story told by Bonny has caused a thrill of horror throughout England, and the sentiment is generally expressed that while Stanley is vindicated as against the charges of Barttelot's relatives, he and his surviving associates should long ago have told the whole truth in the interest of justice and humanity.

Bonny's statement, however, has at once arrested the rapidly spreading feeling that Stanley had been ungenerous toward the dead without sufficient provocation. Bonny himself has not been any too friendly toward Mr. Stanley, having been one of the malcontents who complained of the explorer's behavior; but the outrageous charges which have been made against Stanley have put him on his mettle as an officer and a gentleman to defend his leader and tell the truth.

He goes much further than Stanley in disclosing the facts relating to Barttelot and Jameson, and the general impression is that, however misinformed Stanley may have been by others concerning the details of the horrors in the rear guard, and however impetuous in condemnation he may have been, an exhaustive inquiry will demonstrate that he has been in the main correct, and that he has certainly been humane, honest and manly in every situation and in all circumstances. Troup's denials are regarded as sincere enough, wherever Troup has really any knowledge of the facts; but his wholesale contradictions excite no serious interest.

In regard to the statement that Barttelot seized a woman and fastened his teeth into her flesh, Bonny says it is quite true. "This was one of the occasions upon which I saved his (Barttelot's) life," Bonny continued, "for he would have died with his teeth in the woman's face had I not beaten off the crowd of enraged natives who started to attack the Major with cudgels."

It is said that Mr. Stanley will at once prosecute Mr. Barttelot, the brother of the late Major Barttelot, and others, for the publication and circulation of libels in connection with the conduct of the rear column and Mr. Stanley's relation thereto.

GLADSTONE'S VIEWS.

British Interest in the McKinley Tariff is Only Secondary.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—In reply to a request for his opinion in regard to the American elections, Mr. Gladstone writes as follows: "I have received the intelligence of the result of the recent elections in America with lively feelings, on grounds moral not less than economical, and American scarcely less than English.

"In my opinion the example of America in reference to the tariff will not have much weight in Europe. I might run the risk, if I proceeded further, of justly offending by my undue intrusion the American Republicans, whom, off the single ground of protection, I rejoice to reckon as warmly sympathizing with the cause of public right. I believe British interest in the McKinley tariff is secondary, except for the momentary disturbance."

TROUBLE IN BELGIUM.

Workingmen Demand Universal Suffrage and Rioting is Feared.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 11.—Delegates of the Radical Association waited upon the Municipal Council and presented a petition in favor of universal suffrage. At the same time an immense crowd of workingmen assembled around the Hotel de Ville, awaiting the result of the petition.

The burgomaster promised the delegates that a bill should be introduced in the Chambers to revise the constitution in the respect indicated.

This answer failed to satisfy the workingmen, who received it with threatening demonstrations and refused to disperse. The number of people in the crowd is estimated at 10,000.

The Government holds a large force of troops in readiness for action, but though rioting is feared, no disorder has yet occurred.

London's New Lord Mayor.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Mr. Joseph Savory was installed as Lord Mayor of London with the usual parade and rejoicings. The new Lord Mayor was loudly cheered by the citizens. He is much more popular than his predecessor, because the latter is charged with not having upheld the dignity of his office, whereas Savory has emphatically declared that, while he is Mayor, he will be the first citizen of London, not in name alone but in act. The outgoing and incoming Mayor rode in a magnificent coach drawn by six horses and a number of the survivors of the Crimean war and a naval brigade took part in the parade.

French Hatred of Germans.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—During a performance of "Faust" at Dunkirk, a tremendous tumult arose in the audience, due to the abiding French hatred of the Germans, which only in Paris has been suffered to fall into abeyance under the influence of common sense and art. Having suddenly made the discovery that the director, Martel, was a German, the people demanded his immediate dismissal before they would permit the opera to go on. The manager of the theatre was obliged to come to the front and announce the dismissal of Martel in order to prevent a riot.

SOCIALISTS CELEBRATE.

Three Thousand Assemble in Honor of the Haymarket "Martyrs."

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Nearly 3,000 persons assembled at Cooper Union last night to celebrate the memory of the five men who were executed in Chicago three years ago on account of the Haymarket riot.

The event here this year is split up into two sections, last night's celebration being by the Socialists and to night's by the Anarchists.

Forty-two societies were represented. The police were present in strong force, but were, in the main, in civilian's dress. Hugo Folk, who presided, opened the exercises, and strongly denounced the Chicago authorities.

Prof. De Leon followed and said the Socialists had no use for those who advocated dynamite. Those who talked of blood would be the first to run when the time came to use force.

Resolutions were adopted denouncing the prosecutors of the Chicago "martyrs" as "perjurers and criminal plutocrats." An undying remembrance of the execution of the "martyrs" is professed, as well as a determination to abolish wage slavery.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Secretary Noble has gone to North Carolina for a few days' rest.

A revolt has broken out against the government of President Bogran in Honduras.

Succi, the New York faster, steadily gains in strength. He has resorted to his wonderful elixer for the first time.

At the Lord Mayor's banquet in London Lord Salisbury referred to the McKinley tariff as being in the interest of the "American pig."

Of the 3,600 breweries in this country the foreign syndicates have secured about sixty, representing something over forty companies.

Governor Hill, of New York, and Governor Bulkely, of Connecticut, issued proclamations designating November 27 as Thanksgiving Day.

Superintendent of the Census Porter writes an article in which he intimates that the police enumeration in New York was worthless and prepared to order.

A traveling showman at Birmingham, Ala., designedly precipitated a panic among a thousand children, in which many of the little ones were horribly crushed and bruised.

Mrs. Siebel, of Guttenberg, N. J., demented, who mysteriously disappeared from her home last June, has as mysteriously returned. She can give no account of her movements.

The sixth annual horse show in New York city opened in Madison Square Garden with a good attendance, and everything was on a much grander scale than ever before.

According to statements of election expenses filed by congressional candidates in New York State, the cost of the campaign to each of them ranged from nothing to about $3,000,

Dr. W. A. M. Culbert, one of the leading physicians of Newburg, N. Y., is dead. He was born November 4, 1822, and graduated from the University of the City of New York in 1841.

The hat manufacturers of this city are about to organize an association to advance their interests. The result will probably be an advance in prices, owing to the increased price of raw materials.

Chairman Kerr of the Democratic State Campaign Committee of Pennsylvania, before leaving Washington for his home, said that no organized effort had been made to put Pattison in nomination for the Presidency in 1892.

The large barn owned by Higgins & Connelly, of Geneva, N. Y., and used by them as stables for their horses, was burned down at an early morning hour. John Hall, a man employed in the stable, while attempting to liberate the horses was overcome by smoke and perished in the flames. Fourteen horses and two mules were burned. The building was fully insured.

Mrs. Catherine Farlin, aged 63, who resided with her family at No. 209 Rahway avenue, Elizabeth, N. J., was missed during the morning, and after a search by her friends her dead body, clothed only in a nightdress, was found at the bottom of a well in the yard. Mrs. Farlin has been acting strangely for some time, and it is believed she threw herself down the well while suffering from a temporary aberration of mind.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—During the Grand Army fair at Amphion Hall, J. E. Hall will recite "Sheridand's Ride," and "The Vagabonds."

—The annual meeting of the Union County Sunday School Association was begun in the Roselle Baptist church, this afternon at 2 o'clock.

—A new advertisement appears today from the United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association, informing the public to look out for something important next Friday.

—A young man attending the Mills meeting last night fainted and had to be carried out. He had been standing over a register, and the hot air had affected him. He was soon restored to consciousness.

—Mrs. Catherine B. Farlin, the mother-in-law of County Collector Wood of Union County, committed suicide yesterday by jumping into a well in the rear of her house, 209 Rahway avenue, Elizabeth. She was sixty-one years old.

—John O'Donnell, driver of a Potter Press Works wagon, had a hand injured by an accident this afternoon. He was driving down the hill leading from the freight house to Park avenue when a rear wheel collapsed, overturning the wagon and crushing the driver's forearm.

—Captain Grant and Sergeant Lynch made a tour of the outlying portions of the city Sunday, and discovered a number of tramps camped on North avenue near the water-works station. The tramps were ordered to move on, which they promptly did, after carefully surveying the avoirdupois of Officer Lynch.

—The Kindergarten school recently opened by Miss Davie, of this city, at Fanwood, has already proved a success to the teacher as well as to the patrons of the institution. The school hours are from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. The number of pupils is increasing rapidly, and the little ones are very enthusiastic in their praise of their instructor.

—Seguine's Livery Stables, an adjunct to the well-known "Laing's Hotel," this city, has recently made some fine additions to horses and rolling stock. A handsome and costly coupe, made by Ryerson, is one of the latest. The patrons of this popular livery praise the efforts of the proprietor to please the public.

—F. M. Bacon, of the Real Estate Trust, left town yesterday for the South, in the interest of real estate speculators. The Trust has recently sold to New York and Philadelphia capitalists, within the past ten days, four large tracts of land in the vicinity of Plainfield. Wallace Vail is attending to matters at this end of the line, at 9 North avenue.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Harry P. Robinson has returned to his Fanwood villa after a brief sojourn at old Scotch Plains.

The address of the Rev. B. Fay Mills, during the remainder of his stay in Plainfield, will be in care of F. H. Andrews, 109 Broadway.

Oscar Fay Adams, the well-known author, will read a paper next Wednesday evening Nov. 12, at 8 o'clock, in the rooms of the Unitarian church on Second place, to which all who are interested are cordially invited.

Gen. Henry Kyte and Col. C. K. Moore left Fanwood Monday for Saints Retreat, on the north shore of Oneida Lake, where the General has a shooting-box. The Hon. George W. Myer, who owns a ranch immediately adjoining, is expected to meet them on their arrival. These gentlemen have placed the Retreat in charge of the noted caterer, Thos. Osborn of Oneida. Some of the most prominent residents of Fanwood expect to visit the Saints, leaving the latter part of the week. The latest advices are that ducks are plentiful and flying low.

Ex-Councilman Carey Will Have to Pay One Debt He Owes Those Who Made Him.

Some time ago the Miller Bros. sued Tunis J. Carey for a balance of borrowed money he owed them, and obtained a judgment against him. This morning, when the case came up, the appeal was set aside, and Mr. Carey will have to pay the amount at once to those he swore in court he did not owe a cent to. The Millers picked Carey up and made him a Councilman.

Banker Fisk's Funeral.

All arrangements have been completed for the funeral of Harvey Fisk, father of the Messrs Fisk, of this city, who died at his home, Wilburtha, near Trenton, on Saturday. The services will take place at 11:30 o'clock to-morrow morning at his late home. A special car will be attached to the train, leaving for Trenton Junction by the Central Railroad of New Jersey, from the foot of Liberty street, at 9 A. M. Carriages will be in waiting on the arrival of the train.

Henry Haurand the Champion Record Breaker.

About one year ago Mr. Wunderlich, at bowling, scored 116 points out of a possible 120. Ever since that time several members of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn-Verein famous for big scores have tried hard to beat the record. Last Saturday Charles Meyer got very near the record by making 110 points, and last night Henry Haurand made 117 points out of a possible 120 and is now the champion of the society.

A MIDWEEK SABBATH—IN PLAINFIELD.

Men and Women Give the Day to God.—Services at Private Homes and in the Churches.—Stores Closed, and Quiet Reigns on the Streets.—Continuation of the Great Revival.—Wondrous Tidings from a Gifted Preacher.—Words of Eternal Life for Repentant Sinners.

The observance of to-day as a second Sabbath was fully as general as one could expect in a busy city like Plainfield. A large number of store keepers closed their places of business during the hours of church service, morning and afternoon, even at considerable personal sacrifice; and a proper appreciation of the marvelous manifestations which God has given, of His holy presence among the people of Plainfield, was shown by all. Not a few, commuters and others, in heart felt sincerity gave the day entirely up to God. A true spirit of devotion occupied the people. In early morning in many a household were gathered together the men and women, the old and young, of the neighborhood, and a delightful hour of prayer resulted. At nine o'clock special prayer meetings, at which a divine spirit of supplication prevailed, were held in all the churches. At ten o'clock Mr. Mills, the evangelist whose coming has wrought so great a blessing, preached to a throng of hearers in the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church. At a quarter before three o'clock this afternoon another prayer service was held, this a union of all the churches. At half-past three Mr. Mills again preached to a great congregation. All of these services were productive of much good, and the preaching of Mr. Mills fully convinced many hesitating hearts and brought them into the Christian fold.

Last night's meeting was the first in the Crescent avenue church. The number attending was probably 1,100, of whom about 100 were obliged to stand. Mr. Mills estimated—using his wonderful faculty for reading faces and judging the professing Christians from those still unconverted—that nearly nine-tenths of his hearers were not acknowledged followers of Christ, and his sermon was therefore more of an instructive talk to church members on their religious duties and their debt to their fellow men than it was an evangelistic appeal. Every soul was deeply aroused by his doctrine, and at the close of the sermon many assembled in the chapel to be taught by him what work they might readily do for Christ.

An interesting feature of the meeting was the reading, by the local clergymen, of one-minute reports from their Sabbath schools. All the pastors united in the sentiment that extraordinary showers of grace had been bestowed on the Plainfield people, and thought it a time when God was very near to us, and when we ought to walk very softly and humbly and prayerfully in His holy presence.

According to the report presented by the Rev. C. B. Mitchell, there were 219 members at the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school last Sabbath. Of these only 98 were not professing Christian, and during the afternoon 93 of the 98 gave their hearts to God. The Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes said that nearly all of the members of the First Baptist Sunday school had now professed Christ. More than one hundred cards signed by those who desire henceforth to lead a Christian life had been handed to him, as the pastor of their preference, and a large number of these were from Sunday school members. The Rev. W. C. Stinson, pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, said that out of a membership of 180 in his Sunday school, many of them already Christians, 60 had publicly confessed Christ last Sunday. The Rev. A. B. Dilts for the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday school said that 25 of the 27 non-professors of religion had just come out on the Lord's side. The Rev. Cornelius Schenck reported 56 new converts from the Trinity Reformed Sunday school. The Rev. C. L. Goodrich said that 30 or 40 of the Congregational Sunday school had just decided for Christ, making nearly all the members followers of Jesus. The Rev. A. H. Lewis said that very few members of the Seventh-Day Sabbath school above 12 years of age were still outside the Christian fold. E. C. Pease, Superintendent of the Warren Mission Chapel, said that 63 last Sunday came out for Christ, and that 25 women, all over 50 years of age, constituting the "mothers' class," had consecrated themselves to the Lord. The Rev. K. P. Ketcham of the First Presbyterian church, the Rev. W. R. Richards of the Crescent Avenue, and the Rev. Mr. Newell of Hope Chapel, bore similar strong testimony to the wonderful work in the midst of their people. Mr. Richards spoke in glowing terms of the eloquent sight presented by the Sabbath school teachers at their prayer and consecration meetings before the assembling of their classes, when, in tears, they besought the Master to help them to bring their pupils to Christ.

Altogether, at Sunday's services, 454 signed cards indicating their desire to lead henceforth a Christian life, and signifying a preference for church or pastor. Including these, fully 1,600 people arose in response to the appeals of Mr. Mills to decide for themselves the question, "Will I give myself to the Lord now?"

The ten o'clock service this morning was one of the most beautiful ever witnessed in a Plainfield church. Mr. Mills gave a divine exposition of the eleventh chapter of St. John, and in his interpretation of the story of the resurrection of Lazarus gave impassioned utterance to richest truths and promises. When Martha came unto Jesus and said, "Lord, if Thou hadst been here, my brother had not died; but I know that even now whatsoever Thou wilt ask of God, God will give it Thee," Mary sat still in the house, cherishing bitterness because Jesus had not responded to the sisters' request to visit Lazarus, their brother, before the death. There were many Marys in actual life—Marys to be pitied, not scolded. And every one of these Marys of today must be brought to a full realization that "the Master is come, and calleth for thee," so that they too might arise quickly and go to their Father, and trust themselves to Him, even as did Mary of old.

A great stone—the preacher said—lay in the way of Jesus to-day, in his effort to reach the sinner's heart—just such a stone as had closed the mouth of the cave where the body of Lazarus lay when Christ, weeping and groaning at Mary's anguish, approached the place. Jesus would not himself remove that stone. The sinner must roll it away. To roll away the stone was to signify one's trust in God, and such faith would be rewarded just as Christ rewarded the faith of Mary and Martha when they rolled the stone away from before their brother's grave. And with the stone taken from the human heart God would work the wondrous miracle of resurrecting the soul that was dead in sin, just as Christ raised Lazarus from the dead. Every incident of that beautiful story of Lazarus was thus given a personal and practical application, and the throng that arose, during the conclusion of the service, and signified their willingness to give themselves to Christ and His service, came to an exquisite realization of the passage from the chapter:

"I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live:

"And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

A great many were deeply affected by today's services, and were moved to tears, and much good was wrought among the people.

To-morrow morning's prayer meeting, at 59 North avenue, to which all business men, clerks, and others, are invited, will be conducted by Edward St. John. The subject will be "Prayer for the Almost Persuaded"—Acts XXVI: 28. The hour will be from 7:30 to 8:20.

To-morrow afternoon at 3:30 Mr. Mills will preach to all classes, at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and in the evening at 7:45 will preach at the same church at a meeting for men only. A meeting for women will be held in the Congregational church at 7:45 P. M.

Royal Arcanum Entertainment.

Through the enterprise of the Committee on Good of the Order, the friends of Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, were afforded an opportunity last evening of hearing Fred. Emerson Brooks, the California poet, recite some selections of his choicest compositions. D. W. Robertson, the tumbleronicon soloist, and F. W. Isenbarth, the zither player, were included in the programme.

The spacious lodge room of the Council was crowded. Regent E. W. Conklin preceded the entertainment with a brief explanation of the purpose and the success of the order. The playing of Messrs. Robertson and Isenbarth was much enjoyed, and they each received repeated recalls. Mr. Robertson is an artist, and so is Mr. Isenbarth, but the latter's selections were not the most attractive for a zither; nothing, but pathetic ballad music should be played on that instrument—dance music, particularly, being lacking in all pleasing qualities.

Mr. Brooks is a master of expression, in which he is helped by the reading of his own verses. The humors of his own mind, and the sentiments of his own heart, come from his own lips filled with power and effect. After the entertainment, the Council and its guests enjoyed a supper together.

Ernest R. Ackerman to Succeed Councilman Dunham.

The Republicans of the Third Ward met on short notice, last evening, to nominate delegates to the city convention, and a councilman to succeed M. M. Dunham. John W. Murray called the primary to order, and John M. Whiton was chosen Chairman, and O. B. Leonard, Secretary. There were about seventy present. John M. Crane nominated Ernest R. Ackerman as the Republican candidate for council. He received the unanimous vote of the primary. J. Oakley Nodyne was nominated for Justice of the Peace, and Amos Moffet for Constable. The members of the City Executive Committee chosen were Ex-councilmen E. N. Erickson, I. W. Rushmore and E. L. Finch.

The delegates chosen to represent the ward at the city convention, Thursday evening, were: O. T. Waring, John W. Murray, E. N. Erickson, E. R. Ackerman, E. L. Finch, D. E. Titsworth, Alex Gilbert, F. A. Dunham and J. F. Hubbard.

—Attention is called to the special inducements offered by C. B. Ripley in the advertising columns, of choice building sites in Westfield. The building on his property, Boulevard, Summit avenue, Park street, Ross place and Central avenue, surpasses any activity in real estate heretofore known in the county.

—The famous Eclipse Quartette, of Plainfield, has been engaged to sing at the twenty-fifth anniversary of Lincoln Division, Sons of Temperance, at Library Hall, Thursday evening, January 15.—Elizabeth Journal.

A General Tie-up

Of all the means of public conveyance in a large city, even for a few hours, during a strike of the employes, means a general paralyzing of trade and industry for the time being, and is attended with an enormous aggregate loss to the community. How much more serious to the individual is the general tie-up of his system due to the strike of the most important organs for more prudent treatment and better care. If too long neglected, a torpid or sluggish liver will produce serious forms of kidney and liver diseases, malarial trouble and chronic dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are a preventive and cure of these disorders They are prompt, sure and effective, pleasant to take, and positively harmless

GOOD SPORT FOR HUNTSMEN.

Abundance of Bunnies and Other Game Gives Gunners a Lively Time.

Plainfield sportsmen are having excellent fortune, this season, in their search for game. Every nightfall now finds the huntsman's bag well-filled with fresh meat, and the abundance of living targets for their guns seems not one whit diminished.

Election day witnessed a tremendous slaughter of cotton-tail and feathered innocents throughout this section, and throughout the State. The gunners well maintained the reputation of the day as a hunters' holiday. Coming so soon after the expiration of the game laws for the season, election day has long been fatal for game, and many a quail that survives the cannonade on that occasion can rest in comparative security for the remainder of the season. In the country many of the farmers and farmers' men improve the opportunity, after exercising their privileges of a citizen, to go forth after game.

As a result, the woods were ringing with the cries of rabbit hounds last Tuesday as they chased the graceful little animal and ran him in a circular course back to his starting point. The rabbits in this section are really hares, but the name rabbit has been applied so generally without regard to the species that one hardly ever hears the right term applied. They multiply very rapidly, and no matter how destructive a Fall season may be, the next year they seem just about as abundant as ever. Hardy and adaptive to their surroundings, they rear their young with little trouble.

Of course, the hawks and large birds of prey are on the lookout for them, but they usually hug the bushes and thickets when young, till big enough to look out for the hawks. In New Jersey they are found everywhere. Sometimes they come even into the gardens and race in the moonlight over the lawns of suburban residents. At this time of the year they are either in the old meadows, resting quietly by day in tufts of grass, where they make cozy little nests, and at night go forth in search of food, or else they are hidden among the dry leaves in the thickets.

The most successful manner of hunting them entails hard work. A couple of good hounds trained to rabbit coursing are taken out. Then the hunter cuts a good-sized sapling and plies it upon every brush heap and thicket he meets. If a rabbit jumps out, he fires. He does not care much if the rabbit is out of sight, as he is just as well satisfied to whistle up his dog. The minute the dog strikes the scent he is off after Bunny.

The rabbit will invariably return to the point from which he started, even though it may be a long circle that he will traverse before coming up. So all the hunter has to do is to cock his gun and wait for the return of the rabbit. If he fails to down the rapid little flier, the dog may bring him around for a second shot, but often the rabbit, in following his old trail, throws the dog off the right track. An old rabbit is up to all manner of tricks, and if he discovers that the dog is following him steadily, he will make side jumps, double back a bit, and leap a small stream in a zigzag manner in order to bother the hound.

Sometimes the dogs will start the rabbits of their own accord, but they cannot be depended upon. The rabbit hunter, to make a large bag, must expect a hard day's work and a long tramp. Warm dress is necessary and a good plan to avoid too close communication with briers and thorns is to put on two sets of underclothes and a couple of pairs of trousers. Corduroys are very good. High-top boots go with the outfit, as well as a soft felt hat, light gray in color. A light fowling piece is best adapted to rabbit shooting and No. 6 is about the right sized shot. The rabbit hunter is likely to stumble on a covey of quail and the No. 6 will not be found too large to work into the feathers of the bird.

Fair luck was reported by the election day hunters as regards rabbits, and quite a number of quail was obtained. The day was dry and, in the language of the old native hunters, "the scent lay well."

Quail were found in close cover and in the thickets upon the edge of cultivated land into which they might easily run out to feed. The numerous hedgegrows and bushes along country fences are excellent places for quail. If the weather is cold they are found in thicker covers, among the bushes and scrub pines.

Some woodcock were also brought in, but in no large numbers. Woodcock shooting is now very uncertain in this part of the country. The late birds in their migrations are loth to tarry long, and it is only the lucky gunner who strikes them just after their arrival. The birds always come down during big storms. Along the railroad tracks in New Jersey the watchmen often pick up a fine mess the morning after a storm. They are driven blindly against the telegraph wires and are either maimed or killed. Besides rabbits, quail, and woodcock a few squirrels may be obtained by the Fall gunners who have quick eyes for the game as they are sunning themselves on the treetops.

Duck shooting is still excellent on the Great South Bay. The broadbills are especially numerous and are not very wild this season. Some of the hunters are bringing in as many as a hundred birds. The coots are as much of a nuisance as ever, and at times swarm over the bay. A few canvass backs and redheads have been shot during the past week.

—The Crescent will be opened for skating during the afternoon and evening of Thanksgiving Day.

Sleepy Somerville Justice.

Less than four weeks ago an Italian known to have $120 in his pockets was murdered in the township of Bedminster, about nine miles north of Somerville. A Coroner's jury went through the motions customary upon such occasions, and two men were arrested for the crime. They were taken to the county seat, Somerville, promptly discharged, and there the matter ended.

Last Wednesday the remains of a murdered man were found in a barn at Raritan, about two miles from the county seat. In this case no arrests have been made, and it doesn't look as if any would be made. It was a common tramp in this instance who was killed, and nobody has turned up who cares anything about his fate.

Patrick McCue was his name, but he was better known as "Paddy the Bum." He was buried without an effort on the part of the Somerville authorities to learn whether he had any relatives or to find out if common stories about his having a rich sister in Chicago were true. Chief Crowe says he has hunted the best he knew how for evidence, and he thinks the affair will have to go down among the mysteries of crime like the murder of the Italian in Bedminster.

No one seems to care if "Paddy the Bum" did get his skull fractured. There is no doubt that he was murdered, but that fact doesn't appear to stimulate detective work.

General Madison Drake Must Suffer the Consequences of Libel.

The certiorari of the case of James Madison Drake vs. The State, which was brought up from the Union County Court, was decided in the Supreme Court at Trenton yesterday by an opinion filed by Justice Dixon. General Drake, who is editor of the Evening Leader, in Elizabeth, published an article about the horsewhipping of Henry Cook, editor of the Herald, of the same city, and was indicted and convicted of libel. The record of the court was taken up on a writ of error asking for a reversal of judgment. The Court affirms the judgment below.

Quality Hill No Longer in Darkness.

The Land Improvement Company have established a system of lighting the avenues of Fanwood by the erection of 25 Diety lamps on cedar posts. The residents pay for their maintenance at the monthly rate of 50 cents each. Quality Hill, the most aristocratic portion of Fanwood, has five lamps, which burn all night. The largest is placed directly opposite the home of Abner P. Downer. At a meeting of the residents recently held, a unanimous vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Wm. E. Gibbs for her exertions and success in having the lighting system established.

Be Careful About Your Store Stoves.

Those who close up the stores nights for the next six months, should be careful how they leave the fires in their stoves. If the stove is filled with coal, be sure the door is left wide open and the drafts all closed. Three times within the last few nights the watchful police have had to wake up certain business men of the city, and have them come down and open their stores and smother the fires before the building was burned down. In one place opposite THE PRESS office, the front window glass was so hot when the police aroused the proprietor, that they could not bear their hands on it.

He Sat and Thought and Thought.

She was a bright girl and they were at the season's last game of baseball. She had won his enthusiastic heart by understanding the game right off, and he loved her even more than if she had been only his sister. "It reminds me of the household," she said. "The plate, the batter, the fowls, the flies, etc." "And it reminds me of marriage," she added. "First the diamond, where they are engaged; then the struggles and the hits; then the men going out and, finally, the difficulty in getting home!" And he sat and thought and thought.—Philadelphia Times.

Fanwood's Water-Works a Success.

Fanwood has now a fire department unequalled by any place of its size in the State. The water system which was established through the efforts of Assemblyman-elect George Kyte has now been supplemented by several thousand feet of hose which can be attached to the hydrants on short notice. No steamers are necessary, as the storage pressure is sufficient to throw a stream over the highest residence. A new hook and ladder truck has just been received by the department.

Another New Road to Skirt Plainfield.

The Reading Railroad Company has filed articles of incorporation at Trenton for a new road to be built from a point on the Bound Brook Railroad 1,000 feet west of the centre of the crossing on the Easton and Amboy division of the Lehigh Valley road in Somerset county, and to terminate at a point on Arthur Kill, on Staten Island Sound, twenty-six feet south of Tuft Point, in Middlesex county. The length of the road will be twenty miles. The capital is $2,000,000.

A Stray Speckled Beauty.

John Linbarger, of this city, while fishing below the dam at Bound Brook, yesterday, caught a salmon trout weighing 1½ pounds. Where the fish came from, no one knows. He was a stranger, and John took him in. There is no record of such a fish every being caught in the Raritan before.

Will the Republican Factions Compromise on Ex-Mayor Rockfellow?

A few weeks ago, Alexander Gilbert was the only candidate of any weight in the race for the nomination as Mayor by the Republican party of this city. Since then Councilman Roberts has been entered in the contest by his friends, and has developed such a pull that the Gilbert faction have lost all assurance of a walk over for their choice in the convention.

In fact, so equally divided is the contest between the two, and so improbable is the surrender of either, that there is talk in the inner circles of the Republican party of comprising on ex-Mayor Rockfellow as the candidate.

A Satisfactory Explanation.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:

In order that our residents may fully understand why the Bazar of the G. A. R, occurs during the meetings of the Rev. Mr. Mills, we desire to state that when we engaged the Hall we were under the impression that the meetings were to continue only one week, and we are now unable to get other favorable dates,

Respectfully,

The agreeable pleasantness in taking Hiscox's Cough Cure overcomes all thoughts of medicine. At the same time it is the most effectual and harmless remedy ever discovered for coughs, colds, hoarseness, croup, and whooping-cough. You want to remember this!

Conflict Between Workingmen.

HAMBURG, Nov. 11.—A serious conflict occurred at Ottensen, a suburb of this city, between striking glassblowers and 300 Polish "blacklegs," who had been employed to take the places of the union men. Revolvers were used as well as stones and clubs. One man was killed and many were injured. A number of arrests have been made.

Democrats Expel Bill McMullen.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—The Democratic City Committee, at a meeting last night, expelled Peter Monroe and William McMullen, the Democratic leaders in the third and fourth wards, for alleged treachery to the party at the recent election. These wards are Democratic strongholds, but the fourth ward, which ordinarily shows a Democratic majority of 1,800, gave only 55 plurality for Pattison. McMullen is charged with being responsible for this discrepancy. Monroe is said to have exerted the same influence in the third ward.

Baptist Ministers Surprised.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Dr. Howard Crosby's published denial that he made the statement that an ex-police commissioner had told him a certain police captain had received $70,000 a year in blackmail, made at last Monday's meeting of the Baptist ministers, has surprised the members who were present then and who claimed they heard the statement from the doctor's lips.

A Boodle Trial Delayed.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 11.—The case of John McLennan, the Alderman, charged by Mayor Cowie with accepting a bribe of $100 to put a resolution through the Council, will rest a week. He offered no defense and Police Justice Mulholland will consider before deciding whether to hold McLennan for the grand jury on the evidence offered.

Senator Ingalls to be a New Yorker.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—It is said that Mr. Ingalls proposes to become a citizen of New York at the expiration of his term in the United States Senate.

Toads in Rocks.

Many well authenticated stories of the finding of live toads and frogs in solid rock are on record, and that such things are possible was demonstrated here recently, when the workmen engaged in Varley & Everill's lime rock quarry, north of the city, broke open a large piece of rock which had been blasted out, and a frog hopped out of a pocket in the center of the stone, says the Salt Lake Herald. Of course, the occurrence created a tremendous sensation among the workmen, and operations at the quarry were for the time suspended, and the movements of the frog were watched with great interest. The animal was somewhat smaller than the ordinary frog, and was perfectly white. Its eyes were unusually large and very brilliant, but the frog was apparently blind. Where the mouth should have been there was only a line, and on the feet was a dark, horny substance. Mr. Everill at once took charge of the curiosity and put it in a tin can, but the frog died the next morning. He brought it down-town, and it was examined with interest by a large number of people, and it was afterward presented to the museum, where it will be preserved in alcohol.

New Mexico Onyx.

Mrs. L. J. Caldwell, of Chicago, is the sole owner of ricolite and green onyx quarries now being operated in western Grant County, New Mexico. This is one of the most remarkable discoveries. The stone has the form of true fissure vein fifty feet wide and over a mile in length, and it is taken out in massive blocks and taken to Chicago, where it is becoming very popular for house decoration, inside and outside. The stone is susceptible of a very high polish, and of a variety of colors—dark green and cream, striped and mottled, also pink and salmon. In fact, it carries what are termed the "lost colors" in stone. It is very tough, is superior to Mexican onyx, and is the only stone of the kind in the world that can be carved. Contracts have been signed to supply it to the new Alhambra Theater and hotel and other public buildings in Chicago for decorative purposes. Mrs. Caldwell offers blocks of it to be used in the construction of the New Mexico exhibit pavilion at the world's fair.—Stone.

HOUSEHOLD BREVITIES.

—A good rule is to use pastry flour whenever baking-powder is used, and bread flour with yeast.

—Apple Snow.—Bake six good apples, take out the pulp, and when cold beat it thoroughly with the whites of three eggs, and sugar enough to stiffen a little; serve with a boiled custard for a sauce.—Boston Budget.

—For the instant destruction of roaches, stir into a half-pint of hot paste a dime's worth of phosphorus, adding, when cool, a quarter the bulk of grease. This should be placed where they frequent, and they will die while eating it.

—Spiced Peaches.—Seven pounds of fruit, one pint of vinegar, three pounds of sugar, two ounces of cinnamon, one-half ounce cloves. Scald all together and pour over the fruit. Let stand twenty-four hours, pour off, scald, and let stand another twenty-four hours. Boil all together until fruit is tender. Set away in jars in a cool place.—Housekeeper.

—To Preserve Pineapple.—Remove all the skin and eyes, cut in pieces from the core and chop rather fine. Allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar to each pound of pineapple, mix the sugar and pineapple well together, and let it remain overnight. In the morning pour off the sirup and let it boil fifteen minutes; then add the fruit, and cook until transparent. Put in air-tight jars and keep in a cool place.—Boston Herald.

—Coffee is far more delicious when made with eggs than it is without. One egg to a teacupful of ground coffee is about the right proportion for a rich extract, but less than this can be easily used by adding a teacupful of cold water to a well-beaten egg and using enough of this mixture to thoroughly wet the coffee. Beat an egg well, add two tablespoonfuls of cold milk; pour this mixture into a pint of boiling milk, let scald but not boil. Try this when you have no cream for breakfast coffee.

—Veal Soup.—Wash the knuckle, put it into a saucepan with three pints of cold water and a level tablespoonful of salt. Simmer for one hour and a half. Then remove the knuckle, cut off all the meat and put it aside. Restore the bones to the kettle. Add to the broth two or three sprigs of parsley, quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper and the same of celery salt. Stir either one rounded teaspoonful of cornstarch or two of flour into a cupful of sweet milk, add this and half a gill of granulated tapioca, or rice. Let the soup boil slowly for one hour and a half longer, making three hours in all. Remove the bones before serving.—Good Housekeeping.

A Strange Truth.

Something Which Should Come Home to Every Clerk, Mechanic and Business Man.

"Mr. I.—— died from brain and nerve exhaustion, after accumulating a large fortune," report the papers.

What a text and what a lesson! All strive for a living or wealth, and work, fret and push until they use up their nerve, strength and vital powers—until, by the strain and tension upon brain and nerves, they become prostrated in nerve and physical strength. Thousands upon thousands, from the humblest workman or clerk to the greatest banker, are straining every energy and overworking their brains, nerve and bodies, and the result will be nervous exhaustion, insanity, heart failure, shattered nerves, paralysis or death, unless they recuperate their nerve power and vital strength.

This applies to the overworked clerk or mechanic, confined during long hours, who sees himself growing thin in flesh, pale and sallow in complexion, and finds that he is gradually losing his former physical strength and strong nerves. It applies to the business man, who finds his work, strain and tension of mind slowly but surely undermining his strength, tiring his brain, weakening his nerves and debilitating his body.

The result is the same in all such cases. They become weak, nervous, restless or fretful; they have dizziness, bad-feeling head, an unsteady and trembling nerve, strange sensations, a feeling of anxiety or gloomy depression of the mind; they are sleepless and wake tired and unrefreshed; their appetite and digestion fail, and they become bilious, and generally run down. These are dangerous symptoms and the warning is only too plain.

Why is it that thousands of people neglect these symptoms when their common sense tells them that some time it will be too late? Why are they stupid enough to neglect their health, their life, until cure becomes well nigh impossible? They certainly know that they can be cured by taking Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great brain and nerve invigorator and health restorer; they know positively, as has been demonstrated in myriads of cases, that this great and wonderful restorer of nerve and physical strength and power will perfectly and completely invigorate their tired brain, nerve their weary limbs and give back to the exhausted system its strength and vigor.

It is a purely vegetable and harmless remedy, which no one need hesitate to use, and it can be purchased at druggists for $1 per bottle. Use it, you who are suffering from nerve and physical exhaustion, and it will restore your snap, vim vigor and power to work.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

The Pierson Hardware Co.

Are at the apex of the heap,
In the line of Stoves and Ranges—
All because they are good and cheap.

Now if you have got a beau,
And contemplate a plan
Of furnishing your kitchen—
PIERSON is the man.

Their Tinware and their Hardware,
Housefurnishing Goods and Lamps,
Makes one feel as if they would like to have
A pocket full of stamps.

So call and see, and you'll agree
That what we now relate
Is not at all a fable,
But wise to contemplate.

And when into your kitchen
You by chance do look around
And see the many useful things
That at PIERSON'S you have found,

You will then unto your friends relate
That story, old and true—
That to step into their store
Is to purchase more and more,
Until you find you got the earth and
cannot get no more.

AUTUMN.

Brown and bare are the autumn fields;
Heaped and stacked is the yellow grain;
Hardly a partridge the stubble yields,
So closely shorn is the bristly plain.
Summer is dying 'mid shower and cloud,
Crimson and gold is her royal shroud.

Winter is coming: the leafy woods
Are withering fast in their golden pride;
For the wind is fierce, and the rain in floods
Is sweeping o'er valley and mountain-side.
Dead leaves are flying through sun and shade
A crimson carpet all down the glade.

Mute are the finches, the lark, and the linnet
Only the robin sings loud and clear,
A song for the beauty and joy of summer,
A sweet good-bye to the waning year.
Mead and valley and mountain steep
In the misty silence are falling asleep.

But out of their sleep shall they one day waken.
And sparkle anew with pearl and gold,
When the rosy gates of morn reopen,
And crown with splendor the dusky wold,
Though the year die out amid cloud and rain,
Yet golden summer shall come again.

—B. G. Johns, in Demorest.

MOONSHINER'S REVERIE.

It Was a Free Country But Sebe Gober Was a Prisoner.

"MINE them thar shotes don't gin you away, Sebe."

The man glanced up from the gun he was loading, and looked first at his mother, then at the shotes.

"T'aint likely," said he, shortly, with the cartridge between his teeth.

He was tall and slab-sided, and the shotes were tall and slab-sided. He had a long, solemn face, half sleepy half dreamy, and the shotes had long, solemn faces, half stupid, half—if not dreamy, as if they were scouting around for corn.

"Hogs air powerful cunnin' creturs," Mrs. Gober continued, "en I do b'leve thet thar hog thar, old Marthy Ann," poin ting to the tallest, most slab-sided of the swine, and the mother of the others, "knows jest ez well when you sot out fur thet thar still, ez I do. She's the peartest critter I knows."

"Not peart nuff fur thet," said Sebe, briefly.

"Well I heard tell ez how thet thar revenue chep, Bill Jones, followed Suge Mullins clar over the mountains to his still, jes by the pig tracks, whar they tracked arter him fur the corn. Hogs is powerful peri critters, en so is thet thar revenue chep, Bill Jones."

"I haint afeard o' him," said Sebe, as he finished loading his gun; "I'll settle his bacon with ole Mary Jane har," holding up his weapon, "ef he fools with me. This is a free kaintry, en I'll still if I choose ter."

After making this declaration of independence he shambled off with Mary Jane; and the hogs, headed by Marthy Ann, followed him.

Mrs. Gober also believed it to be a free "kintry," but she shook her head as she watched the shambling party go down the path which led toward the mountain still.

"'Tis powerful hard," she muttered, "that the revenue men will meddle with honest folks that mines their own beeness."

As Sebe went down the rocky path he picked up stones from time to time and pelted Marthy Ann and her family with them.

"Git from har!" cried he, and shambled on secure in the company of Mary Jane.

He continued the pelting process at stated intervals, till, as he was about to climb the mountain, the shower became so fierce that Marthy Ann and her children took refuge behind a great bowlder, from whence they watched Sebe out of their slanting eyes till he disappeared; then they struck upon his track and cautiously followed like so many dogs.

Soon a man rose up from behind a large rock and followed them.

Sebe shambled up the mountain path at great speed; it was invisible to all but mountaineers; in and out it wound, now

"GIT FROM HAR!" HE CRIED.

along a precipitous ledge, now across a mountain stream, now around a great shelving cliff. Behind this Sebe dived and went on some distance, till he reached a secluded spot, a sort of hollow hedged in on all sides by dense forest growth and girdled with masses of rock. At the bottom of the hollow was a small stream. The place was a paradise for moonshiners, and Sebe had taken possession and set up his rude still.

He now glanced around with a pleased smile.

"Hit'll take a powerful peart chep ter fine me har," he thought, as he rested Mary Jane against the white trunk of a beech tree and started to work.

Soon the still was bubbling and boiling and, leaning himself against a tall poplar as though he meant to brace it up, Sebe looked around—at the deep dell; at the white smoke as it went up and was lost to sight in the treetops, like an estray cloud going back home.

The sunlight shone on the grass all spangled with dew; it threw a golden tint on the tender green of the poplar, and lit up the deeper verdure of a hickory.

All was still, till a squirrel ran up an oak tree to sample the acorns for his winter store. Then a red bird flamed into the poplar, and, sitting there like a gorgeous flower, sang over and over his short, sweet song, his wild-wood matin, while a band of rowdy, chattering jay birds fought from limb to limb of the hickory.

Sebe saw them as if he saw them not, as his dreamy eyes followed the runaway smoke.

"Where's the harm o' stillin' whisky?" he mused. "Looker yander's smoke thet's gone skyward, haint thet whisky turned to smoke en gone ter jine the clouds? The very rain gits his dram! Corn is turned into whisky, so the whisky must be in the corn. En the ro'sen ears thet we eat, what's they but whisky in the mash, so ter say, afore the sun hez bed er chance fer ter ripen hit fit fer mountain dew? Same way, what's er corn patch but er chunk o' whisky.

"The very shotes thet eat the mash takes liquor in their blood, en in our bread en meat we eat whisky. Now et taint no harm ter eat hit, whar's the harm ter drink hit? En ef taint no harm ter drink hit, whar's the harm ter make hit? 'Pears like hit's all in a muddle."

He roused himself from his reverie, and from a barrel under a rude sort of shed he drew a drink, in a small gourd, and sipped it.

"Hit's good," said the moonshiner, "hit is. Hit's the reverend mountain dew—doubled at thet! Hit's hard ter beat!"

He glanced down at the wet grass.

"All natur takes hit's drink er dew, en so must we critters too."

He took a sip.

"'Tain't no use er talkin', hit's good, hit is!"

He stood there ruminating with the gourd in his hand, gazing at the still, and as he gazed the liquor went to his head.

"Whar's the harm er makin' hit? All creation loves hit. See thet thar red bird er singin' ter his mate; he's perched whar the smoke er the still goes right over him, en he drinks hit in. How loud he sings! His heart is plum full ter bustin' uv his love!"

He took a sip.

"See them thar jays; they've hed a whiff; how they skip en all but laugh. All creation loves whisky—all creation's full uv hit!

"What's corn but whisky—bottled up. We plent corn, en we plent whisky—hit sprouts up, en hit's whisky bustin' from the yearth. When hit grows, hit's whisky—whisky in the blades, green en wavin', whisky in the yaller tassel, topplin' in the wind, for the wind ter drink hit; whisky in the silk, now yaller, now brown, a-ripenin' in the sun—turned brown when he's sucked all the whisky out."

He took a sip.

"Whisky in the heaps all piled up in the corncrib, efter the corn shuckin's over, en the supper eat, en the dencin' done; en the gals all gone home; after the game is played, en the kissin's over—kissin' almost ez sweet ez whisky."

He took another sip; the sun shone brighter; the birds sang louder, and the still boiled faster.

"Ef hit's quiled up in the corn, whar's the harm er gittin' hit out?"

Marthy Ann and her shambling family came running down the hollow. The moonshiner sipped his gourd and went on with his reverie.

"This is a free kaintry, fur which my father fit en bled, en I's a free man ter do ez I please. En thet ole rev'nue feller better be lookin' out, er I'll give him er taste er Mary Jane; the ole gal ain't ter be fooled with, ner me neither. No, I haint—"

"I arrest you for illicit distilling," said a voice.

The gourd fell from his hand; the mountain dew fed the grass and wild flowers. Sebe turned to face a pistol muzzle, and back of it Bill Jones.

He started back, but Mary Jane was out of his reach.

"None of that," said his captor. "Hold up your hands or I'll shoot."

Before Sebe knew he was handcuffed. Like in a hideous dream he saw the still smashed, the mash overturned, then the precious double distilled came gurgling out of the barrel to wet the grass.

Still as in a dream, he was spirited across the mountain to catch the train for Atlanta.

"Hit mout be a free kaintry," he mused in a dazed fashion, as the train sped along; "hit mout be a free kaintry—but 'pears like I'm a prisoner."—Paul Grant, in Atlanta Constitution.

A TOAST TO CAMPERS.

Adirondack Murray's Rhapsody on the Pleasures of Camp Life.

There is no other word in the vocabulary of our language or suggestive of rare and pleasant conditions of living as camping. It is more than a mere word; it is a symbol as well. It stands for a class of experiences so fresh, novel and healthy that it is beloved by imagination and memory alike. It is so truly a mirror to many of us that in it, as in a glass, we see trees, the shores of lovely lakes, the banks of quietly-flowing rivers, wooded islands around which the waves run crossingly, beaches of gleaming sand, and ranges of lofty mountains. In it, also, are cabins of bark, camp fires that crackle and blaze and flare red lights high up amid swaying branches and widely out in a great circle through the dark forest. And in the word are faces and forms that have been companions with us in our forest wanderings, some of whom are with us to this day, and other ones that are not now with us, nor will they ever be again on this earth, and, alas! we know not where they are.

Not only is it a word for the eye, but it is equally a word for the ear. For in it are the sighing of zephyrs, the soft intoning of slow-moving night winds, the roaring of strong gales, the moaning of tempests and the sobbings of storms amid the wet trees. The loon's call, the splash of leaping fish, the panther's cry, the pitiful summons of the lost hound, the slashing of deer wading among the lily pads, and the soft dripping of odorous gums falling gently on the pine stems, listening to which in silence and sweet content, we, who were lying under the fragrant trees, like happy and weary children, have fallen gently asleep—all these sounds live in the word as music lives forever in the air of heaven, being a part of it.

And in it, too, are human voices, songs, laughter and all the happy noises of merriment and frolic. No other phonograph is like to it. The happy hunter's proud hurrah over the captured game; the songs around the camp fire under the stars in the hush of evening; the stranger's hail, the guide's strong call to breakfast, a heavenly sound—the flute's soft note across the water on a still night; the cheer on reaching camp, and the murmured farewells at leaving; verily, it is a vocal word, and all the sounds that come from it are melody.

Dear word, sweet word, keep vocal to my ears until they cease to hear and mirror to my eyes until they see no more the fair, the sweet, and the honest faces that out of the dear old camp, that we have builded in so many parts for so many years, now look forth upon me as of out many heavens. For if there be a better heaven than a well-placed camp with a wisely assorted company of honest and cheerful folk, I know not how to find it in my imagination nor that passage of revelation that tells of it.

To all that camp on shores of lakes, on breezy points, on banks of rivers, by sandy beaches, on slopes of mountains, and under green trees anywhere, I, an old camper, a wood lover, an aboriginal veneered with civilization, send greeting. I thank God for the multitude of you; for the strength and beauty of you; for the healthiness of your tastes and the naturalness of your natures. I eat and drink with you; I hunt and fish with you; I boat and bathe with you; and with you by day and night enjoy the gifts of the good world. Kneeling on the deck of my yacht, stooping far over and reaching low down to fill to the brim the old camping cup that, longer than the lives of some of you, has never failed my lips, and holding it high in the bright sunlight, I swing it to the circle of the horizon, and standing, bareheaded, with the strong wind in my face, I drink to your health, oh, campers, whoever and wherever ye be. Here's health to you all and long life on the earth and something very like camping ever after.—Springfield Republican.

An Awkward Compliment.

Homesick.

—J. C. Rickey, of Milton, Ore., invited a minister to dine with him on a recent Sunday. For the feast he killed a Shanghai fowl and gave it to his wife to make ready. She found the following articles in its craw: A kingbolt, a link of a log-chain, a piece of steel four inches long and a clevis.

—Pretty Daughter—"Ma, may I go boating?" Fond Mother—"Indeed you shan't. The idea! Who invited you?" Daughter—"Mr. Bliffers." Fond Mother—"Oh! Yes, you may go with Mr. Bliffers. He has a cork leg, and if the boat upsets just you hang onto that."—Good News.

—Prison Missionary—"I am trying to make your lot more comfortable, but I find it very difficult to raise money." Counterfeiter—"That's easy enough, pard. Bring me a ten, an' I'll raise it to a hundred in a jiffy."—N. Y. Weekly.

—Fogg—"I enjoyed the foot-ball game very much, but I don't see why that young fellow let the rest of them kick him all over the field." Miss Fogg—"I guess that's why they call him an 'all round athlete.'"—America.

WAR IN THE FUTURE.

Railroads Will Play an Unprecedentedly Important Part.

In future wars railways, the number of which in Europe is daily increasing, will play an unprecedentedly important part, not only strategically, but also tactically. For mobilization and concentration at the outset of war their value was shown in 1870; with armies of increased size they will be still more essential. After the commencement of operations they will still occasionally—especially in the case of the army which assumes the defensive—be used for the rapid conveyance of troops, but as a rule they will chiefly be employed for the transport of food and stores. It has been calculated that an army of a hundred thousand men working a hundred miles from its base would require—setting aside the requirements of sieges—an immense quantity of rolling stock.

As to the movements of troops by rail, experience on the Continent shows that time is not gained when the proportion of bayonets and sabers to a mile of double line is greater than four hundred and thirty-five. Apart, therefore, from the fact that once the army in the field, the railroad resources will be absorbed in bringing up stores and taking back sick and wounded, the railway transport of troops will seldom be profitable for an army on the offensive. The strain on the railways needed for the conveyance of food and stores will be largely argumented, seeing that in all probability the size of armies will be much increased. The limit to their size will, in fact, be practically determined by the carrying capacity of the railways.

Hence, two things are obvious: First, that for strategical operations railways will, after the commencement of a campaign, be used comparatively little; second, that even if only employed for the transportation of stores, their capacity will have to be largely increased by the addition of sidings, the construction of platforms, and the doubling of lines. For this reason all armies are daily paying increased attention to the formation, augmentation, and training of military battalions, we, perhaps, least of all.

For operations which lie in the border land between tactics and strategy, occasional use with great effect will probably be made of railways for the conveyance of troops for short distances. Had Bazaine turned his railway facilities to full account at Forbach, the result of that battle might have been different. It can easily be understood that, though there would be no saving of time in transporting an army corps, with all its impedimenta, a distance of thirty miles by railway, it would be feasible and desirable to convey a brigade of four battalions, with a field battery attached, a distance of fifteen miles.

In the former case 185 trains would be required, and the operation, under the most favorable circumstances, would occupy four days. In the latter case the troops, moving with nothing but men, officers, chargers, and what the French call a train de combat, the whole force could be transported to its destination in two hours from the time the first man entered to the time the last man quitted the train. As to armor-clad trains, they will on exceptional occasions be used and be of great value, as was shown in the case of Sir Archibald Allison's operations at Alexandria in the first Egyptian war.—Colonel Knollys, in Fortnightly Review.

A LOST ELEPHANT.

Great Search to Recover the Missing Monster Empress.

"You wouldn't think that an elephant could get lost in the United States, would you?" asked Agent McCadden of the Forepaugh show.

"Well, one did go astray," he continued, "and we had mighty hard work to find it. Adam Forepaugh had a habit of letting out his surplus animals to smaller shows, and when he died his executors had a queer time tracing up his assets and making good the delivery of animals to the firm to which he sold the show.

"After considerable trouble all the animals were accounted for but one trick elephant named Empress, of whom the executors could get no trace. I received a letter from them one day with a special commission to hunt up the missing animal.

"Empress was worth $2,000 at a low estimate, and was really of much more value to a show which understood well how to exhibit her and make use of her tricks. After a careful search through the contracts it was ascertained that Empress had been let to a small show which started on a Western tour. With this clew I traced the show through the West and back toward the East until it reached a spot in the wilds of West Virginia.

"There it seemed suddenly to sink out of sight, and I was at a loss to know whether the animals were roaming over the hills and mountains, or drowned in the Ohio river.

"Investigation revealed, however, that the undulating country had been too much for the show. The horses had become exhausted by climbing steep hills, fording streams, and dragging heavy wagons over soft roads. The proprietor was unable to keep up with his advertised dates, and his revenue being cut off, the show busted.

"Then it was found by inquiry in the sparse settlements that Empress had been driven to the Ohio river and shipped up stream to Pittsburgh. The elephant consumed about $10 worth of food daily, and she was rapidly making her temporary keeper poorer. But at Pittsburgh he pulled together all his resources and established a low-priced entertainment at East Liberty, where the big beast was made to do good service. There she was recently found, gaunt and lean. She will soon be turned over to Mr. Forepaugh's successors, who will see that her voracious appetite is appeased."—Philadelphia News.

—It is one of the inexplicable puzzles of English orthography that "conferree" should have two r's in the last two syllables while "referee" has only one. Noah Webster must have been oystering when he spelled the first.—Springfield Union.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

FOR A TORPID LIVER.

From a Lecture by J. H. Kellogg, M. D., Battle Creek Sanitarium.

The best diet for one with a torpid liver is composed of fruits, grains and milk, avoiding the use of meat entirely. In these the proper food elements will be furnished with no excess, but if beef is added there is of course a large amount of albumen to be disposed of as waste. If the liver and kidneys are thus continually overworked it will not be surprising if some of the uric acid is not changed into soluble urea, but instead is left to accumulate around the joints and set up gout. Fruits, grain and milk make a perfect diet for man in any condition or situation in life.

In addition to the matter of diet, a person with torpid liver needs to bathe frequently to keep the eliminative action of the skin perfect. Fomentations, massage and percussions over the liver are all good. Further than these, he should drink a great deal of water to assist the liver and kidneys in their task of carrying off the broken-down tissue and other waste from the system. Copious water drinking is a great deal better than burdock root or sulphur as a "blood purifier."

A Peep at the Secrets of Life.

One of the most interesting objects for examination under the microscope is Valisneria spiralis (the grass which grows in aquariums), when prepared to show cyclosis or circulation of the protoplasm. Prof. Lockwood, in the Microscope, says:

"I think that, to the amateur at least, a hint how to observe the circulation of this favorite plant to the best advantage must be acceptable. I have never seen it better displayed than when under the excellent manipulation of Mr. F. W. Devoe, of the New York Microscopical Society.

"Having selected a bit of leaf, not too mature, he shaves off one side with a sharp knife, although a razor is better. It is then put on a slide, the shaven side up. A drop or two of clean water and a cover glass of medium thickness, with good illumination, follows. Mr. Devoe using a prism illuminator. Begin the examination with a six-tenths inch objective, and continue up to a sixth or a tenth. The result will be a vision of startling clearness. The vivid individuality of each bioplasmic molecule, and the mystic, almost a solemn, movement of this pellucid stream of infinities of life, form a sensational picture of which the beholder never tires."

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC
The Best Remedy

In this world, says J. Hofherr of Syracuse, N. Y., is Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son who was partially paralyzed three years ago and attended by five M. D.'s, has not had the symptoms of them since he took one bottle of the remedy. I most heartily thank for it.

Nervous Prostration Cured.

CROGHAN, N. Y. June, 1889.

I was not able to do anything for 19 months, was confined to bed most of the time, couldn't eat nor sleep, was so nervous and dizzy that I could not walk from the house to the garden. I was all run down by what the doctors called nervous prostration. No medicine seemed to help me. Then I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic and now I can eat and sleep and have no more sinking spells, can do my housework again. I am very thankful for this and recommend the Tonic to all sufferers.

SUSIE VERSHNEIDER.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

BIRCHALL IN TEARS

He is Affected at Last by His Wife's Sadness.

GUARDING AGAINST SUICIDE.

Report Out that the Jail is Conducted in a Loose Manner.

The Hour of Execution Set for 9 O'Clock Friday—He Dances in His Cell Though Death is Near—Probability that His Remains Will be Embalmed and Taken to England.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 12.—It has been decided that Birchall shall be executed at 9 o'clock on Friday morning.

County Attorney Ball has written the Attorney-General urgently asking him not to allow Birchall's remains to be buried in the jail yard. Should the request be granted the body will be embalmed here and taken to England by Mrs. Birchall.

There seems to be a feeling in the public mind that Birchall will either escape or commit suicide before Friday. This is probably due to exaggerated reports about the loose manner in which the jail is conducted. There is little truth in any of them. Detective Murray is in town looking into the securities of the jail where Birchall is confined.

The jail is an old one, and if Birchall was left alone for only 10 minutes he could easily break out. But that is almost impossible, as he is constantly watched, day and night.

Mrs. Birchall's visits to her husband have been limited to two a week. Until this week she has had the privilege of seeing him whenever she wished. These visits are growing more affectionate every day and cause many sad scenes.

Last night for the first time since his imprisonment Birchall wept. But this was not on his own account. His wife's tears caused him to weep. They are not allowed to kiss each other or clasp hands, as the law of the land is that a condemned man shall not be alone for an instant with any one except the jail officials and his spiritual advisers. And so husband and wife are locked in together with the jailer. This is done so as to prevent the prisoner from receiving anything that he might use to cheat the gallows.

At noon Birchall listened attentively to the band of a minstrel company that was parading the streets. He enjoyed the music very much and danced around the cell to its tunes.

He is now engaged in the melancholy duty of preparing for death, writing his farewell letters to his mother, his relatives and friends.

CURING CONSUMPTION.

Dr. Koch's Wonderful Discovery to be Made Public Soon.

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—The report of the cure by Prof. Koch's treatment of a case of lupus on the face and arms within five days is confirmed by several authorities. The lymph throws off the bacillii by the necrotic process. In syphilitic afflictions inoculation with the lymph is ineffectual.

Several patients who have been treated for consumption by Dr. Koch have been dismissed as entirely cured, and within three weeks the method of treatment will be made public. The method, he says, is not exactly of the nature of inoculation, and he claims that it will cure tuberculosis skin disease speedily and certainly.

The Frankfort Zeitung says that the lymph used in inoculation for consumption will be so cheap as to be placed within reach of all. The price will be but 25 marks for a small phial.

Rebellion in Texas.

GRAHAM, Tex., Nov. 12.—Every peace officer in Young county is in jail, having been indicted by the United States Grand Jury for participation, either actively or passively, in the famous mob which assaulted the jail to hang three murderers. The trial of three members of the mob is going on. Twenty-five special United States Deputies guard the jail, but the town is full of determined citizens armed with Winchesters, who say the United States Court may convict but their neighbors shall not suffer the penalty. A riot will be precipitated by a conviction.

Eloped With a Schoolmaster.

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 12.—Miss Fannie E. Maine, the pretty 17-year-old daughter of Amasa Maine, a rich farmer, has eloped with Otis Chapman. For some time Cheapman, who taught the district school, had been paying his addresses to Miss Maine, but her father at last forbade him the house. By an arrangement with her lover Fannie left her father's home at night, joined Chapman, and together they fled to Westerly. It is understood that they have been married. Farmer Maine has started in pursuit of his daughter, but as yet has been unable to find her.

Prof. McAllister Resigns.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12.—Prof. James McAllister, superintendent of the public schools of this city, has tendered his resignation to the Board of Education to take effect at the close of the year. Mr. McAllister will become president of the educational institute founded by Mr Anthony Drexel.

In the House for Nine Years.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 12.—Mrs. Alice Parker, of Plainville, has not been out of her house for nine years. This seclusion is wholly from choice. She is very domestic in her tastes. During all this time she has done all the housework for a large family. Her health is good, and her husband considers her a jewel.

Caught by the Shaft and Killed.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Charles Murray, a coal miner in the employ of Shapley & Wells, got his clothing caught in the shafting and was drawn up to the ceiling. In falling his head struck a heavy casting, producing concussion of the brain. He was dead when picked up.

BREAK IN THE BROTHERHOOD.

The New York and Pittsburg Clubs Tender Their Resignations.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 12.—At last night's meeting of the Players' National League the Pittsburg and New York clubs formally presented their resignations, which were ordered to be held over for the 60 days required by the constitution before final acceptance.

An election was then held resulting in the choice of Charles A. Prince, of Boston, President; A. L. Johnson, of Cleveland, Vice-President, and F. H. Brunnell, of Chicago, Secretary and Treasurer.

After Messrs. Johnson, Prince and Ward were appointed as a conference or arbitration committee to settle disputes, etc., Cincinnati was admitted to membership in the League. Applications were also filed for the location of clubs in Buffalo, Washington, D. C., and Detroit.

It is reported that during the meeting the representatives of the Pittsburg and New York clubs were unmercifully berated for the weakness they have displayed. It is also stated that although Pittsburg and New York may have consolidated with the National League, they will be unable to deliver the goods, as it is believed that all of the players will stick to the Brotherhood.

TEN PERSONS KILLED.

Collision of Passenger Trains on the Great Western Railway in England.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—A collision occurred on the Great Western Railway at Norton, near Taunton, between a goods train and a special passenger train from Plymouth. Ten persons were killed and eight injured, four of whom will die.

One of the passengers who had been killed at the moment the trains came together, presented a ghastly spectacle, his head having been severed from his body as cleanly as though it had been done by the guillotine.

Almost immediately after the collision sparks from the engine furnaces communicated to the debris and the horrors of fire were added to the terrors of the catastrophe.

Before anything could be done toward rescuing them, six of the occupants of the first coach, who had escaped in the awful crash, were slowly burned to death in the presence of fellow human beings, who were powerless to release them from the flames, which gradually enveloped and slowly consumed their bodies.

The signalman whose carelessness caused the terrible accident admits his full culpability and will make no attempt to evade the penalty of his fatal neglect. This is the first serious accident on the Great Western since 1874.

A Chapter of Crime and Accidents.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12.—The past 24 hours has been a chapter of crime and accident in this city. How Wing, a Chinaman, was beaten to death by white highway robbers who escaped. Mrs. Frank Bishop, who arrived from Weymouth, Mass., on a visit, blew out the gas at the hotel where she was stopping and was asphyxiated. Louis Sagemuhl, who arrived a few days ago from Germany, went to bed intoxicated last night and was also asphyxiated. Thomas Williams, an iron worker, fell down an embankment to-day and broke his neck. Diphtheria continues to rage unabated, there having been 33 new cases and four deaths since yesterday morning.

The Suicide's Body Not Exhumed.

YONKERS, N. Y., Nov. 12.—The body of "George Smith," the Getty House suicide, which has been accepted and discarded by Perrin H. Sumner, the New York real estate speculator, as "James H. Edgar," was to have been exhumed for a second time, but Police Captain Mangin, after consulting with Coroner Mitchell, decided to let it rest for awhile. Several people, including women, have called upon the Captain, examined "George Smith's" photograph and other personal effects, but have failed to identify them.

Beneficial Organizations in Convention.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 12.—Fifty delegates representing thirty-five societies of the National Fraternal Congress, composed of beneficial organizations, have begun a two day's convention in this city. Over $20,000,000 were paid out last year in benefits by the organizations belonging to the congress. President Shields delivered his annual address, after which there was a brief business session. Reports of committees will be heard and the election of officers will take place. To-morrow evening a banquet will be given in honor of the delegates.

The Uprising Confirmed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—General Bais, of Guatemala, has received a cablegram confirming the news of an uprising in Honduras. The cablegram further states that President Bogran had retired to within two leagues of Tegucigalpa and was receiving the support of the rest of the Republic. Order and complete peace prevailed in the rest of the Central American States, all assuming a neutral position in the matter, which is looked as unimportant and purely local.

Seized for Alleged Smuggling.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Nov. 12.—The schooner Eastern Queen, of this port, has been seized at Souris, P. E. I., for alleged smuggling a year ago and fined $400.

NO FINANCIAL HELP

Buying Bonds Now Would Cramp the Treasury.

SECRETARY WINDOM CAUTIOUS.

To Believe the Money Market Would Out the Balance D wn too Close.

A Decision of Interest to Newspapers—Important Hearing To-Day at the Treasury Department—New York's Census Messenger Again—Senator Spooner's Friends Working for His Elevation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The panic in Wall street caused some apprehension in the Treasury Department and the situation was closely watched.

A few appeals were made to Secretary Windom to come to the relief of the market, but these appeals were not formidable and it is thought improbable that Secretary Windom will take any action other than that now open for the relief of the tightness of the money market.

Under the Treasury circular of October 9 last, 4½ per cent. bonds are redeemed upon presentation, and to-day $157,500 were bought under its provisions, making a total redeemed since October 9, of $4,601,550. This avenue of relief is open and will continue to be. It is not probable that the price will be raised or that 4 per cent. bonds will be purchased at the high rate demanded by bondholders.

To-day the available cash in the Treasury is a little less than $10,000,000, with about $23,000,000 in national banks and $15,000,000 fractional silver not available. To inaugurate a policy of buying bonds now would cramp the Treasury and cut the balance down uncomfortably close. From an authoritative source it is learned that this will not be done at present for two reasons: First, the uncertainty of the amount needed for pensions; second, it is to be ascertained by experience whether the tariff law may prevent importation in anticipation of its repeal.

These uncertainties make a new departure at this time dangerous, and from an authoritative source it can be stated that none will be made. The official statement is made that within the past four months $70,000,000 in excess of the receipts have been paid out of the Treasury—a sum greater in excess of receipts than was ever paid in an equal period in time of peace in the history of the Government. The aggregate amount paid out was over $164,000,000, of which $50,000,000 was for pensions.

GUESSING ALLOWED.

Attorney-General Miller Decides a Question of Interest to Newspapers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Attorney-General Miller has sent to the Postmaster-General an opinion, in answer to an inquiry by the Postoffice Department as to whether advertisements in newspapers of the "guessing contest," in its various phases, are in violation of the lottery law passed by Congress on September 19th last.

The case is based upon a clipping from the Cincinnati Enquirer offering money prizes to the person or persons sending first the correct number of votes, or guessing nearest the number of votes cast for the Democratic or Republican candidate for the office of Secretary of State of the State of Ohio.

After carefully construing the law, Attorney-General Miller decided that the case in question is not a violation of the lottery law as the offer is made in good faith. He is quite clear, he says, that estimates made upon the probable political action of the people in a pending election cannot be said to be dependent upon chance, within the meaning of the statute, and therefore the enterprise in question was no infraction of the lottery law.

Important Hearing To-Day.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—An important hearing will take place to-day before Secretary Windom at the Treasury Department. The question that will be discussed is whether goods sent by merchants from one American city to another by the Grand Trunk Railroad, which runs part of the way through Canada, shall be manifested and sealed in cars on the American or Canadian side. The merchants of the eastern seaports are anxious to have the cars sealed in this country.

Still Hunting Census Returns.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Supervisor Kenny, of New York, came here again to-day. He brought with him the resolution passed by the Board of Aldermen requesting the Superintendent of the Census Bureau to furnish the city authorities with the federal enumeration of the second ward.

Senator Spooner for the Supreme Bench.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—A dispatch rom Milwaukee says that the Wisconsin Bar Association has been called for next week to urge the President to appoint Senator Spooner to succeed Justice Miller.

GREETING TO STANLEY.

A Distinguished New York Audience; Crowds to Hear the Great Explorer.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Never in all its history of operas and receptions has the Metropolitan Opera House held such a brilliant and distinguished audience as that which assembled there last night to hear Henry M. Stanley's first lecture on "The Rescue of Emin." The great auditorium, with its tiers of galleries and its long rows of boxes, was filled with the most fashionable and distinguished men and women in New York.

On the stage were hundreds of men whose names are as familiar as household words.

Two great audiences faced each other and gazed at each other in mutual respect and admiration. That on the stage was distinguished and sombre in black and white, that in the auditorium was distinguished and brilliant as well.

And this audience was one that had paid well for the privilege of being there. They had paid nearly $15,000 for the chance to hear and honor the great hero.

Mr. Stanley was introduced by Mr. Chauncey M. Depew in a charming speech, and when the applause had ceased the explorer began his lecture. He did not refer in any way to the misfortunes of the rear column. He confined himself almost entirely to a description of the climate and foliage of the country, the pigmies and the peculiar actions of Emin Pasha, who cut his acquaintance after they emerged from the wilderness and about the the time Emin met with his fall from a balcony.

IN A BURNING VAT.

Two Workmen Narrowly Escape Death While at Work in a Brewery.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 12.—While Henry Guss and Edward Fischer were at work varnishing the interior of a large fermenting tub in the American brewery, they lighted a candle and took it into the tank.

Scarcely had they climbed down into the vat when the flame from the candle communicated to the inflammable varnish and in a moment the interior of the tank was a mass of flames.

The two men attempted to make their escape from the vat, but it proved a veritable prison. It was some time before they were rescued by their fellow-workmen. Guss was the most severely injured. Portions of his clothing were burned from his body, his hair was singed, and his face, hands, arms, back and legs were badly burned. His arms were so badly burned in places that the flesh dropped off. He closed his eyes and thus saved them. Fischer was severely burned, but he will recover. It is feared that Guss will die. He is 44 years old and unmarried. Fischer is a married man and has a family.

The Envoys May Not Visit Providence.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 12.—A dispatch has been received here from Mr. T. P. Gill saying that Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien cannot come to Providence tonight, but the committee insist upon the Irish delegates keeping their word as arrangements for a big meeting have been made and special trains have already been contracted for.

Letter Carriers Dismissed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Postoffice Inspectors Jacobs and Hartshorne recommended the dismissal of seven letter carriers for collusion with "green goods men." The inspectors found that the carriers, whom they have shadowed for some time, have been delivering the mail to these swindlers and received compensation therefor.

Gathering of Yale Alumni.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 12.—A gathering of the Yale Alumni was held here last night with addresses by President Dwight, Senator Dawes, and others. J. L. Shipley of this city was elected President of the Association; Dr. Souther, of Worcester, Secretary, and C. C. Spellman, of Springfield, Treasurer.

A League to Avenge Birchall's Death.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 12.—A man here tells a strange story, in which he claims to belong to a league formed to rob and kill English farm pupils in Canada. He says that Birchall is innocent, and that if he is executed the league will revenge itself on the judge and everybody connected with the execution.

The Smith-Godfrey Fight Postponed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Unexpectedly last evening the directors of the Puritan Club decided to postpone the boxing contest between Ed Smith, the Colorado champion, and George Godfrey, the colored pugilist, for several days, on account of the carpenters' work on the club house being incomplete.

Congress of Baptist Ministers.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 12.—The ninth annual meeting of the Baptist Congress of Ministers of the United States has opened here, about 200 delegates being present. General papers on the theme, "The proposed basis of Christian union," were read and a general discussion of the subject ensued.

A Prominent Citizen Missing.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Nov. 12.—Will C. Bull, aged 31, a prominent citizen, has been missing since Saturday. On that day he took a train for Troy, N. Y., but gave no notice of his departure. His family know of no cause for his absence and are greatly worried.

Ten Years for Burglary.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 12.—W. F. Addison McAndrews, convicted recently of burglary, was sentenced to 10 years in State prison.

HELPING THE BANKS

Wall Street's Semi-Panic Over for the Present.

ONLY THREE FIRMS SUSPEND.

The Clearing House Comes to the Rescue in Time.

Three Banks Pulled Through by Prompt Advances—Decker, Howell & Co.'s Liabilities Over $10,000,000—Wild Speculation Caused the Monetary Stringency. Millions Lost by the Panic Wave.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The stock market opened this morninh with an improved tone and it was believed that the flurry of the past two days is over—but millions have been lost by the panic wave.

The last hour of business on the exchange yesterday will be long remembered. There had been whispers all the day—in fact, they had first been heard on Monday night at the Windsor—that a certain big house was in trouble and was sure to go, but there was wild excitement when the announcement was made that "Henry Villard has gone to smash again." That was the cry when his brokers, the big firm of Decker, Howell & Co., announced its failure, and the stocks with which Villard has been identified were knocked into flinders.

A fall of a dozen points in Northern Pacific Railroad shares and in those of the North American Company, which has owned a controlling amount of the railroad's securities, was incidental to the failure and marked a decline of $30 and $40 per share respectively in those stocks from the prices at which they sold last spring.

Failed for $10,000,000.

The liabilities of Decker, Howell & Co. amount to about $10,000,000, but the firm claim that they will be offset by their assets. This sort of statement, however, is very common when failures occur. It transpired, however, that the firm had seriously involved the Bank of North America, which on Monday certified checks to the amount of some $900,000, which the firm failed to make good, and the bank in consequence had a heavy debit balance in the Clearing House in the morning.

The North America was not the only one in trouble. The North River and the Mechanics and Traders'—smaller institutions, having no connection with Wall street—were unable to supply the lawful money to make their balances good at the Clearing House. All these banks had ample resources, but could not obtain the actual cash.

Their balances were made good by other banks, and in the afternoon the association resolved to issue certificates to any Clearing House banks on deposit of good collateral. The amount to be issued is unlimited and they are to be used only in settling balances at the Clearing House. Thus no bank having resources can hereafter be put in difficulty by temporary inability to obtain lawful money.

The failure of the firm of C. M. Whitney & Co., a Stock Exchange house, and of Mr. David Richmond, of the Stock Exchange, were minor catastrophes of the day, as was also the suspension of Messrs. Narr & Friend, of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, whose liabilities are small. The failure of the silk importing house of John T. Walker, Son & Co. added to the general disquiet of the day in business and financial circles, and was also attributed to the general tightness of money and inability to obtain accommodation.

What Caused the Trouble.

Two causes are at the bottom of the monetary stringency. The exigencies of London, brought about by wild speculations in the Argentine Republic and pretty nearly every other part of the world; and also the great business activity of this country, which has drawn away money from eastern centers. The failure of Decker, Howell & Co. is also due to this situation, but it was directly brought about by the studied and relentless pursuit of a clique of bear operators who saw the weakness of their position and persistently sought their ruin.

Protestant Episcopal Congress.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12.—The session of the Protestant Episcopal Church Congress began this evening at Association Hall, a large crowd being in attendance. Addresses were delivered on "Grounds of Certitude in Philosophy and Religion," by a number of prominent clergymen from all parts of the country. Among those already here or expected later are J. Pierpont Morgan, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Rev. Phillip Brooks, Bishops Clark, Dudley, Kendrick, Thomas, Wingfield, Spalding, Sullivan, Leonard, Gilbert, and prominent rectors of the principal cities of the United States.

Lucy Parsons and Herr Most Speak.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—A large crowd assembled at Cooper Union last night to hear Lucy Parsons and Herr Most eulogize the anarchists who were hanged at Chicago on Nov. 11, 1887. The hall was decorated with red flags and pictures of the five dead anarchists were suspended on the stage. Mrs. Parsons' speech was mainly devoted to an attack upon the police. She eulogized the "martyrs" and asserted that anarchy was not dead. No necessity arose for the services of the 100 policemen present.

Canadian Officials in New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Mayor St. Leger, of Toronto, Canada, and a number of other officials of that city, visited police headquarters and were shown the workings of the department.

The Cape Cod Ship Canal.

BOSTON, Nov. 12.—President Seward of the Cape Cod Ship Canal has filed a petition with the Secretary of the Commonwealth asking for an extension of charter and of the time for completing the canal.

POWDERLY'S ADDRESS.

He Talks to the Knights About the Tariff and the Central Strike.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 12.—Grand Master Workman Powderly read his annual address to the General Assembly. In his address, Mr. Powderly reminded the delegates that on the 28th of December the organization will have been in existence 21 years.

"For years, during this time," Mr. Powderly said, "the most important of a series of questions that has agitated the people of all nations is that of tariff and free trade.

"We have not as an order adopted a tariff or anti-tariff clause in our preamble, and I do not advise such a thing now. We should, however, throw open the doors of our assemblies for the discussion of this great problem so that our members may become educated in the basic principles of protection and free trade. My recommendation is that on and after the first day of January, 1891, it shall be permissible for local assemblies to discuss the question of high tariff and free trade. By putting the question in this shape, which will bring the greatest good to the greatest number, high tariff or free trade, we do not commit the order to either school, and yet allow our members to take up for discussion and agitation that vital question."

The Grand Master then went into a lengthy review of the Central strike, giving all the correspondence that passed between himself and Master Workman Lee, of Albany, and stating his reasons for recommending that the strike be inaugurated.

Continuing, he said: "During the Central strike we had an opportunity to learn who our friends were among the newspapers, and found they were exceedingly few. We were given quantities of counsel, warning and censure. Many of the papers that were friendly to us did not seem to understand the situation or the necessities of men who work for low wages."

In conclusion, Mr. Powderly strongly advocated the passage of a law securing to both sexes equal rights. He favored the acceptance of the invitation from the Farmers' Alliance to send delegates to their next convention, and the co-operation of the Knights of Labor with the various railroad organizations in the work of federation.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—The second team of the Elizabeth Athletic Club—composed of A. G. Meyer, Squier, S. C. Moore, Bauer, Price, Pepin, Davis, Downes, Fleming and Lenher—will bowl against the Fanwoods at Fanwood to-night.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the New Market Baptist church will hold a sociable at the residence of Miss Jennie Blackford, Nov. 20. The committee in charge announce that it will be a "cobweb" party.

—A little Plainfield negro Republican last week shot a fourteen-year-old white Democrat for purely political reasons. There is the making of a high-class practical politician in that young negro, but his ideas are a little previous as applied to this section, and he does not have a proper conception of the color line.—New Brunswick Home News.

—We will know, this coming Winter, something of the blessings of telford roads. Just think of riding, at all seasons and in all weather, over smooth roads, where once there were quagmires, sloughs and swale of mud hub deep. And think of the hard, frozen, lumpy, almost impassable roads we used to have, and the smooth surfaces we have now. The county roads will undoubtedly pay; they are paying already.—Elizabeth Journal.

—The New York Sporting Times, after Nov. 22, will, no doubt, be the leading sporting journal of America. The publishers have decided to enlarge it to a 16-page paper, the size of Harper's or Frank Leslie's, thus making it the largest 5-cent sporting journal published in America. It is the intention of the publishers to make it the most valuable sporting paper issued, and the following departments will be edited by the most experienced writers: Baseball, Athletics, Football, Boxing, Bicycling; in fact, the paper will cover all out-and indoor sports. The subscription price is only $2 a year, and valuable premiums are given away free with each subscription.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

M. Marvin Dunham was re-elected President of the Union County Sunday School Association at the eleventh annual Convention held yesterday at Roselle.

John F. Evans, the Republican nominee for Councilman from the Fourth Ward, is one of the many foremen of the departments at the Potter Press Works, and is known as a "gang boss."

The wedding of Miss Nettie Lee French, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore French, to Edward Howell, is announced to take place at the First Baptist church, Tuesday, Nov. 25, at twelve o'clock noon.

Miss Alice Holmes and Mr. Venino played Mozart's Sonata in D, last evening, at the Melopoia rehearsal, which was held in the music room of Lawrence Myers's home on East Front street. Mrs. J. K. Myers was the hostess.

Their Grand Warden from Plainfield.

The annual convention of the American Legion of Honor of the State of New Jersey was held at Elizabeth yesterday. Forty out of fifty-one councils were represented. The membership of the order in the State was reported to be 4,100. The following officers were elected: Grand Commander—R. S. Tilden, Jersey City; Grand Vice Commander—Dr. C. A. Church, Passaic; Grand Orator—S. M. Long, East Orange; Grand Secretary—J. B. Clinton, Passaic; Treasurer, C. H. Dummer, Jersey City; Grand Chaplain—Joseph F. Vittaly, Newark; Grand Guide—Frank L. Shipman, Newark; Grand Warden—H. G. Hummer, Plainfield; Grand Sentry—William L. Pierson, Newark. A banquet was given the delegates last night, covers being laid for 160. It was presided over by ex-Alderman A. B. Knapp, and speeches were delivered by Judge Fort of Newark, Grand Commander Tilden, Supreme Representative Miller of New York, and others.

To-Night Mr. Carney Will Make a Few Remarks.

The G. A. R. fair opened at Amphion Hall last evening, and will continue five nights. The opening entertainment was excellent, and included a vocal selection by Comrade Wm. C. Smith, entitled "The Camp Kettle," which was loudly applauded, and to which as an encore Mr. Smith sang "Brave Boys Are They!", a recitation "The Veteran's Daughter," by Tryphena Mattox, and a recitation by Robert Mattox, "Barbara Frietchie," which was given with beautiful tableaux. Dancing followed, and continued from ten to twelve o'clock.

To-night the following features will be given: Recitation, "The Vagabonds," by J. Edwin Hall; piano solo, by Mrs. N. E. Buckly; recitation by the child elocutionist, Jessie Hall; solo, "Old Camp Kettle," by W. C. Smith; "A Few Remarks," by John H. Carney, and a selection, with tableaux, by E. Southard, entitled "North and South."

The Revival in Mr. Cleaver's Church.

In the "First Church of Christ," last Sunday, twenty of the scholars arose and confessed to Superintendent Lunger their conversion. In the evening five persons went forward and give Mr. Cleaver their hands and Christ their hearts. The meetings of this church, in Vanderbeek's Hall, are held every evening.

MANY NEW CONVERTS EVERY DAY.

The Mills Meetings Drawing to a Close, but the Work of the Great Revival Still Increasing.

The revival services now being conducted in this city by the Rev. B. Fay Mills will be brought to a close next Monday night, when Mr. Mills will deliver his last sermon in Plainfield in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The results of these wonderful meetings thus far are already known to readers of THE PRESS. The entire city has been aroused by the marvelous manifestations which have been given of God's holy presence. The conversion of individuals has brought entire families to Christ, and the gracious work still continues manifold.

The celebration of yesterday as a mid-week Sabbath, the giving up of the day to God, and the unison of the entire people in religious devotions throughout the day, will long be cherished in glorious memory. The closing of the business houses brought a Sabbath peace upon the busiest thoroughfares. The week-day traffic and confusion vanished. Everybody joined in giving up the day to Divine purposes.

The sermon preached by Mr. Mills yesterday afternoon reached many hearts. His exposition of the text "We stumble at noonday as in the night" [Isaiah LIX: 10] was clear and forcible. A considerable proportion of his hearers—who thronged the church almost to overflowing—were already professing Christians. Of these a large percentage testified by rising, in response to his inquiry, that they had entered the church life before they had reached their twentieth year. A much lesser number, 115 in all, said that they had become Christians between the ages of twenty and thirty, and only fourteen were able to acknowledge that they had found Christ late in life, between the ages of thirty and fifty. From this the preacher drew a most instructive lesson, showing the necessity of remembering the Creator in the days of one's youth, before the noonday of life had been reached, and portraying graphically the truth of the text, that at the noonday of life one stumbled even as though it were night.

In the evening another vast assemblage gathered to listen to the Gospel message of the evangelist, and again was the sinner urged, in inspired eloquence, to forsake his ways. The deep religious fervor that has taken possession of the people at all these meetings was again made manifest, and after most powerful discourse and sublimest song Mr. Mills put to his hearers the potent question: "Who will surrender to-night their souls to God?"

The inquiry meetings held in the chapel at the close of both afternoon and evening services were well attended, and many gave their hearts to God and confessed for the first time publicly Christ as their Saviour. The sight of these noble young people and awakened old ones starting out on the Christian pilgrimage was indeed a welcome one to the eyes of the believers who were gathered with them, and the sincerest spirit of consecration prevailed among all.

The subject for the prayer meeting to be held at 59 North avenue to-morrow morning will be "How can a man become acquainted with God?"—Jeremiah XXIX: 13. The leader will be C. W. McCutchen. All men will be heartily welcome. The hour is from 7:30 to 8:20.

In the afternoon, at 2:45 o'clock, a prayer meeting for women, on the same topic, will be held in the lecture room of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

At 3:30, just after the women's prayer meeting, Mr. Mills will preach to all classes of people, in the body of the church.

At 7:45 in the evening he will preach again to all classes, and Mr. Greenwood and his large choir will sing.

The meeting for men only, to be held in the Crescent Avenue church to-night, will, it is anticipated, be one of the most glorious public services Plainfield has ever known. While the great church full of men are learning of the beauty and usefulness of the Christian life the women of Plainfield will be gathered in the Congregational church praying that the men may find the lightsome of them have been groping for so long.

Business Houses Close Early on Account of Revival Meetings.

A large number of business places, on account of the revival services, will be closed every night this week, except Saturday, and also Monday night of next week, at 6:30 o'clock. Among these who have agreed to close are the following: Geo. W. Rockfellow, R. O. Howell, Barkalew & Dunn, R. W. Rice & Co., J. Hervey Doane, T. J. Carey, Estelle, Taylor & Neuman, Andrew Love, J. S. Cutter, W. L. Gavett & Co., Caleb Dickinson, Thompson Park, A. Vanderbeek, Vanderbeek & Sattells, Geo. H. Fairchild, A. M. Griffen, J. C. Pierson, Jr., J. J. Heideloff, J. P. Laire, Alex. Thorn, Howard A. Pope, S. C. Peck, Jr., Chas. F. Denckiau, R. Radford, Mrs. E. Stephenson, the Misses A. L. and M. D. Gorsline, J. A. Smith, Asa Collier, G. Q. Packer, P. M. Demarest, J. F. MacDonald, Martin Bros., James M. Dunn, Mrs. J. C. Dyer, Seely Edsall, Powlison & Jones and The Dairy.

—Mizpah Lodge, I. O. O. L., will hold a fair in Amphion Hall the first week in December.

REPUBLICAN COUNCILMEN NOMINATED.

See in the First—Gunn in the Second—Ennis in the Fourth.

PLAINFIELD'S POOR EXPRESS SERVICE.

More Work for the United States Company than the Employes Can Attend to.

The following dispatch of interest to Plainfielders appeared in the New York Times this morning, dated from this city:

"Ever since the Adams Express Company and Tom Platt's United States Express Company began the conflict of extermination last Spring, residents along the line of the New Jersey Central Railway have been anxiously awaiting the result. Up to the time Austin Corbin obtained control of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway the Adams Express Company controlled the business in this part of New Jersey, and the service was prompt, cheap, and excellent. But Austin Corbin froze out the Adams Company. In consequence, the Adams Express Company was forced to close its Plainfield office. The people here heard the decision with sincere regret. It was all the more surprising because business had never been better and the line had never been more popular.

"With the field left exclusively to itself, the United States Company began to illustrate how wretched a service could be made. Orders were persistently disregarded, overcharges and extortionate charges became of daily, of hourly, occurrence, goods were not delivered for several days after their arrival here, and it was not uncommon to have parcels that were once left at residences conveyed back to the office because the manifests failed to accompany them, efficient clerks were dismissed and incompetent persons took their places, and the service became so execrable that many persons concluded to have their goods shipped as freight rather than risk them by Platt's express.

"In the meantime, it is the common remark that if Platt would bestow some time upon remedying the imperfections of the system of his express company in this part of New Jersey and less upon New York State politics his company would be put in a position where it would pay better dividends and its employes more satisfactory wages."

Why the Bar Rooms Will Be Closed To-Night.

Mrs. Wm. Taylor, of East Fifth street, and the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, visited the hotels and saloons of the city this afternoon to ask that the bar rooms be closed to-night on account of the Mills meeting for men.

J. B. Miller & Bro. promised surely to close, whether any others did or not, and Messrs. Beerbower, Blimm, Bock, Caspar, Connecly, Force, Rafferty, Schorb and Thorn said that if all the others would close they would. It is therefore hoped and expected that every bar room in the city will be closed to-night.

Mrs. Taylor and Mr. Goodrich speak in the highest terms of the courtesy and fair treatment they received from the above-mentioned men at their interview.

—The woman's devotional service will be led this afternoon by a member of the Crescent Avenue church; to-morrow by a Park Avenue member, and Friday by a member of the Methodist church.

Congress of Salvationists.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—A few days inter-State Congress of the Salvation Army is being held at the Association Hall. Representatives from all parts of the Union are present. Commander Booth announced that over a million persons had attended the indoor meetings of the Army in this country during October.

Gov. Campbell Slightly Better.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 12.—Gov. Campbell is reported to be slightly better, but is still unable to leave his bed. It is probable that as a result of his recent illness he will grant a further reprieve to Elmer Sharkey who was to have been executed to-morrow night.

Manager of the Morganza Reform School.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 12.—The Governor appointed Alexander Pentacost of Allegheny City Manager of the Pennsylvania Reform School at Morganza, in place of Senator-elect John N. Neeb, resigned.

Violated the Revenue Law.

RONDOUT, N. Y., Nov. 12.—J. T. Burns, a former saloon keeper, was arrested and taken to New York by United States Marshall Cooper, charged with violation of the revenue law in not taking out a Government license.

Pardon Refused to a Murderer.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 12.—The application of Wm. H. Smith, the Allegheny County murderer, was refused by the Board of Pardons. The one of Charles Hannon, Allegheny County, murder, was continued.

Jack Dempsey Signs for a Fight.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 12.—Jack Dempsey the Nonpareil, telegraphs from Portland, Org., that he has signed the articles of agreement for a fight with Bob Fitzsimmons, the Australian, before the New Orleans Athletic club for a purse of $12,000.

Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Nov. 12.—The Woman Suffrage bill was defeated in the House by a vote of 98 to 113. The Senate killed the bill reducing the number of Supreme Court judges from seven to six.

Woman's Work.

There is no end to the tasks which daily confront the good housewife. To be a successful housekeeper, the first requisite is good health. How can a woman contend against the trials and worries of housekeeping if she be suffering from ailments and weaknesses peculiar to her sex? Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a specific for these disorders. The only remedy, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case, or money refunded. See printed guarantee on bottle wrapper.

BEWILDERED THE TICKET MAN.

A Commuter Enjoys Revenge at the Ferry Gate by Making Himself Amusingly Numerous.

Plainfield commuters and others who travel daily over the Central Railroad of New Jersey are considerably amused at the story of an incident which recently occurred in the ferry house at New York.

Men in a hurry to catch the boat are often annoyed by the failure of the ticket examiner to remember their faces, no matter how constantly they have traveled over the road, and by his insisting that they produce their bits of pasteboard. One of these was making his way, with a friend, toward the ferry waiting room, when he commented on the fact.

"It is a singular thing"—he remarked—"how long it takes the average man to get accustomed to faces that he is seeing constantly. That fellow at the gate makes me show my commutation ticket every time I come through, though he sees me every day. I never have any trouble with the train conductor, but that's because he is a man of unusual intelligence. I have met many conductors who would make you show your ticket at every station, and would never get to know you, even if you rode with them twice a day. That's the kind of a man that fellow at the gate is. It's awfully provoking, when you're running for a boat, to have to stop, unbutton your overcoat, and get your ticket out of your inside coat pocket."

As the two walked about, waiting for the boat, an idea struck the man who had been talking.

"It would be interesting"—said he—"to see how many times a fellow could walk through that gate without being recognized. Suppose we try it?"

"All right"—said his friend—"You go along, and I'll stand here and watch."

The commuter went out through the wagon gateway into the street. He returned through the passenger gate, and had to show his ticket. He tried again, with the same result. He tried several times more, and still the obdurate gateman failed to recognize him. There were few people going through at that time, and it was singular that his continued reappearance was not noticed. Persistence did, however, have an effect at last. On the sixth trip through the gateway the gatekeeper stared at him in a rather bewildered manner. On the seventh trip the gatekeeper swore gently to himself, and demanded to see the name on the commuter's ticket. The commuter permitted him to see it, and on reaching the waiting room said to his friend, "He has found out my name. Lend me your ticket."

On the eighth trip through the gateway he showed his friend's ticket. The gatekeeper swore loudly as he approached.

"I've got you"—said he.—"You can't make game of me. Let me see the name on that ticket."

The commuter assumed an air of indignation, but complied.

"Well, I'm beat"—exclaimed the gateman, as he read the ticket. And he scratched his head in perplexity.

"What do you mean by addressing such harsh remarks to me?"—asked the commuter.

"Well, I'll tell you, stranger;"—said the gateman in an apologetic tone—"you're the most numerous man I ever ran across. Chaps looking just like you have been passing through this gateway in a regular stream for the last fifteen minutes, an' I began to think it was some fellow making game of me. But I guess it must be something the matter with my eyes, for I see by your ticket that you're not the fellow I was layin' for."

MISSIONARY FATHERS AT ST. MARY'S.

A Class of Fifty Converts Preparing for Communion, and Others Professing Penitence.

A successful mission work is being done among the Roman Catholics of Plainfield by a band of Missionary Fathers who came to this city two weeks ago. These Fathers are members of a church fraternity whose duties take them to all parts of the country. All last week they held services for women in St. Mary's church, and their labors brought many gratifying results. This week services are being held for men. At the first men's meeting Sunday night fully 500 were present. The number at each preceding and subsequent meeting has also been large, and a great many have been deeply moved and have expressed conversion. Yesterday besides the devotional exercises a confessional was held, and services to prepare penitents for communion were begun. A class of fifty people are preparing for their first communion and confirmation, and others are taking a course of instruction to become members of the Catholic church. Last night Father McDonald, one of the Missionaries, preached an eloquent sermon. Services for men will continue all this week.

"If You Want to Know the Time, Ask a Policeman."

The New York World says of "Aunt Jack," that is to be played at Music Hall, Saturday evening: "The third act, * * * in which the judge, jury, and whole court join the chorus, is one of the jolliest scenes witnessed on the stage in a long time."

The agreeable pleasantness in taking Hires' Cough Cure overcomes all thoughts of medicine. At the same time it is the most effectual and harmless remedy ever discovered for coughs, colds, hoarseness, croup, and whooping-cough. You want to remember this!

PAY MORE FOR YOUR PHOTOGRAPHS.

The New Tariff Burden Doubles the Cost of Picture Paper.

The Plainfield Camera Club, and such Plainfield people as have thought old photographic prices high enough, may well be concerned in knowing that the McKinley Tariff bill increases the duty on photographic albumen paper from 15 to 35 per cent. The consequence of this rise is to increase the price of albumen paper very largely, and to an extent that will take fully $100,000 annually from the pockets of photographers throughout the country.

When it was proposed by the framers of the McKinley Tariff bill to increase the duty to 35 per cent., thousands of petitions were sent by photographers from all parts of the country to their representatives in Congress, and as a result the duty was fixed in the bill and passed by the House at 25 per cent. It also passed the Senate at the same rate. The conference committee, however, which is generally supposed merely to adjust the differences between the bills as passed by the two houses, quietly increased the rate of duty to 35 per cent. In the conference report, and it was rushed through without being noticed at the last moment at this rate, and the bill was signed by the President with the rate advanced to 35 per cent.; and now the consumers must, as quietly as they can, bear the burden imposed by those who are supposed to represent their best interests in Congress.

Under the former tariff bill albumen paper was originally assessed at 25 per cent. as "paper not otherwise specified," but the E. & H. T. Anthony Company promptly brought suit against the Government to have the duty reduced to 15 per cent. on the ground that photographic albumen paper was a manufacture of paper, and entitled to entry at that rate accordingly. The case was tried in the United States Courts and decided in the company's and the people's favor, and only 15 per cent. duty has been paid up to the enforcement of the McKinley bill The appraisers have frequently stated that the duty should be 25 per cent., notwithstanding the decision of the United States Court on the subject, and it has been threatened to appeal the case to the United States Supreme Court, but this has never been done. It is presumed that it is on this account that the statement appeared in a comparative report to Congress showing the difference between the rates of duty under the act of 1883 and the proposed rates under the McKinley act, in which report albumen paper was stated to be subject to a duty of 25 per cent., whereas, as a matter of fact, only 15 per cent. had been collected since the decision of the courts above referred to.

The increase of 20 per cent. in duty, is, in the view of Plainfield's professional and amateur photographers, and in the view of photographers and their patrons all over the country, an absolutely unnecessary burden to photographers. While, however, the tariff has been increased 20 per cent., the price of albumen paper has been increased in less proportion, as the importers have preferred to share the burden with the consumers in the hope that a new Tariff bill would eventually be enacted which would remove this unnecessary burden.

A Clerk Wants His Employer's Sincerity Tested.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Never perhaps in the history of Plainfield have the religious workers engaged in such a crusade as that which distinguishes the present week. Both Protestants and Catholics with all the vigor and zeal of their respective bodies are carrying on the work of Christ, seeking the conversion of men.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, has attracted great congregations by virtue of his oratorical power of persuasion and his astute aggressiveness. Rarely have religious revivals swayed such an influence as to cause men engaged in mercantile pursuits to suspend their business, even for the period of an hour. Men who on the occasion of the death of a parent or a friend would refuse to pay that respect to close up during the melancholy interval, are now induced by Mr. Mills's co-workers to do so for the purpose of prayer and the cause of Christ. These men who preach and profess, who observe the distinguished evangelist's request, are very slow to accept the precepts taught by the Divine Master, or to put into every day practice the sterling principle of the brotherhood of man. Men who in all sincerity closed up their places of business yesterday, at other times forget their duty. We pass by their places every night long after the day's work is done. They are brilliantly lighted, the pale-faced clerk is still at work, contributing labor that necessity alone forces, treading the mill that is grinding out his life, prostituting his talents and his manhood for his employer's gain. He is without a thought of these things—the popular fervor that has taken possession of the public mind, augurs in his favor an increased patronage. The poor pay, the unjust number of hours each day, give him no uneasiness, Is it sincerity? And what is its quality? That is a question the evangelist has a right to test.

A CLERK.

—Governor Abbett yesterday appointed as members of the State Board to canvass Congressional election returns on Nov. 24, Senators Wyckoff of Warren, Newell of Salem, Smith of Sussex, Leaming of Cape May, Martin of Essex, and Rue of Mercer.

ENGLISH TRAMP TYPES.

Decadence of the "shallow Blokes" Who Were Once Numerous.

There used to be a type of tramp that is rarely met with now. I mean the "shallow bloke," commonly known as a "dry-land sailor." Not that "dry-land sailors" are not to be found even now, but it is rare indeed that one of the real old-fashioned sort is met with.

To "run shallow" means to go about the country half naked. A genuine "shallow bloke" knows not the luxury of a shirt, he scorned to incase his feet in boots, always preferring to "pad the hoof," i. e., go bare-footed. Frequently these "shallow blokes" traveled in "schools," that is, in companies of four, five and six, and wherever they went they made the streets hideous with their unearthly howling of nautical ditties, in which the refrain, "and the stormy winds did blow—ow—ow!" was always conspicuous.

These men were anatomical curiosities. One would be minus an arm, another would lack a leg, a third would exhibit a withered limb done up in tight bandages. Scarcely one of them would be found physically perfect. They would stretch in a line across the street, the two extreme men pushing their hats in the face of every passerby, and sundry curses, sometimes loud as well as deep, followed the "uncharitable" pedestrians, while all the blessings of Heaven were invoked on the head of the "kind gentleman" who dropped a copper in the obtrusive chapeau.

These "shallow blokes" were a terror to the ordinary tramps. They were noted as being the greatest blackguards traveling. Their blasphemous talk was simply hideous, and shocked even old and well-seasoned tramps. Happily they are now nearly an extinct race. It is a fact, though not generally known, that some of these vagabonds mutilated themselves for the purpose of working upon the feelings of a charitable public. One of the most common methods of "acquiring" a withered limb was to bind it tightly with strips of linen and thus stop the circulation of the blood. Loathsome-looking wounds were manufactured by inserting in these bandages an old copper coin, which gradually ate into the flesh.

A somewhat pleasant contrast to these itinerants were the "lurkers," more intelligibly described as "begging-letter gentlemen," a class of men not unknown at the present day. They would carry a neat little roll of pictures, two or three gentlemen's combs in a little satchel, or any other light and fancy article, just to "take the granny off;" in other words, for the sake of appearance.

Their object was not to sell these articles, but to beg "over them." They usually had a plausible tale to tell of better days, they could produce letters from this gentleman and from that clergyman. They did not go in for coppers, but silver and gold. It is no unusual thing for one of these to receive from a sympathetic old gentleman or credulous old lady a "half a thick 'un" or a "thick 'un" (half-sovereign or sovereign). Clothes they used to get in plenty, and they were always well dressed, for which reason they were often dubbed "flash blokes" in the common lodging-house. Some of these men had really seen better days. I have known broken-down university-men, occasionally an officer of the army or navy, and these men made no end of money by visiting old, retired officers of the services.—Gentleman's Magazine.

HE WAS CONSERVATIVE.

Why the Lank Individual Professed Not to Be Sure of Any Thing.

"Fine day."

This was the remark addressed by the man who was waiting for a street-car to the lank individual leaning against a lamp-post.

"Um—so-so," replied the lank party, after taking a leisurely survey of the sky.

"If the wind keeps blowing in this direction for twenty-four hours longer there will be rain," ventured the first speaker.

"Um—I'm not so sure about that," said the other, cautiously.

"The wind, at least, is dead south now."

"Um—perhaps."

"It certainly isn't north."

The lean individual pursed up his lips as if about to whistle, looked at the sky again, shook his head slowly, and said:

"I'm not so blamed certain it isn't."

"At any rate, sir, it isn't raining now, is it? Hey?"

Another careful examination of the firmament and the cautious remark:

"It may be raining and it may not. You can't always tell about these things."

"Great Jehoshaphat! Can't you see there isn't a cloud in the sky?"

"Um—likely enough. Likely enough. It may appear that way to some folks. But it's best not to be too sure."

"May appear that way? Why, good gracious, man! Haven't you got any eyes?"

"May be I have and may be I haven't," retorted the attenuated individual, passing his hand over his face as if to find out. "All I know is that there's nothing certain in this world. You think there's a fair-ground out at the end of this street, perhaps?"

"I certainly do."

"Just so. I was certain of it yesterday myself. I was certain there was a man out there with two or three walnut shells he was moving about on the head of a barrel. I was certain I could tell which shell the little black ball was under. I was just as certain of it as you are that it isn't raining. It cost me every darned cent I had to find out that I didn't know any thing about it. I am not going to be sure of any thing again as long as I live."

He took a plug of tobacco from his pocket, looked at it as if he was not sure whether it was tobacco or not, put it back in his pocket, sighed a long, heavy, dismal sigh, and looked straight through the other man into the far-off depths of space.—Chicago Tribune.

—Belle—"I shall never marry Mr. Loose. When I do marry, I shall marry a sound man." Mother—"What is the matter with Mr. Loose?" Belle—"He's cracked."—Yankee Blade.

ALL DRESS ALIKE.

Annamite Men and Women Distinguishable Only By Ear-Rings.

In Annam, an empire occupying the eastern portion of the Indo-Chinese peninsula, with a population of 15,000,000, men and women wear their hair in the same way and dress almost alike. Like the man, the woman wears the turban, a long tunic, wide loose trousers, and a bright sash, the ends falling below the knees. The physiognomy is almost the same, as the men are beardless and have their hair done up like the women. The only clew to distinguish them is the ear-rings and finger-rings worn by women only. The ear-rings are like double shirt studs, and among the lower orders are of colored glass. The wives and daughters of mandarins alone are allowed to wear good jewelry. The rings are of spiral wire, fitting tight, and standing out to some height. Some women of the upper class wear also necklaces of strings of gold and silver beads.

The hat of the woman is monumental. It is like a large barrel cover, three-quarters of a yard in diameter. Six or seven silk cords as thick as a quill are fastened on each side, and when worn fall down below the waist. Where the ends are fastened to the hat on each side is a huge black or brown silk tassel. Some of these hats are artistically made of carefully selected palm leaves, and lined with neatly plaited flag leaves. These are expensive, especially when they have chiseled silver clasps at the tassels. Many women fasten a little round mirror in the hat, before which they arrange their turban when they go to town. The hat is the article most prized by the stylish ladies, and often costs $10 to $15.

The Annamites either go barefooted or wear a sandal, consisting of a sole and two straps, often lined with stuff. The straps are crossed between the big toe and the next. In putting on the sandal the big toe is used so much that it becomes like a finger. As these sandals are loose at the heels they cause an awkward gait and have been abandoned by the better classes, who wear Chinese shoes or slippers, but the fine ladies wear these very narrow and short.

The Annamites have splendid hair. It is not rare to see women with hair reaching their feet. They take great care of it, washing it frequently with some soapy mixture, and sitting in the sun to let it dry. The men have little beard, and even that appears only at a much greater age than with us, and is never full. This makes it very hard to tell a man's age. The women are small but well proportioned, with small hands and feet. Their faces would be charming if they did not stain their teeth black. Children are charming until they become seven or eight years old. Then the nose flattens, the cheek bones become prominent, and the eyes assume the inclination seen in adults.

The attire of children is not expensive. In summer they run about the streets naked, or at most with a little skirt not reaching the knee. All have a coin, or amulet, around the neck to keep off evil spirits and disease. The hair is cut close, except a tuft on the top of the head or a lock at each temple —Frank G. Carpenter.

WHERE STYLES ORIGINATE.

The Real Dress Designers Are Very Often Obscure Artists.

"Do you know how the great modistes get their new ideas?" said a prominent buyer recently in a talk about gowns. "No? Well, let me tell you that not one-half of the charming creations attributed to Worth, Redfern and all the rest of them have ever been designed by those famous fashion leaders. What they do is to buy the ideas of obscure women who have no chance to introduce them as their own. This is how it is done: Some small dress maker or milliner who has no money or fashionable trade tries to eke out a living in an out-of-the-way locality in Paris, perhaps. She has artistic ideas.

"In fancy she sees some exquisite creation of silk and lace that would grace the beauty of a Cleopatra, but the queen of hearts does not come her way, and how from her humble store shall she bring into being that vision of her mind? It may be a new design for a hat that comes to her, but how shall she offer it to the world? What grande dame will give an order to the poor little worker in a back street? Without money, without a great name among fashionable folk, without customers for such fine things, what can she do? This she can do—she can sell her artistic dreams to some one who is able to introduce them as styles.

"Forth with she sets out to call upon Mme. ——, we will say, whose reputation is, as you know, wonderful. The unknown artist explains her ideas to the famous modiste; perhaps she shows some little model of her design, contrived with the poor bits she could muster. 'A good idea,' muses madame. 'How beautiful that would look on the Princess, and in golden crepe how like a dream would any lovely blonde appear! Oh, yes; that is a good idea.' Madame accepts the design, chooses the material of which it shall be made, the color, etc., and gives her order for the costume, or whatever it may be. When it is made it is brought to Mme. ——'s establishment, where it is displayed as one of her new 'creations.' The real artist is paid perhaps three times the value of the making, and must be content with that. The house that brings it out will probably send a copy of the design to every other store of consequence in the world, and may make a fortune out of this one style.

"Women rave over Worth's dresses as if all that comes from his place was better than any thing else. They pay extravagant prices for his 'ideas,' but what they often get is the creation of some unknown artist whom they would never condescend to notice. As for Worth himself, he has hardly been inside his establishment for fifteen years. This I know to be a fact, for I am well acquainted with all of those artists and know just how they manage these things. Pingat, I must say, is an exception to the rule. He works hard, and is himself a practical designer."—Chicago Tribune.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

The Pierson Hardware Co.

Are at the apex of the heap,
In the line of Stoves and Ranges—
All because they are good and cheap.

Now if you have got a beau,
And contemplate a plan
Of furnishing your kitchen—
PIERSON is the man.

Their Tinware and their Hardware,
Housefurnishing Goods and Lamps,
Makes one feel as if they would like to have
A pocket full of stamps.

So call and see, and you'll agree
That what we now relate
Is not at all a fable,
But wise to contemplate.

And when into your kitchen
You by chance do look around
And see the many useful things
That at PIERSON'S you have found,

You will then unto your friends relate
That story, old and true—
That to step into their store
Is to purchase more and more,
Until you find you got the earth and
cannot get no more.

AT THE TURN OF THE ROAD.

The glory has passed from the goldenrod's plume,
The purple-hued asters still linger in bloom;
The birch is bright yellow, the sumach's are red,
The maples like torches aflame overhead.

But what if the joy of the summer is past,
And winter's wild herald is blowing his blast?
For me dull November is sweeter than May,
For my Love is its sunshine—she meets me today!

Will she come? Will the ring-dove return to her nest?
Will the needle swing back from the east or the west?
At the stroke of the hour she will be at her gate;
A friend may prove laggard—love never comes late.

Do I see her afar in the distance? Not yet
Too early! Too early! She could not forget!
When I cross the old bridge where the brook overflowed,
She will flash full in sight at the turn of the road.

I pass the low wall where the ivy entwines;
I tread the brown pathway that leads through the pines;
I haste by the bowider that lies in the field,
Where her promise at parting was lovingly sealed.

Will she come by the hillside or round through the wood?
Will she wear her brown dress or her mantle and hood?
The minute draws near—but her watch may go wrong;
My heart will be asking: What keeps her so long?

Why doubt for a moment? More shame if I do!
Why question? Why tremble? Are angels more true?
She would come to the lover who calls her his own
Though she trod in the track of a whirling cyclone!

—I crossed the old bridge ere the minute had passed.
I looked: lo! my Love stood before me at last.
Her eyes, how they sparkled, her cheeks, how they glowed,
As we met face to face, at the turn of the road!

—Oliver Wendell Holmes, in "Over the Teacups," Atlantic Monthly.

A QUEER DUEL.

A Black and Brown Spider Fight to the Death.

A big window in the southeast corner of the old warehouse at the head of Lake Keuka, in Hammondsport, is covered as with a curtain by spider webs. The warehouse was built sixty years ago, when Hammondsport was the great grain shipping point for Western New York, says a correspondent in the N. Y. Sun. The grain business ceased to be the mainstay of this region long since, and this old building was put to other uses. For many years the southeast corner has been but little disturbed, and generation after generation of spiders have spun their webs and hatched and bred their young on the dust-covered window. Spiders of many kinds, with as many different architectural plans for their gossamer dwelling-places make their homes on the casing and sashes and panes of the old window. There are spiders with big oval bodies and legs an inch long. There are spiders scarcely bigger than a mustard seed, busy as bees darting up and down and here and there on invisible supports, like moats floating in a sunbeam. There are spiders with bodies as round as a cherry and almost as big. Brown spiders, black spiders, gray spiders festoon with their webs this unused corner of the old warehouse on the lake, and wax fat on the flies and bugs that seek the dangerous seclusion of that dusty and musty nook.

The panes of this window are the small squares of the old days. One of the big oval-bodied, grayish-brown spiders had his web spread over the entire surface of one pane of glass and over all but one small corner of another. In that corner a plump, black spider, not more than one-quarter the size of the brown spider, had his modest but effective trap. The other day the big spider evidently concluded that he needed more room for his web, and he coolly began preparation to extend it over the corner occupied by the unostentatious black spider. He ran out a cable that passed across one edge of the black spider's web and fastened it to the edge of the sash between that pane and the next one. This cable was quickly followed by another, and a third one was strung before the little black spider seemed to wake up to what was going on. Then he came out of his corner and gave the big spider's audacious work a quick inspection. That having evidently satisfied him of the intention of the big trespasser, he nipped the three cables apart, one after another, and left them dangling uselessly in the air.

The big spider ran out while the little black one was undoing his work, and for a moment seemed paralyzed with amazement. The little spider, having destroyed the cables, retired to the seclusion of his corner and resumed his watch for flies. The big fellow recovered from his surprise and immediately threw another cable across the little one's web. Out came the little fellow with a rush and snapped that cable asunder. Four times after that the big spider strung a cable, and each time the little spider cut it down. Then the big one started with another line. The little one, evidently furious at the persistency of the other in trespassing upon his premises, threw himself on the big spider. There was a lively struggle between the two spiders for a second or two, and then the big one broke away and retreated to his den in the extreme upper corner of his web, where he remained quiet, but evidently uneasy. The little black fellow tore about in his corner as if in a towering rage, and while his fury was at its height another spider, with a long, ugly-looking head and a small body, came gliding down on a single thread from a pane above the little black one's corner. This spider joined the raging black one, and by and by the latter cooled down. The two spiders remained together in apparent confidential intercourse for a few seconds, and then the spider with the big head darted out upon the brown spider's web and followed it to the big fellow's den. There he lingered for a moment, evidently discussing the matter with the big brown spider, and then he darted off again in another direction and brought up in a web on the pane above the big spider's, where another spider hung listlessly, wrapped up in his long, hairy legs. When the big-headed spider entered the hairy spider's web the latter unwrapped himself and greeted his visitor cordially. A short confab took place between the two, and then the hairy spider dropped quickly down to the big brown spider's den and the spider with the big head returned hurriedly to the little black spider's corner.

The sequel proved that the big-headed spider had, beyond all question of doubt, arranged a duel between the little black spider and the big brown one, he being the second of the former, the hairy spider having consented to be the big brown fellow's next friend in the affair.

A few seconds after the big-headed spider had returned to the black spider's corner the two glided out, reached the big brown spider's web, advanced almost to the center of it, and stopped. The brown spider and his hairy attendant soon afterward emerged from the former's den and advanced toward the center of the web, stopping within an inch or so of the black spider and his second. Other members of the spider colony must have had intuitive knowledge of what was going on, for spiders of all sizes and shapes came speeding to the scene to get a view of what was evidently to be a fierce encounter. When the two principal spiders had taken their positions their respective attendants retired some distance from them. Then the little black spider and his big brown foe rushed together.

They struggled a moment, separated, rushed together again, and tumbled and tossed one another about until the web on which they fought swayed and bent and broke here and there into ragged holes. All the while the hairy spider and the spider with the big head hovered frantically each about his principal as if coaching the fighters as to the best advantage. The spectator spiders showed no little excitement themselves, and ran to and fro along the edge of the sash around the pane as the fight progressed. When the battle was at its height one round-bodied black spider of the same species with the little black one in the fight, probably fearing for the safety of his prototype, made a rush into the field to take a hand in the fight. Before he reached the contestants, however, he was collared by both the hairy spider and the big-headed spider, and hustled back into the crowd so quick that he seemed dazed, and remained perched on the edge of the sash until the fight was over without as much as moving a leg.

While this exciting side incident was engaging the attention of the seconds, the principals separated, each retreating a couple of inches. The attendant spiders rushed each to his principal's side and for several seconds things remained quiet. Then the pugnacious little black spider moved slowly forward, and the big fellow advanced to meet him. When they were nearly together the little spider shot forward like a flash, pounced upon the big one, and almost as quickly darted back again. That was a fatal blow to the big spider. In that sudden dash the little spider had chopped off one of the big one's long forelegs close to his body as neatly as he had cut the cables of his foe's intruding web. The loss of his leg greatly disabled the big spider, and the little fellow was able to fight all around him, to the visible distress of the brown spider's hairy second. The black spider darted at his big antagonist with the rapidity of lightning, and it was not long before he had severed the other foreleg of the big spider as completely as he had the first one. The brown was now almost totally helpless. By a quick flank movement the little black mounted the other's huge body, and closed his jaws firmly in the back of his neck. The big spider floundered and struggled, but all to no purpose. His life blood was fast being drained by his agile foe, and in a minute after the black spider had got his clutch on the brown one's neck the big fellow hung shrivelled and lifeless in the wreck of the web he had tried to enlarge at the expense of his bold and nervy little neighbor.

But the little black spider was not satisfied with the death of the encroaching spider and the ruin to his web. When he found his foe was dead he made a circuit of the outer edge of the web, cutting every stay cable and guy web from its fastenings, until the limp body of its late occupant and the dismantled web fell together on the window ledge, among a mass of dead and shrivelled flies and beetles' wings and heaps of dusty cast-off webs. Then the victorious little black, escorted by both the big-headed and the hairy spiders, returned to his nest in the corner. The spider spectators scampered back to their respective homes, and in a few seconds the great spider colony had resumed all its wonted quiet.

Result of a Conversation.

The Boston Evening Gazette tells a pleasant story about the son of a very prominent man. When he was a student at Harvard he took a trip West on one of his vacations. He was greatly interested in railroad affairs, and happened to fall into conversation with an elderly man who also seemed to know a little about this subject. On the way to Chicago they talked about railroads a good deal, and the young man acquitted himself very creditably. His new friend had introduced himself simply as Mr. Smith, let us say. Mr. Smith and the young college man exchanged personal cards before the trip was ended. Shortly before he was graduated the young man received a flattering offer from a big railroad company, through its president, the same Mr. Smith, call him again. That was several years ago. That young man to-day is a rising railroad man, who has already climbed many rounds of the railroad ladder.

A Couple of Tame Wasps.

A New Haven man has a couple of tame wasps. They have built a nest in his parlor, and live undisturbed and undisturbing. This is the third season the insects have occupied the same quarters.

UNREQUITED CHIVALRY.

How One Chicago Man Came to the Conclusion That He Was a Chump.

THE cable-car gave a sudden jerk forward, and a woman's hat flew off her head and fell overboard.

"Stop the car!" shouted a man on the rear seat, as he jumped off at the risk of his neck, "and I'll go back and get that hat."

He ran back, picked it up, and brushed the dirt from it. The woman was a perfect stranger to him, but what of that? She was a woman! Her helplessness appealed to every sentiment of manhood, every consideration of self-respect, every impulse of chivalry and generosity that dwelt in his bosom. He would have been ashamed of himself if he had sat quietly in his seat while the car sped on and the wind blew through the bangs of somebody's wife, mother, or sister, sitting bareheaded in a crowd of unfeeling strangers! Filled with these reflecttions he turned to retrace his steps.

The car had not stopped. It was nearly one hundred yards away, and the gripman was pushing the lever down hard and taking a tighter grip on the cable. The woman was standing up and looking back at him. She was smiling—smiling audibly.

"Never mind," she said with a peal of silvery laughter.

The car sped on, but she put her hand to her mouth like a trumpet and screamed:

"It's only an old thirty-five-cent hat. I'm on my way to buy a new one. Throw it away!"

He didn't throw it away. He took a scrap of paper from his pocket, wrote on it in big letters: "Picked Up by the Biggest Fool in Chicago," pinned it on the crown, hung the hat on a lamp-post, climbed on the next street-car that came along, and rode down-town in silence, the maddest man in an area of one hundred and seventy-four square miles.—Chicago Tribune.

Economical.

"I think we'll make our own soap hereafter," remarked Mrs. Snodgrass.

"Where will you get your lye?" asked her husband.

"From you!" and Snodgrass, who had just been explaining his late return the night before, glued his eyes to the morning paper.—West Shore.

A Brute.

He (looking dreamily into his cup)—What's this? A miracle?

She (indignantly)—Why, no! That's coffee, and good coffee, too!

He—Well, isn't that a miracle?—West Shore.

A YOUNG FINANCIER.

Tommy—How much will you charge me for a bicycle this afternoon, Mr. Wheeler?

Proprietor—Fifty cents for the first hour; twenty-five cents an hour after that.

Tommy—Well, if I come around here an hour later, can I have one for a quarter?—Light.

He Wanted to Try.

"Oh, Mr. Dolbey," said Freddy, "won't you please stand right here a minute on the rug."

"Certainly, Freddy," replied Dolbey, much amused; "but why do you want me to stand there?"

"Oh, sister Amy said you were ugly enough to stop a clock, and I wanted to see you do it."—Old Homestead.

Don't Blame Him.

"Oh, dear! dear!"

"What's the matter?"

"Why, just as I looked at that man a gnat flew into my eye, and I had to wink."

"Well?"

"Well, he winked, too."—West Shore

No Prospect of It.

"No," said the man, "I can't give nuthin'. Charity begins to hum, you know."

"It will be a long time before your charity is lively enough to hum," replied the collector.—West Shore.

THE man who declaims against railroads and says they ought to be wiped out, makes the biggest kind of a fuss when his train is five minutes late.

SEVERELY STEPPED ON.

Uncle Mose Was Too Old to Understand the Ways of Railroads.

WE were waiting for the train at a station in Alabama, and among the crowd were an old, gray-headed negro and his son, the latter a boy of fifteen. They were sitting on the cotton bales, when the old man got down and began walking up the track.

"What you gwine ter do?" demanded the boy.

"Gwine ter see de cahs, Moses."

"Wall, you git right off'n dat railrode afore you was busted all ter squash. You hain't used ter railrodes, ole man."

"I reckon I knowa."

"I reckon you doan't. You hain't nebber seed a railrode but once in all your life. Come off."

"Doan' you be afeared of your fadder, Moses," replied the old man, as he walked up towards the street crossing.

He stood with his back to the village, and five or six loose mules, driven by a man on horseback, came down the sandy road without noise. They could have passed to the right or left of him, but they didn't. They ran right over him, and the last one had scarcely passed on when the son and a dozen others of us were on the spot.

"Didn't I dun tole you, ole man!" shouted Moses, as he helped him up.

"Did de railrode cum in?"

"Of co'se."

"An' hit me in de back?"

"Sartin."

"An' step all ober me an' smell of mewl?"

"Dat's it, fadder."

"Wall, Moses, if you'll help tote your fadder up ter Aunt Judy's he'll stay right dar 'till de co'n is dun ground an' you is ready ter go home. I'ze got too ole to understand dese yere railrodes, an' when I'ze been run ober once dat's plenty fur me. Be keerful ob dat arm, Moses; dat's whar de railrodes stepped on me wid his hind hoof!"—Detroit Free Press.

REFRESHING CHEER.

Smiggins—Hey, Jones, you haven't returned that umbrella. I loaned it to you a week ago!

Jones—I know, but it's been raining ever since.—Munsey's Weekly.

What Caused Him to Reform.

At a temperance meeting one of other workers read a story entitled, "The Little Shoes Did It." It was about a man who had been reclaimed from the vice of intemperance by seeing the saloon-keeper's little child come into the saloon, holding out her feet for the father to look at her fine new shoes. It made the drunkard think of his own barefooted children at home, impoverished in order that the saloon-keeper's child might be well shod, and he quit drink from that moment.

At the conclusion of the recital a shabby, dissipated-looking man in the back of the hall began to sob.

"Ah," said the reader from the platform, to the sobbing man, "you have been there yourself."

The weeping man, with his face buried in his hands, nodded assent.

"And have you reformed?"

Another vigorous nod.

"Then it was the little shoes of the saloon-keeper's little girl that did it?"

"No," he replied, sadly, "it was the saloon-keeper's little boot. He kicked me out!"—Texas Siftings.

THE DRESS IS FINISHED, SO AM I."

A gorgeous costume flashed beneath the brilliant lights of a ball-room; "a queen of society is radiant to-night."

The nervous hands of a weak woman have toiled day and night, the weary frame and aching head have known no rest—for "the dress must be finished in time."

To that queen of society and her dressmaker we would say a word. One, through hot-house culture, luxury, and excitement, and the other, through the toil of necessity, may some day find their ailments a common cause. The Vegetable Compound will enable both to meet the demands of society. Send stamp for "Guide to Health," a beautiful illustrated book.

Birchall's Final Interview With His Wife.

TOUCHING SCENE IN PRISON.

The Condemned Man Sends a Message to His Heart-Broken Mother.

A Groundless Rumor that He Committed Suicide—Preparing the Jail for To-morrow's Execution—Birchall Shows No Change of Heart—He Signs the Will Drawn Up by His Lawyer.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 13.—Birchall, it is said, has completely broken down and no longer wears his careless, indifferent smile. Rev. Mr. Wade is with him much of the time now, and is doing everything in his power to effect a change of heart, but so far without much encouragement.

Everything is being put in shape about the jail for the execution to-morrow. The prisoners are cleaning the yard and a general house-cleaning is now going on.

Dr. Rice, the jail surgeon, visited the prisoner to-day and found him in excellent health. The doctor states that the mental strain is making no impression on the constitution of the prisoner.

Interest in the Execution.

Interest in the case grows as the hour for his execution approaches. Representatives of American, Canadian and English newspapers are here by the score. Hundreds of applications have been received of those anxious to witness the hanging, but few of them have been granted. A strong force will guard the jail on Friday. No one is allowed to enter the prison except the Rev. Mr. Wade, Mrs. Birchall, or others the prisoner may express a desire to see.

He Makes His Will.

Last night Mr. Finkle, one of his lawyers, drew up a will which the condemned man signed. Turnkey Forbes and Mr. Leetham, Birchall's college friend, are appointed the executors, and all of his effects, including a legacy which he says is coming to him, are bequeathed to his wife. His watch, worth about $5, he has promised to George Perry, his day guard; but his wife has bought a magnificent gold watch for Turnkey Forbes.

Last Interview With His Wife.

Last night he had the final interview with his wife, and the parting was touching in the extreme. By the order of the Attorney General the interview was granted, and the devoted woman, who still believes in her husband, although almost all the world is against him, spent four hours with him.

They had a long talk on many subjects. The condemned man sent a message to his friends in England, to his heart-broken mother, his sorrowful sister and brother. Then followed one long lingering embrace and look, and Mrs. Birchall was led out of the cell and dark stairway to look upon her husband no more in this life.

She was driven to her hotel, where she passed the night in hysterics.

The groundless rumor that Mr. and Mrs. Birchall had committed suicide got extensive circulation last night.

"JACK THE KISSER."

He is Annoying the Young Ladies of Danbury, Conn.

DANBURY, Conn., Nov. 13.—"Jack the Kisser" has made his appearance in this city and the police, big brothers and sweethearts are after him with a vengeance. Many complaints have been received by the police during the past few days that a man has been annoying young ladies.

Last evening a young lady rushed into the police office nearly frightened to death. She said that she was on her way down town and noticed that she was being followed by a well-dressed young man who wore a high silk hat. The man dogged her four or five blocks, and, becoming frightened, she started to walk faster in order to reach Main street, where she would be certain to meet a policeman. Before she succeeded, however, the man overtook her and, seizing her around the waist, imprinted several kisses on her lips. She screamed, and breaking away from the man, ran to the police office.

The police are patrolling the streets in citizen's clothes, and "Jack the Kisser" will probably be caught. He has committed the same crime every night this week.

Speaks for Jay Gould.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Mr. W. B. Somerville of the Western Union, who is in the confidence of Mr. Jay Gould, said that Mr. Gould told him that he had never made the assertion that William and John D. Rockefeller were concerned with him in a scheme to secure control of the Union Pacific Railway Company, nor had Mr. Gould adversely criticized Mr. C. F. Adams' management of the property. All he had said was that any man taking a stroll through Wall street could hear that people were not satisfied with his (Adams) management of the road.

Shot Himself Through the Heart.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 13.—A special from Oberlin, Ohio, says that H. J. King, father of H. C. King, professor of mathematics in Oberlin College, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart. He was about 65 years old, and was formerly treasurer of Hillsdale Seminary, and in later years assistant treasurer of Oberlin. Despondency is said to be the cause of the rash act.

A Murder Trial Suddenly Ended.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 13.—The trial of John Pryor for the murder of Hugh Graham at Duryea last April came to a sudden end. James Griffith, one of the jurors, received a telegram announcing the death of his child. After a brief consultation defendant's attorney offered to plead guilty of manslaughter. The plea was accepted and Pryor was remanded for sentence.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

After Shooting a Young Widow Robert Kerr Blew His Brains Out.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 13.—A tragedy in Orange last night resulted in the fatal wounding of a woman by her lover and the death of the man, who shot himself.

For a number of years Max Knoble kept a small saloon on Canfield street, nearly opposite the City Building, in Orange. Some time ago he died and his widow has since carried on the business. She is a pale delicate woman about 30 years old, with a pleasant face and a cheerful manner.

Among the steady frequenters of the saloon was Robert Kerr, a good-looking young fellow about 35 years old. He was formerly in the employ of S. Scheuer & Co., the Orange grocers, and discharged because he was considered light witted. He told his Orange friends he was a single man, although he had a wife and two children living in Newark.

For some time past Kerr has been urging Mrs. Knoble to marry him, but she knew he was a married man. He was a good customer in the saloon and she did not want to lose his trade, and so coquetted with him.

The couple were in the saloon together last night, and at a quarter to 10 o'clock the people outside heard two pistol shots. Policeman Cooper of Orange went into the saloon and found Mrs. Knoble lying on the floor in a pool of blood. Raising her up he found that she had been shot in front of the left ear.

She was asked who shot her and gasped out, "Bob," and a moment later said, "He's shot himself."

A search of the block was made and Kerr was found dead. He had passed out of the saloon by a rear door, and going through an alley to an old woodshed near the rear of the lot he shot himself.

The woman wes taken to the Memorial Hospital in a dying condition.

THE K. OF L. ASSEMBLY.

A General Feeling that Powderly Will be Re-elected Grand Master.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 13.—The General Assembly of the Knights of Labor received congratulatory telegrams fromt he Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, the State Alliance of Georgia and from the National headquarters of the Alliance at Washington. A committee was appointed to send fraternal congratulations to the Patrons of Husbandry now in National convention at Atlanta, Ga., and to reply to the congratulations received.

The committee appointed to prepare the various proposed changes in the by-laws and constitution submitted their report, which will be taken up and discussed immediately.

There has as yet been no mention of names as candidate for the position of Grand Master Workman, and there is a universal feeling that this means that Mr. Powderly will be re-elected.

Death of a Prominent Doctor.

KENNETT, Pa., Nov. 13.—Dr. Richard J. Lewis died here during the morning of pneumonia at his residence, "Cedar Croft," the home of the late Bayard Taylor, after an illness of two days. He was born in Philadelphia in 1827. From 1877 to 1887 he was president of the board of trustees of Jefferson College. He also served as president of the Medical Society of the State of Pennsylvania and as president of the Phildelphia County Medical Society.

To be Tried for Conspiracy.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 13.—Great interest is sure to be taken in the trial of Richard D. Young of this place for conspiracy. Young concocted a scheme to obtain a divorce from his wife. Her friends exposed the plot and Young fled to California. Yesterday he returned to New York and was promptly arrested. Young was assisted in the conspiracy by his bookkeeper, Theodore W. Tovey, who is now under arrest. The Youngs moved in fashionable society here.

Terrorized by Wild Animals.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 13.—The woods between Connecticut and this State are full of wildcats, foxes and other savage beasts this fall. A large brown and white wildcat killed John Clark's coon dog in Sprague. A wildcat followed two boys home from school and would have attacked them had not a hunter come along. Henroosts along the border are suffering. Trapper George Pearce of South Killingly has killed 15 foxes since October 1.

Several Cars Jumped the Track.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Several cars of a freight train on the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad jumped a switch east of Schodack last evening. All the tracks were blocked for about four hours. No one was injured.

Stanley's Brooklyn Lecture.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Henry M. Stanley lectured in Brooklyn last night for the benefit of the Homeopathic Hospital. The lecture was similar to the one delivered in this city. Mrs. Stanley was present.

Disastrous Village Fire.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Fire started at 4 a. m. at the village of Hemlock Lake in a building owned by Robert Hoare and occupied by James B. Patterson as a store, and the postoffice. The Women's Christian Temperance Union building was burned with the furniture.

ONE BANK SUSPENDS

The North River Institution Forced to Go Under.

WALL STREET QUIETER TO-DAY.

Stocks Steadier and Stronger and Confidence is Restored.

Capitalists Believe that the Crisis Has Passed—Villard's Friends Confident that He is All Right—Two Unimportant Stock Houses Fail—The Bank of North America Relieved from Trouble.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Wall street continues to throb from the effect of the baptism of fire through which it has recently passed. Indications are not wanting, however, to show that the climax of the trying ordeal has been reached, while several important developments contribute to the partial restoration of confidence. Values in the stock market show a substantial rally, which is superinduced by the combined action of local capitalists and the more reassuring foreign advices.

The banking institutions have also been fortified by substantial assistance from the Clearing Association. While this aid is not embraced to any extent, the fact that it has been placed at the disposal of the needy seemed to clear the financial atmosphere. Bankers view the outlook more complacently, and although they acknowledge that many weak spots have yet to be weeded out, they intimate that the greater part of the gloom has at least been dispelled.

One black spot on the horizon loomed up after noon and this was the temporary suspension of the North River Bank. The embarrassment was precipitated by the action of a large depositor, who informed the State Bank Examiners that his check for $10,000 had been refused payment. How far-reaching the effect of the closing of the doors of the North River Bank may be can only be estimated when the resources of the institution are disclosed. It will take the Examiners at least 24 hours to reach a conclusion, but the concensus of opinion tends to show that no other bank will be involved.

Two more failures were added to the list of crippled stock brokerage houses, but they were not significant and did not disturb the better feeling that had apparently taken root in financial circles. The Bank of North America disentangled itself from the over-certification of the day previous.

Henry Villard's representative deny that the liquidation in the Northern Pacific groups of stock would interfere with any of Mr. Villard's plans, while the assignee of Deeker, Howell & Co. speak confidently of that firm's condition.

THE CRUISER MAINE.

Several Prominent Officials Will Witness the Launching on Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Secretary Tracy has returned to the city from New York, where he went to attend to some private business and to note the progress of the arrangements for the launching of the armored cruiser Maine, which is to take place next Tuesday.

A special train will leave this city Monday night over the Pennsylvania Railroad, carrying Secretary Tracy, Assistant Secretary Solely, Gen. Schofield, the chiefs of the Naval Bureau, a number of prominent naval officers, and many other officials connected with the Government and the naval attaches of foreign legations.

The oldest living ex-Secretary of the Navy, George Bancroft, the famous historian, will be represented by his son and granddaughter. Captain Pythian, superintendent of the Naval Academy, will also accompany the party with a few cadets, who will thus derive lasting benefit from witnessing the launching of the first armored cruiser ever built by the Government.

The launch takes place at noon on Tuesday, that being the hour of flood-tide at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The Washington party will start for home at 7 o'clock, stopping at Philadelphia for dinner and reaching the city at about 10:30.

Senator Pugh in Danger.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—A dispatch from Birmingham, Ala., states that the Alabama Legislature met at Montgomery and effected a temporary organization. A caucus will be held Friday night to nominate a United States Senator. The leading candidates are Senator Pugh, Governor Seay and R. A. Colb. The latter is the candidate of the Farmers' Alliance. The three men are equally strong, but it is claimed a combination against Senator Pugh will be made, and Seay, Colb, or a dark horse, elected. The fight will be a bitter one.

The National W. C. T. U. Convention.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 13.—The sessions of the convention of the National W. C. T. U. will begin to-morrow. Many of the delegates are already here and every train is bringing more. Miss Willard and many of the leaders are here, and the work of the executive committee has been begun.

THE NICELY MURDERERS.

A Strong Effort Being Made to Save Their Lives.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 13.—Since 9 a. m., the State Board of Pardons has been engaged in hearing the case of Joseph and David Nicely, the convicted murderers of Mr. and Mrs. Umberger, in Somerset County. Some eminent legal talent is employed on this case, including General Koontz, ex-Congressman Coffroth and others, and a desperate effort is being made to save the lives of the brothers. The aged parents of the condemned men are here and are watching with anxious interest the progress of the trial.

The case comes before the board this time on an application for a rehearing. The most important after-discovered testimony presented to-day was a sworn statement of one John Beach, who affirms that he and a man named Mitler, whom he believes to have been drowned in the Johnstown flood, committed the crime of murder and robbery while two others stood outside the house on guard. Other evidence was also presented tending to discredit witnesses on the trial against the prisoners. The Commonwealth will endeavor to show that Beach is simple-minded, and that his confession was secured, as many such confessions are. There is great interest in the case in the western part of the State.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

A Passenger Train on the Reading Road Thrown Down an Embankment.

LEBANON, Pa., Nov. 13.—The 5:15 passenger train going west on the Reading road jumped the track at a frog one mile east of Annville and was thrown down an embankment. Three passengers cars and a baggage car were overturned, but although the train was crowded, no one was killed and only seven persons were hurt.

Benjamin Kernict, the conductor, and Frank Pollask, baggage master, both of Reading, were the most seriously injured. They were badly crushed but are not fatally injured. The others were but slightly hurt. All of the injured were brought here and sent on their journey on a later train.

Another Ocean Race.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The rival racing steamships the City of New York and the Teutonic left on another trip to England at an early hour. The City of New York was the first to get away, leaving her pier adjoining the Christopher street ferry a few minutes after 5 o'clock. The Teutonic left her wharf, a few slips away, at 6 o'clock. This is the last trip but one in which the City of New York and Teutonic will race against each other, as by the agreement made between the home offices of the two companies the ships will leave on alternate weeks.

A Pennsylvanian Dies in Paris.

ALLEGHENY CITY, Pa., Nov. 13.—A dispatch from Paris, France, announces the death in that city of Mr. Wilson McCandless, president of the Allegheny City National Bank. He was 50 years old. He was the victim of Bright's disease, and had been traveling several months, hoping to regain his health. Mr. McCandless was well known in financial circles, was wealthy and interested in many public enterprises. He leaves a widow and two children.

Damages Against a Newspaper.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 13.—In the Supreme Court before Chief Justice Durfee, Miss Henrietta D. L. Luft, who brought suit against Robert J. Sullivan, publisher of the Telegram, to recover the sum of $15,000 damages on account of an alleged libellous article published in that paper, which, as charged, reflected upon the good name of the plaintiff, the judge decided that damages to the extent of $2,485.50 be awarded.

Struck by a Train and Killed.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Nov. 13.—A buggy containing two young women named Kate Brown and Kate Sauerborn was struck by an express train at Chrysler's Crossing, near Schenectady, last evening. Miss Sauerborn was instantly killed and Miss Brown badly injured. Miss Brown was taken to a hospital at Albany. The remains of Miss Sauerborn were taken to Schenectady where both women lived.

Three Men Drowned.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Nov. 13.—William Hastings, John Whalen and Thomas Wadsworth were drowned in rough weather in Ipswich Bay. They were on a sparling trip, and left their schooner in a dory. The boat has been found, but there is no trace of the men. Wadsworth belonged in Meriden, Conn.; Hastings was a Scotchman, and leaves a widow and five children; Whalen belonged in California.

Close Congressional Contest.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 13.—The official count on Congressman in the 28th Congressional District is complete and is as follows: For Rockwell, Dem., Chemung County, 671 plurality; Seneca County, 287 plurality. For Noyes, Rep., Schuyler County, 216 plurality; Tompkins, 645 plurality; Rockwell's plurality in the district, 97.

Arrested for Bribing Voters.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Jacob Snell, ex-Sheriff of Montgomery County, and Abner H. Burtch, chairman of the Republican County Committee, were arrested on the charge of bribing voters at the recent election. They were held for the grand jury in the sum of $500 bail each.

Help from Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Secretary Windom has authorized the Assistant Treasurer at San Francisco to receive deposits of funds from bankers desiring to transfer them by telegraph to the Assistant Treasurer at New York. This will enable New York parties having funds in San Francisco that are not needed there, to transfer them for immediate use in New York.

AWFUL LOSS OF LIFE

The English Man-of-War Serpent Wrecked.

NEARLY 300 PERSONS DROWNED

She Went on the Rocks on the Spanish Coast.

Beaten to Pieces by the Sea—The Crew Washed Overboard and Dashed to Death or Drowned—The News Caused a Sensation Throughout England—Sorrow in Hundreds of Homes.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—H. M. S. Serpent was wrecked 20 miles north of Cape Finisterre. Two hundred and forty-seven men were drowned. Only three escaped.

The Serpent went on the rocks during a severe storm on the Spanish coast. A heavy mist prevailed at the time. It was impossible to obtain assistance from the shore, and the vessel remained in her helpless position until broken to pieces by the tremendous seas which swept over her. The crew were washed overboard in groups by the remorseless waves, and drowned or dashed to death amid the rocks.

How the News Was Obtained.

The news of the disaster was conveyed to Corunna, a distance of 60 miles over mountain roads, and when a relief corps organized and went to the scene of the wreck it was too late to be of any avail.

The Serpent's crew proper consisted of 170 men. The remaining victims were relief crews which were being conveyed to other British men-of-war on the African station.

Cost Over $600,000.

The Serpent was a cruiser of the third-class. She was built at Devonport in 1888, at a cost of $605,000.

The admiralty officials maintain silence and decline to be interviewed on the subject of the disaster. They possess no organization through which news of such occurrence would be transmitted to them in advance of press reports, if the officers of the ill-fated vessel did not survive.

Great Grief in England.

Though the reports of almost total annihilation of the Serpent's complement were at first regarded as too terrible for belief, the impression has now become general that the story is true. The news spread like wildfire, causing lamentation in hundreds of homes.

BARRACKS BURNED.

The Inmates Rescued by Means of Ladders Amid Great Excitement.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The Guards' Wellington Barracks have been destroyed by fire. The fire originated under the staircase in the quarters of the married men. All the adult inmates were rescued by means of ladders amid great excitement. A number of children suffering with measles were wrapped in blankets and taken to places of shelter, but two of the little patients are missing, and it is feared they were overlooked in the confusion and have perished in the flames.

When the fire was discovered and the signal for "fire parade" was sounded on the bugles, the troops assembled promptly with splendid discipline, and worked eagerly and effectively, according to the manual. The officers were delighted with the intelligence and willingness displayed under the emergency, and cheered the men on in their heroic efforts to gain control of the flames.

The Kaiser Opens the Prussian Diet.

BERLIN, Nov. 13.—Kmperor William opened the Prussian Diet and in his speech from the throne said that in view of the friendly relations existing between Prussia and all other foreign States—relations which had been strengthened during the present year—the country could look forward with confidence to the further preservation of peace. The speech also announced that bills would be presented in the Diet providing for a reform in taxation, for the organization of provincial councils and for the establishment of elementary schools. The financial condition of the kingdom is shown to be satisfactory.

Ready for the O'Shea Trial.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The petition filed by Captain O'Shea in the Divorce Court against Mrs. O'Shea and Charles Stewart Parnell will come up for hearing this week. Various conflicting rumors are afloat regarding the course that the proceedings will probably take, but they are little more than unfounded gossip. It has been stated that Mrs. O'Shea intended to apply for the appointment of a commission to examine witnesses abroad in support of certain allegations she had made against her husband, but there is no sign of any such move on her part. In fact, it is now too late.

The Jewish Persecutions.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The Archbishop of Canterbury, Cardinal Manning, four dukes and many peers, commoners and college professors have signed a memorial to the Lord Mayor, asking him to convene a meeting at the Mansion House to discuss the subject of the persecution of the Jews in Russia. The Lord Mayor has accordingly called such a meeting for November 24.

Dr. Koch's Discovery.

BERLIN, Nov. 13.—Prof. Koch will publish to the world on Saturday the composition of his cure for consumption. Any physician who desires further information as to details may thereafter apply to Dr. Cornet, Prof. Koch's assistant, who has established hospitals for the treatment of home and foreign patients. Prof. Kock will now begin experimenting for a cure of diphtheria.

Harvard Defeats Amherst.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 13.—Harvard defeated Amherst at football, 64 to 0.

BASEBALL SCHEMING.

Consolidation Plans Almost Perfected and the Magnates Happy.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The baseball war is practically at an end. At the meeting of the Players' League in Pittsburg Messrs. Ward, Prince and Johnson were appointed to confer with a like committee from the National League as to the terms of a consolidation. It is understood that in case Ward is objected to Mr. Prince is empowered to appoint a substitute who will not be a Brotherhood man.

The New York clubs have practically consolidated, and it is reported that the new local club would not only play on Brotherhood Park, but that the team will be made up as follows: Keefe, Welch, Rusie, John Ewing and Sharrott, pitchers; W. Ewing, Buckley, Clarke and Brown, catchers; Connor, first base; Richardson, second base; Denny or Whitney, third base; Glasscock, short stop, and Tiernan, Slattery, Gore and O'Rourke in the outfield.

The League suspended its regular order of business, and the committee reports were received and disposed of at short order. Then N. E. Young was re-elected president; A. J. Reach, John B. Day, W. A. Nimick and the mysterious representative from Cincinnati the board of directors.

A proposition was received from Pittsburg which created a sensation and made the League men even more independent. The proposition was that the Chicago Players' Club was for sale for $25,000. A. G. Spalding said that he was prepared to pay $15,000 for his Chicago rivals' property, but no more.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Irish Parliamentarians were given a big reception in Jersey City last night.

Charles Greenwood's woolen mill at Corinna, Me., was destroyed by fire. Loss, $30,000.

President Charles Francis Adams denies that the Union Pacific has become a Gould property.

It is announced that Col. Charles L. Denby, the American Minister to China, is shortly to be recalled.

Vice President Williams of the Vandalia denies that that road has been sold to the Pennsylvania.

Dillon and O'Connor received an enthusiastic welcome in Providence, R. I., and $10,000 was collected.

Students of the Ann Arbor University got gay and made a tour of the town. Six of them are now in jail.

The Fort Wayne, Ind., street car employes are compelled to work eighteen hours a day. They will strike for twelve hours.

A public reception was tendered ex-President Cleveland at the Governor's rooms in the Capitol at Columbus, Ohio, from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m.

Jabez Fiske, one of the oldest citizens of Clyde, N. Y., committed suicide by taking arsenic. Financial difficulties was the cause. He was about 70 years old.

Madrid advices state that the Cabinet is considering the frame of a reciprocity treaty to be submitted to the United States, and intended more especially to relieve the depressed industries of Cuba.

At Middleport, N. Y., a store belonging to Compton & Spalding, and occupied as a meat market, was burned. Joseph Spalding, a man about 35 years old, who lived on the upper floor in the building, was burned to death.

The coroner's jury at Troy, N. Y., investigating the death of Mrs. Bridget Welch in that city, found that deceased came to her death by an assault committed by her husband, Officer Patrick Welch. He was held for murder in the first degree.

George W. Martin, a carpenter confined in Raymond Street Jail, Brooklyn, N. Y., on a charge of grand larceny stabbed himself six times with a pen knife. The last time the desperate man plied the knife until it entered his heart and he fell dead in his cell.

James S. Goodwin, aged 45, employed as a cartoonist on Puck, in New York, and who lived with his wife and family in Mamaroneck, N. Y., while walking along the track of the New Haven & Hartford railway, was struck and instantly killed by a train.

Only $16 have been taken in at the box office since Signor Succi began his fast in New York city. Aside from feeling somewhat apprehensive as to the financial success of his fast, Succi was as bright and chipper as ever to-day. He lost one pound since yesterday. His pulse to-day was 66.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—The Somerset County Board of Freeholders will meet in adjourned session to-morrow.

—The peerless Jennie Houghton will skate during both the afternoon and evening of Thanksgiving Day, at The Crescent.

—Plainfield is now neglecting business to attend to religion. In most other places they neglect religion to attend to business.—Elizabeth Journal.

—Somerville is now pleading with the Central Railroad Company against the freight yard nuisance, and the continual switching and drilling of cars across one of the most important streets in town.

—The Commissioners of Appeal, Manning Vermeule, Jeremiah Manning and and J. F. MacDonald, will listen to and act on complaints of unjust taxation submitted to them for consideration on Tuesday, November 25, in the Council chamber.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Harry G. Dunn, who has been visiting at the home of his father, Samuel P Dunn, East Seventh street, the past week, returned to-day to Tacoma, Wash.

W. D. Murray, President of the Plainfield Young Men's Christian Association, addressed a union meeting of all the churches at Somerville, Sunday evening.

Charles M. Post has returned to this city after several months' absence in the far West seeking health and recreation. Mr. Post it is believed will resume his old position at the Scott Press Works.

Jacob Long of the borough of North Plainfield took the oath of office, Tuesday, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Wm. E. Jones in the Somerset County Board of Freeholders.

It was Louis A. Hummer, of Somerset street, North Plainfield, who was chosen Grand Warden at the annual convention of the American Legion of Honor of the State of New Jersey, held at Elizabeth, Tuesday.

Miss Francis Otis of 18 Prospect avenue had a story entitled "A Gentleman from India" in The World of yesterday, and to-day the same paper contains "A Radical in Honesty," a pretty Elizabeth love story, by Miss Kate Mills of Plainfield.

NEW JERSEY CITIES THAT HAVE GROWN.

An Official List of Populations Under the New Federal Census.

It is expected at the Census Office that before the end of the week the final population figures can be made public for all the towns and cities in the United States having 8,000 or more inhabitants. In some cases the count is already so nearly completed that figures can be given for all of the larger towns.

This is the case with the enumeration schedule of New Jersey, and the records show that in this State the following cities and towns have 4,000 population or over:

They are Mr. and Mrs. Gayle, Now.

About forty of the immediate relatives and particular friends of the bride and groom, gathered at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Garretson, 14 North avenue, last evening, upon the occasion of the marriage of their eldest daughter, Miss Flora May Garretson, to H. Ellsworth Gayle the prosperous young builder of this city.

Rev. Mr. Schenck performed the ceremony at seven o'clock. The bride was most becomingly attired in a rich traveling costume of brown silk Henrietta cloth. She had a bouquet of Marchal Niel roses "as sweet and pretty as herself," everybody said. The bridemaids were her sister, Miss Lillie Garretson, dressed in garnet Henrietta cloth, and Miss Maggie Vermeule in garnet silk. They wore white chrysanthemums. The groomsmen were Wilbur Gayle and Elmer Garretson, brothers of the happy couple.

The presents were very pretty and many, and the supper was bountiful. Mr and Mrs. Gayle left on the midnight train for Washington. The rice that was showered upon them covered the sidewalk for a long ways, and this morning pedestrians to the station ground it into flour that covered the flags like snow. Upon their return they will begin housekeeping in the pretty home the groom has built and furnished for his bride, on Vine street.

—Mizpah Lodge, I. O. O. L., will hold a fair in Amphion Hall the first week in December.

JUDGE VAN SYCKEL'S SHARP STICK.

The Race Track Jurors Must Return a Verdict, and the Grand Jurors Must Not Yet Disband.

The trial of the indictment against the New Jersey Jockey Club terminated in the Union County Court at Elizabeth yesterday, and Judge VanSyckel says the jury must stay out till they have agreed on a verdict. They came in this noon, after twenty-five hours' deliberation, and announced that that couldn't agree, but the Court said "Gentlemen, there's no earthly reason why you can't agree. I can not discharge you till you have reached a verdict."

At the conclusion of the trial yesterday Judge VanSyckel charged very strongly against the defense and practically gave the jurors to understand that it was their duty to convict. He said the race track ground was simply a house where gambling is openly conducted and permitted and where the constituted authorities of the State are persistently defied. The jury retired at 10:40 a. m., and returned into court once afterward for instructions.

The case of the State against the Linden Park Association was next taken up. It will occupy all of today.

Judge VanSyckel, for the second time this term, refused to discharge the Union County Grand Jury, which brought in a large number of bills last evening, and stated that their work was ended. It is rumored that several book-makers were indicted, but the Judge evidently was not satisfied that enough indictments had been found, as he ordered the jurors to return to court in two weeks. This action of his is something unprecedented and causes considerable comment.

MORE HANDSOME HOMES HERE.

Oakwood to be Turned Into a Private Park, and a Number of Elegant Residences Erected Therein.

Plainfield's boom as a place of elegant homes not only still continues, but grows greater. The recent sale of 21 acres on Charlotte Road, Netherwood Heights, by the Real Estate Trust, through the influence of Councilman Spangenberg, has just been succeeded by a transfer of property that means much to the city.

"Oakwood," the former home of the family of the late ex-Mayor Evans, has been sold by the administrators of his estate to a Brooklyn capitalist for $65,000. It is the intention of this purchaser—who has both the means and experience—to build on his property, consisting of ten acres on Plainfield and Sherman avenues, eight or ten residences of the most modern style at a cost of not less than $10,000 each.

It is probable that the property which is now laid out in beautiful drives and landscape gardening, will be left as it is and made a private park with the intended houses scattered through it. This would make it so specially attractive that residence therein would be eagerly sought for, while if the houses were built along the public thoroughfares, they would not be occupied until a like supply nearer the centre of the city was exhausted.

Healthy Plainfield.

(From the Central Times.)

The total number of deaths in Plainfield the past year from all causes, has been 203. The principal causes were cholera infantum, paralysis, consumption, pneumonia, and heart disease. Besides these five diseases, which carried away 99 persons, there were several other causes of death which removed 104 more. This gives an average death rate of 17.5 to every 1000 population. There has not occurred any epidemic and but few of the 203 deaths reported have resulted from contagious disease. The mortality was unusually large among those less than one year old and those over sixty years of age there being 119 deaths in these two classes. Of the remaining eighty-four deaths, seven were caused by railroad accidents and only fourteen persons died from diseases classed as preventable.

Hotel and Saloon Men Help the Revival.

As predicted exclusively in THE PRESS of last evening, most of the bar rooms in the city were closed soon after sundown yesterday, and remained closed during the evening, in response to the requests of Mrs. Wm. Taylor and the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, so as not to interfere with the attendance of men at the Mills meetings.

Commanders' Contest.

This evening the management of the G. A. R Bazaar will open a fraternal contest between the Commanders of the two Grand Army Posts of this city for possession of a gold corps badge presented to the fund by a well-known badge manufacturer of New York.

Aunt Jack.

The Boston Globe says: "Not since the time of 'French Flats,' have the players associated under A. M. Palmer's management found such opportunities in farce comedy as those afforded by 'Aunt Jack.'" It will be played at Music Hall, Saturday evening.

Woman's Work.

There is no end to the tasks which daily confront the good housewife. To be a successful housekeeper, the first requisite is good health. How can a woman contend against the trials and worries of housekeeping if she be suffering from ailments and weaknesses peculiar to her sex? Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a specific for these disorders. The only remedy, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case, or money refunded. See printed guarantee on bottle wrapper.

TRIED TO KILL HIS WIFE.

A Chapter of Miseries from Real Life Among the Neighboring Mountain Villagers.

[Special to THE PRESS.]

STERLING, Nov. 13.—Carl Lubkerman, a German, with his wife and son, came to this country some time ago. After drifting around for a while in search of work, they finally settled in the Passaic Valley, where they found ready demand for their services among the families of Millington. They occupied a house on the Frank Carle estate, where they were employed most of the time.

When the hunting season opened, Lubkerman was among those who went gunning. He noticed some wild ducks alight on the river, and he and his son, a boy of about thirteen years of age, went down to the river, where they found a boat moored. While arranging the craft for service, Lubkerman left his gun on the bank. When he got the boat afloat, he returned for his gun. Just as he stepped into the boat one of the hammers of the gun struck the side of the boat, and the weapon was discharged. The contents of one of the barrels—a tremendous charge of duck shot—tore the flesh almost completely from Lubkerman's arm, in some places leaving the bone entirely bare. Assistance was procured, and the sufferer was taken to his home. The shock was so great as partially to paralyze him. Medical aid was summoned, and all that could be done was done to alleviate the injured man's sufferings, but the pain continued so great at times as to make it necessary for strong men to hold him in bed. His wife was constantly in attendance with him, not once for days leaving his side to get a much needed rest. Kind neighbors also sat up with the wounded and suffering man until he began to get strong again.

One morning Lubkerman told his wife that he was very hungry and would like a piece of toast. While she prepared it for him he seemed more bright, telling her to hurry. While he sat up in bed she fed him the toast she had prepared. He suddenly grabbed her thumb between his teeth, cutting it to the bone. The poor woman, alarmed at this, tried to get away, while he suddenly drew a dagger from under the bed clothes. He struck at her throat twice with the gleaming weapon, cutting her garments both times, but failing to draw blood. In her frenzy of fear she tore away from this fiend, but not until he left her a marked thumb which she will carry for life.

Fortunately, the dagger blade did not reach her, or he would have added murder to the crime of mayhem and ingratitude. The poor woman went to a neighbor's and had her thumb dressed. She was then advised to have her brutal husband arrested, which she reluctantly did. She made her complaint to Squire Williams, who straightway issued a warrant for his arrest. The warrant was placed in the hands of Constable Havey, who arrested his prisoner in his home, and conveyed him to Morristown Jail, where he now lies in a precarious condition. The jail physician holds out no hope of his ever serving any time for his crime, if he should ever reach trial, as he is slowly sinking.

He gives no explanation of the assault on his wife, and is doggedly silent when it is mentioned. Mrs. Lubkerman says she will go back to Germany, where she has her parents. She says she will never have anything more to do with her husband again. The neighbors speak very highly of her, although she came a stranger among them so short a time ago. The dagger with which Lubkerman made the assault is one he brought from Germany.

The Coming Municipal Election.

The Republican nominations for councilmen are all particularly good citizens and remarkably strong candidates. The Democrats will not be able to name better representatives, but they can name as good.

If they do so there is no reason to doubt that Democratic councilmen will be elected from the first, second and fourth wards. The voice of the people was heard in the land, last week, and it said loudly, "Verily we have found we are not safe in the hands of the Republicans."

Its Editorials Still Written Elsewhere.

The local Democratic rooster is crowing because Reed gained no votes in North Plainfield. If that rooster will come off its perch for a moment it will learn that its dear Tammany Keyes was buried out sight in his own town, where people knew him.—Central Times.

There goes the mocking bird, again. If the Times would compare the returns of Mr. Keyes's "own town" in past elections, it would learn that he ran ahead of his party's vote.

Easy to Forgive: Another Pays the Freight.

A few days ago an intoxicated individual deliberately smashed two large and costly plate glass windows on West Front street near Somerset. The store keepers whose glass was broken were told who did it, but said "We'll forgive him this time—the glass was insured against breakage, anyhow, so it's nothing out of our pockets!"

FATHERS AND SONS UNITE FOR CHRIST.

Strong Men in Contrite Penitence Humbly Bow the Knee Before Their Maker, and Proud Lips Confess the Glories of the New Salvation, the Bounties of the Saviour's Love.

Great joy reached many a Plainfield home last night, in the glad tidings that scores of the fathers and sons of the city had publicly acknowledged penitence for their sins, and had confessed before the world Jesus Christ as their Saviour. This conversion of a mighty band of strong men and stalwart youth from among our people is one of the grandest results yet achieved by the revival which has brought upon this favored community so great an awakening.

Last night's meeting for men presented a glorious sight. The Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church—already imposing to the eye, in its architectual strength and beauty—was thronged with men from every walk of life. The idea which impressed one as he gazed on this gathering of human souls was that of the vast power for good which such a body of men could wield, what a marvelous moral force the mere example of that congregation could exercise, what a tremendous triumph they could bring to any cause in which they led.

The men seemed all to be earnestly united in great concern for the spiritual welfare of mankind in general and of themselves and their brethren in particular. One could almost lay reverent hand upon the Holy Presence that pervaded the atmosphere of the place. And as the preacher told the precious truths of the Gospel many hearts found the light for which they had been longing, and many souls were turned unto Christ.

The sermon of the evening was a simple one. Evangelist Mills has yet to preach that discourse which shall be hard to understand. The meetings he has been conducting here have not been characterized by any unhealthful excitement, any hurrah of sentiment, any momentary pyrotechnic display of emotion. Mr. Mills preaches from the heart the plain, never-dying truth that Christ died to save sinners, and shows in the clearest manner how the wicked may secure redemption and everlasting salvation, and then presents the question for each one to decide as his conscience, common-sense, judgment and desire may dictate, -Will you accept Christ or reject Him?

Pathos there often is, in his discourse, and tears often flow, but there are tears of joy as well as of sorrow, and one must not misjudge the drops that flow from the hearts touched by the divine eloquence of the truths he presents to his hearers. But as often as there is pathos there is the bright illumination of the heavenly smile that beams forth in response to the celestial visions he portrays. Sublime gladness rules; not a spirit of gloom and woe.

One of the things most earnestly urged upon the men was the ease with which one could come to Christ in his youth. As years advanced, conversion grew harder. It was not so easy for the young man to become a Christian as for the child; it was still more difficult for the grown man to enter the kingdom of the Lord.

Here was a story in illustration:

A young man who was greatly concerned about his soul went to a wise old hermit, and said: "Tell me: can I not become a Christian late in life with more ease than I can now?" For answer the old man took the youth into the wood, and weighed him down with fagots till he could hardly stand beneath the weight. "Is the burden heavy, my son?"—said the old man.—"I'll make it lighter"—and he piled on more fagots.—"Is it still a grievous load? I'll relieve you more"—and still other fagots were heaped upon his tottering shoulders. And so the hermit kept increasing the load, till the young man was crushed to the ground.

This was the lesson:

The burden of sin was heavy enough in earliest youth. Each day of delay was one day less to repent in, and one more day to repent of.

***

Men were too eager—the preacher said—to protest that a revival was no time to confess Christ. It was the time. Just now this city was being visited with wonderful manifestations of God's Spirit. It was a time to melt all hearts; it was a time for the branding of God's name in the foreheads of the people, as His people, while the white-heat lasted.

As an object lesson the evangelist had the professing Christians, including those recently converted, arise. Fully eight hundred responded. Then he had those sit down who had begun the Christian life under the influence of an especial visitation of revival spirit to a community, and only seventy-three were left standing.

***

Now was the opportunity to accept the Saviour's love and pardon and peace. Now the Master was calling, now the Spirit pleading. Christ was very near to the people this moment. Jesus of Nazareth was passing by, listening—oh, how longingly and lovingly!—for the invitation to take possession of the sinner's heart. It might be the last opportunity—the very last: one could not know, one could not know. There must be a last time for everything—just so for this. Oh, what a solemn thought, the last time! The last birthday anniversary—what a solemn, treasured day, if one but realized that never again would that yearly celebration return. The last birthday past—the last New Year's—the last month—the last week of earthly life begins. The last day of one's human existence upon one!—the last hour—the last minute—then how the seconds flee! Ten seconds past—twenty—thirty—fifty gone! Only ten remaining!—and those ticking away! Six seconds left—five—four—three—two—one—then the soul gone forever from its tenement of clay! Oh, sublime departure, if a Christian's death! Alas, if an unbeliever's!

The last time—the last time—to accept Christ. No one could know how near he was to salvation even at that moment To reject God's mercy now was perhaps to reject it forever.

A man made a visit to the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky. He refused a guide, but took instead a lantern and a ball of twine. One end of the ball he fastened at the entrance of the cave, and as he went along the passages of the cavern he unwound the ball, so that he might at will retrace his steps even if his light should fail him. From that vast underground labyrinth, whose total length is thirty-five miles, the man did not return. His body was found after he had been gone several days. The circumstances of the discovery of his body told their own story. He had dropped his ball of cord in his eagerness to examine the beauties of the stalactites and stalagmites and other wonderful creations about him, and a sudden draught of air had blown out his light He had tried two matches, all he had; one had broken, the other was moist and would not burn; both were useless. He had groped about to find the lost cord. All in vain had he searched, and at length he had perished in grim despair. When his body was found his arm was still stretched out along the floor of the cavern in mute wistfulness, and his finger tips were within three inches of the ball of cord. He had died without knowing how near he was to safety!

Jesus was just as near to us to-night. One had but to reach out to meet the Divine touch that would lead one to life everlasting. The sinner was just as close to safety as had been the lost explorer of the cavern. To refuse that safety now might be to refuse it forever.

Such sublime truths as Mr. Mills presented in this sermon could not fail to convince hesitating hearts, whether or not hitherto touched by the revival of the passing two weeks. A large number stood up to signify that they would forsake their sins.

The men who attended the after-meeting in the chapel filled the entire lower floor of that beautiful structure. A few of these were already professing Christians, but the majority were those anxious to surrender themselves for the first time to God, and large numbers stood up and announced their determination to lead henceforth a Christian life. Some of these were men whose locks were white with age; some were men strong in the prime of life; some were just entering on the full vigor of manhood; some were boys eager to devote in their youth the best years of their life to the Master's service. The sight of these proud wilful hearts surrendering themselves meekly and earnestly to the Saviour was deeply impressive, and the avowals made by those lips, of their new-found joy, and of their desire to work zealously for Christ, were tender and sweet sounds for the ears of the Christians who welcomed the converts to the fold.

The meeting was one to be long cherished and hallowed in memory. An informal reception, at which everyone, beaming with the cordiality of Christian good-fellowship, made the acquaintance of and had a happy time with everybody else, brought the evening to a close.

Mention of the men's meeting in the church would not be complete without reference to the singing. The hymns selected by Mr. Greenwood during the service of song preceding the sermon were excellently suited to male voices, and a grand chorus continually swelled the air. Such tunes as that of the Portuguese Hymn, rich in power and thrilling with melody, were chosen, and a great volume of song arose from those many hundreds of throats that must have gladdened the very masonry of the walls. More than one woman who knows and loves the music of a man's voice wished that she were there to hear that rich full tide of melody.

But the women had their meeting, too, and a splendid one. Gathered in the Congregational church, they prayed—oh, how tearfully!—for the men who sought solace and salvation in the teachings of Mr. Mills. And who shall say their prayers were not fully answered?

The services at the Crescent Avenue church to-night will be for all classes. Mr. Mills will preach. To-morrow morning James McGee will conduct a prayer meeting for men, at 59 North avenue, from 7:30 to 8:20 o'clock. The subject will be "Opportunity"—Luke XVIII: 37. At 2:45 p. m., to-morrow, a woman's prayer meeting, on the same topic, will be held in the lecture room of the Crescent Avenue church. At 3:30 p. m., immediately after the woman's prayer meeting, Mr. Mills will preach to all classes, in the body of the church. At 7:45 Friday night Mr. Mills will again preach to men only, and Mr. Greenwood and the male choir will conduct a service of song.

Saturday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, a special children's service will be held in the Methodist church. Sunday morning Mr. Mills will preach to men only at the Crescent Avenue church, at 10:30 o'clock. At the same hour a service for women will be held in the First Baptist church, and one for all classes, men and women, at the Methodist church. Sunday evening Mr. Mills will preach to the unconverted, in the Crescent Avenue church, and services for church members will be held in the First Baptist and Park Avenue Baptist churches.

The Trinity Reformed and First Presbyterian churches will be closed all day Sunday, and the Park Avenue Baptist church will be closed in the morning, and the Methodist church in the evening. All the churches will be opened Sunday, November 23, when regular services will be resumed.

Democratic Primaries.

The Democratic voters of the City of Plainfield are requested to meet at the Democratic Headquarters on Front street on Thursday evening, November 13, at 7:30 o'clock, to place in nomination ward candidates for Common Council, and also to elect delegates to the City Convention, to be held at the same place on Friday evening, Nov. 14, at 8 o'clock, to nominate a Mayor, Assessor, Collector, Treasurer, Member of Board of Education, and three Commissioners of Appeal. The number of delegates to the City Convention will be based upon the Democratic vote cast at the last election.

L. F. WADSWORTH, Secretary.

Carey Involved in Another Rumpus.

Robert Spooner, Joseph B. Miller and George Miller have each furnished bonds to answer to the Grand Jury, if ever wanted, on charges made under the new Ballot Reform Law. Spooner is accused of voting illegally at a Plainfield Republican primary when he was a resident of North Plainfield, and he in turn accuses the Miller brothers of inducing him to participate in the ward nomination to help them satisfy an old grudge against Tunis J. Carey, ex-Captain of Police.

Grievance of Railroad Employes.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 13.—Nearly all the members of the General Grievance Committee of the employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company west of Pittsburg are now in this city. The members of the different branches will report their grievances to the General Grievance Committee who will discuss them and lay them before the Pennsylvania Company officials for action. The principal question concerns a schedule of wages.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Daniel S. Appleton, of the well known publishing house of D. Appleton & Co., is very low at his home, No. 9 University place. He is suffering from a stroke of apoplexy.

The Deadlock Broken.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 13.—The tie in the Onondaga Board of Supervisors was broken by the election of Marshal R. Dyer, Democrat, as chairman, and of Myles O'Sullivan, a Belden Republican, as clerk.

Fight Between Military and Police.

GALWAY, Nov. 13.—Several fights took place here between the police and the military. In one of the encounters a police sergeant was severely injured. The military finally routed the police and chased them to their barracks. The Connaught Rangers, who took a prominent part in the disturbance, have been ordered away from Galway.

Police Prevented the Duel.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The duel which was to have taken place on the Belgian frontier between M. Deroulede and M. Laguerre was prevented by the police. The encounter is now expected to occur in Luxemburg.

Mayor Grant's Election Expenses.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Mayor Grant has filed the statement of his expenses in the recent election, in accordance with the Corrupt Practices Law. The aggregate is $7,238. The greater part is itemized as printers' bills. He spent $1,044 for advertising.

Arranging the Committees.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Already the Hon. William F. Sheehan, prospective Speaker of the Assembly, has had a conference with Chairman Murphy of the State Committee and Governor Hill, relative to the schedule of chairmen of the various committees of the Assembly.

THERE has been inaugurated in Paris a novel development of the automatic fountain invention. It is for the supply of hot water. Automatic fountains are becoming one of the features of out-of-door Paris.

THE army of the United States consists of 2,167 commissioned officers and a little over 20,000 real private soldiers, exclusive of those performing civilian duties. In other terms, one-tenth of the military force consists of its officers.

E. L. BRIGHAM, of Worcester, Mass., who has made a reputation for himself as a whittler, has nearly completed his masterpiece in that line. It is a model of a summer house, stands about twelve inches high and is about six inches square. It was all cut from a block of white wood.

NEARY 3,000 persons now find employment in the Edison electric works at Schenectady, and this company is so extending its plant that many more will soon be employed. In the new power station now being built will be located monster dynamos, which will furnish electricity for the many motors which are to supplant the steam engines now in PROGRESS IN THERAPEUTICS.

SUGAR is used as a surgical dressing at the surgical clinic at Strasburg, and is said to be a most efficient agent for the purpose.

PROF. VON ESMARCK says that steam to be effective in destroying bacteria must be purged of all air. Its efficiency is in an inverse ratio to the amount of air.

IN a late series of experiments, Dr. Coch found that certain bodies, such as volatile oils, and certain metallic salts, such as nitrate of silver and preparations of gold, even in very small doses (1 to 1,000,000, and even less), destroy the bacilli of consumption in a very short time. He therefore concludes that in the course of time some drug may be discovered that will cure the disease by destroying the bacilli without injury to the body.

WE have learned how to kill our microscopic foes outside the human body, when warned of their presence. It remains to discover means of killing them after they have found lodgment in the body, says the N. Y. World. We know how to disinfect the house in which a man lives; we must find out how to disinfect the man himself when he falls ill from the presence of foreign organisms in his system. The problem now presented to scientific research is how to kill the germs that make a man ill, without killing the man.

THE Russian Government has sent several physicians to Asia Minor to make experiments in the treatment of cholera with ferula sumbul, or musk-root, a plant which grows in Turkestan and which possesses certain anti-spasmodic properties. It formerly enjoyed quite a reputation in Germany and Russia as a remedy for cholera, but has fallen out of use in recent times. Even its name is now unknown to most practitioners in those countries, although the plant is still regarded popularly as an efficient diarrhea medicine.

SOME very interesting and possibly important experiments have been made during the past five years by Dr. Gaucher, of Paris. Bacilli of tubercolosis were injected into several rabbits, producing the disease in all cases. Other rabbits were then inoculated in just the same manner, but were fed afterward with bran mixed with boracic acid. On killing these rabbits after a time, no trace of tubercular disease could be found. How far the boracic acid might be beneficial to the human victim of tuberculosis is not known, but in such trials as have been made lung decay has been arrested and improvement in every way has resulted.

A Strange Truth.

Something Which Should Come Home to Every Clerk, Mechanic and Business Man.

"Mr. L—— died from brain and nerve exhaustion, after accumulating a large fortune," report the papers.

What a text and what a lesson! All strive for a living or wealth, and work, fret and push until they use up their nerve, strength and vital powers—until, by the strain and tension upon brain and nerves, they become prostrated in nerve and physical strength. Thousands upon thousands, from the humblest workman or clerk to the greatest banker, are straining every energy and overworking their brains, nerve and bodies, and the result will be nervous exhaustion, insanity, heart failure, shattered nerves, paralysis or death, unless they recuperate their nerve power and vital strength.

This applies to the overworked clerk or mechanic, confined during long hours, who sees himself growing thin in flesh, pale and sallow in complexion, and finds that he is gradually losing his former physical strength and strong nerves. It applies to the business man, who finds his work, strain and tension of mind slowly but surely undermining his strength, tiring his brain, weakening his nerves and debilitating his body.

The result is the same in all such cases. They become weak, nervous, restless or fretful; they have dizziness, bad-feeling head, an unsteady and trembling nerve, strange sensations, a feeling of anxiety or gloomy depression of the mind; they are sleepless and wake tired and unrefreshed; their appetite and digestion fail, and they become bilious, and generally run down. These are dangerous symptoms and the warning is only too plain.

Why is it that thousands of people neglect these symptoms when their common sense tells them that some time it will be too late? Why are they stupid enough to neglect their health, their life, until cure becomes well nigh impossible? They certainly know that they can be cured by taking Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great brain and nerve invigorator and health restorer; they know positively, as has been demonstrated in myriads of cases, that this great and wonderful restorer of nerve and physical strength and power will perfectly and completely invigorate their tired brain, nerve their weary limbs and give back to the exhausted system its strength and vigor.

It is a purely vegetable and harmless remedy, which no one need hesitate to use, and it can be purchased at druggists for $1 per bottle. Use it, you who are suffering from nerve and physical exhaustion, and it will restore your snap, vim vigor and power to work.

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

FOR LITTLE PEOPLE.

DO FAIRIES STILL EXIST?

Yes, my darling! fairies still
Hover round the open door—
Fairies both of good and ill—
Just the same as days of yore.

There's a fairy, sometimes known
By the name of Thoughtfulness;
Light her step and soft her tone,
And her mission usefulness.

Mindful of the smallest part,
This good fairy takes her way;
To the one of heavy heart,
She has cheering words to say.

Hand in hand, with Love she goes,
Through the realm of Fairyland,
And the blessings she bestows
Crown her Queen of all the band

There's another, that we call
Patience, when we see her face:
For no task, or great or small,
Mars its sweet and steadfast grace.

Hope and Faith with Patience dwell
Where the towering mountains lie;
Nought disturbs the charmed spell
Of their peace and harmony.

Lives a blessed one we know,
By the name of Charity—
Name that sets our hearts aglow,
And stirs to human sympathy.

In her tender eyes the gold
Far outweighs the worthless dross;
Somewhere in the spirit's fold,
There's a gain outweighs the loss.

Need we name those sad of mien—
Hate and Envy and Distrust—
In their eyes the brightest scene
Shows some darkened stain or rust.

In the twilight fairies come;
List the message that they bring!
Sound the door of every home,
Fairies still are hovering.
—Elizabeth A. Davis, in Golden Days.

ABOUT PEBBLES.

How the Bits of Rock From which They are Made are Shaped.

Is there a more common, every-day object in the world than a pebble? How can one find any thing to say about that? Well, one can try, anyhow.

In the first place, it is well to know just what we are talking about. What is a pebble? A rounded bit of rock. How did it get its shape? Why—but, hello! we are on the track of a story already.

Have you ever been in a quarry, or noticed where a street had been cut through a mass of rock, as often happens in the upper part of New York City? You have? Very well, did you not notice that the rock in the walls of the quarry or in the exposed face of the street cutting was full of cracks and seams? Yes. Now let me tell you some other things you saw, or might have seen, if you were observant.

These cracks and seams ran in two directions, so as to cross each other. In some kinds of soft rocks, like sandstones and slates, they are principally level, dividing the rock into layers, or strata, with only a few upright cracks. But the harder kinds, such as granite, and the tough mica-schist which underlies New York, and whitish, shining rocks made up largely of coarse quartz crystals, have cracks all through them in all sorts of directions.

Some of these seams are quite large and open, and you will often notice water oozing out and trickling down to the bottom of the quarry. Other cracks are so fine you can not slide your knife-blade into them, yet here, too, dampness will appear. You can easily believe, therefore, my statement that water penetrates far into the center of masses of rocks, and it is the escape of this water into larger channels, which lead it to the surface, that forms springs and gradually fills with water mines, quarries and deep wells.

But what has this to do with pebbles you ask? Wait a moment and you will see.

What is true of quarries and the rock exposed in street or railway cuttings is true of the cliffs which face the sea or project from a mountain, since these, like the face of a quarry, are only the exposed edges of the great mass of rock elsewhere covered with earth; a mass or hill of rock, similarly, is only the part above ground of the mass underneath. And not only these cliffs and rock-hills, but the masses underneath, are all of fine, intersecting cracks, more or less filled with moisture.

Now, when winter comes, the water that has filtered into the cracks near the surface will freeze solid. You know what happens when water freezes in a confined space—it bursts the prison. Fill a bottle chock full of water and leave it out over a cold winter night, or put it into an ice-cream freezer, and see how quickly the bottle will break. Just the same thing happens when the water freezes in a crevice in the rocks. It swells and pries off every piece which can possibly be moved. One of those pieces, thus pried off, may be the beginning of a pebble.

There are various other ways, however, in which rocks split to pieces. Sometimes the dampness, working its way into the crevices, will rust the rock and eat tiny cracks into large crevices, and so turn what was once a solid cliff into a heap of loose and toppling stones ready to tumble headlong the first time a lightning stroke, or a little landslide, or something else jars the earth enough to give them a start. The action of noonday heat and midnight cold, by causing rocks to swell and shrink alternately, helps to separate them, until piece by piece the face and top of the crags fall off. One or the other or all of these forces are at work all the time, so that wherever you see a cliff there you will find a slope of fallen fragments at its base.

If the fragments are large, they tend to break into smaller ones, and still smaller, in the same way. If this cliff is inland, the stones will keep their angular edges, and should you dig down hundreds of years afterward you would find their shape the same; but if the cliff is beside a stream, or fronts the waves, a very different thing happens.

As fast as the pieces roll into the river they are caught by the current and moved about with more or less violence. If the river is very rapid, they may be rolled over and over and pushed and crowded along till they find a resting-place in some nook from which the current can not easily dislodge them. This knocks their corners off—first the most prominent, then the less, and so on until there are no more corners left. I have heard this going on in the bottom of a swift river in the Rocky mountains so plainly that the grinding made a muffled roar above the dashing of the waves.

This river came from under a glacier—which is an enormous mass, a whole valley full, of slowly-moving ice. Down from the slopes of the bordering mountains, fragments of rocks were incessantly falling and sliding on to the back of the glacier. This ice was full of cracks, allowing many of the stones to fall through it, while the rest worked their way under the edges. As the ponderous ice moved on, it rolled these stones under its awful weight, turning them over and over, crushing the softer ones to powder, and rounding the hard ones into "cobblestones" and pebbles of various sizes and shapes. Ages ago the whole northern third of the globe was covered by glaciers, and it is believed that all the vast banks of gravel and rounded stones which are scattered over the Northern States and Canada were made in this way under the ice. In many cases it can be told, by the peculiarities of the rock from which these pebbles were made, that they must have come from a particular range of hills, and so we can discover just where a glacier lay, how long it was, etc., by examining a few cobblestones.

Nowadays the sea is the greatest pebble factory. The waves are always hammering at the rocks that hem its margin, and are breaking them to pieces. As soon as a bit of stone tumbles into the water the surf begins to roll it up and down the beach, and knock it right and left among its fellows, making each bit help knock the corners off the rest, until they are all rounded and beautifully smooth. This process steadily goes on. The sea is never tired of its work, and every moment it keeps the pebbles grinding against one another until it has worn them away to pieces no larger than the head of a pin; and that is sand. Not all sand is made in this way, but on most beaches the grains are as round as mustard seed, and are in fact little pebbles.

If I had time it would be easy to show how different sorts of rock make pebbles of different shapes; why some are so beautifully banded; why some have flat sides or ends; how it is by an exact imitation of nature's method that a boy's marbles are made, and various other things; but enough has been said to show you that a pebble is well worth looking at, and thinking, if not talking, about.—Ernest Ingersoll, in Christian Union.

THE UGLY CHICKEN.

Mother Hen's One Little Chick That Survived a Sad Accident.

"Cluck, cluck," said the hen as she called her brood to her.

"Cluck, cluck, my chicks. Come and pick up worms."

"Oh, you ugly thing!" said she, giving a spiteful peck at one poor, thin little chick that did not look fat and round and pretty as the others did, and whose feet were webbed.

"Peep, peep," said the poor little chick. "Please give me a worm. I'm hungry. Peep, peep."

"Pick up a worm for yourself," said the heartless hen. "I can not find worms for you, you poor, homely chicken."

"Peck, peck," went one of the others, pushing the poor little chick to one side.

So all day long the homely chicken was left to pick up worms and crumbs for himself, for the old hen his mother was too busy with her pretty chicks to notice him.

Very hungry he was sometimes, and very cold. When the other chicks crept under the old hen's wing to sleep he was often left out in the dark and cold.

One day the old hen took her family out to walk upon a thin branch that lay over a brook. Just as they reached the middle of the branch it broke, letting the hen and her family splash into the water.

"Peep! peep!" went the unhappy chicks. "Peep! peep! We are drowning."

The mother hen spread her wings and flew to shore, but the poor chicks sank into the water and were drowned.

All except the ugly chicken.

As soon as he touched the water he spread out his little web feet and swam nicely toward shore.

For the ugly chicken was a duckling.

How thankful the mother hen was to have one of her family saved! And how she grieved as she thought of the way she had neglected him.—N. Y. World.

A Good Voice.

One afternoon Ethel attended a matinee where there was much fine music. On the way home she heard her mother remark to another lady that one of the singers, a noted tenor, sang unusually well. "Yes," said the lady, "he went up to high C without making any fuss about it."

Ethel often heard music talked about at home, so that she knew that "High C" meant one of the upper notes on the musical scale, within the compass of the human voice, but so high that some singers could not reach it. Therefore she asked no questions.

A few weeks afterward Ethel went into the country for a visit. On the morning after her arrival at the farm, she got into the chicken-yard, where she caused much commotion among the fowls. The hens cackled and the roosters screeched, while she chased them hither and thither to her heart's content, thinking it fine fun.

"Oh, I've had a lovely time playing tag with the chickens!" she told her mother afterward, and she added: "I 'most know that gray rooster went up to High C, but he made a dreadful fuss about it."—Youth's Companion.

—Jagway—"I was talking the other evening with an old lady of 58——" Miss Spinster—"Why, you don't call that old, do you?" Tagway—"I presume you wouldn't."—The Epoch.

MAC'S INVESTMENT.

Why a Smart Brooklyn Man Has Sworn Off on Jokes.

CINTYRE thought he knew all about mock auctions There was nothing green in his eye He had never been in one, but he often peeped in and listened with a grin as the auctioneer, with two cappers looking on, made a pretence of business and sought with loud and vociferous bawling to attract a sucker. The mock auctioneer does not need a crowd to conduct his business.

One evening, for a joke, Mac drifted into a mock auction shop on Chatham street, or Park row, as you please.

He knew what he was about, but Mrs M. was in the country, and time hung heavily on his hands. There were five men in the place. How many were cappers and how many Macs it would be hard to say.

The auctioneer brightened up when he saw Mac, and sizing him up for a family man (Mac boards in Brooklyn) he held up to view a handsome ivory-handled carving set, worth fifteen dollars if it was worth a cent.

"How much am I offered?" said the auctioneer, after dilating on the merits of the set.

"Half a dollar," said Mac, thinking he would start the bidding by way of a joke.

"Sold," said the auctioneer, not even asking for another bid. "Wrap up the set, Jerry, and take the gentleman's change. And a rare old bargain he has got. Now, then, gentlemen, we have an elegant lady's gold watch."

Mac looked sadly around the room. The five men, cappers or customers, looked severely at him. He did not want the carving set for fifty cents, or for any price. But he had made a bid and his offer had been accepted. He could not gracefully back down. The eyes of the five cappers or customers, to say nothing of Jerry and the auctioneer, were upon him. A backdown on his part meant a rough-and-tumble fight, with the honors against him.

He gave Jerry $1. Jerry handed him the package and a lead half dollar by way of change. Mac knew it was counterfeit, but he put it in his pocket and walked out, glad to escape with a whole skin.

On the way to the office Mac dropped the package. The knife-blade was bent into the shape of the letter L. It was made of lead. The steel was shivered into a dozen pieces. It was made of the most brittle kind of cast iron. The ivory handles were cheap celluloid. Mac threw the package into a garbage barrel.

He has sworn off on jokes.—N. Y. Herald.

THE LAST STRAW.

The Office Boy—They s a man outside with a bill.

The Editor—Tell him I'm dead.

The Office Boy (after going out and coming back again)—He said he was sorry, sir. I clean forgot t' tell you that th' bill was a five-dollar one t' pay a subscrip.—Judge.

Precautionary.

"Maria," inquired Mr. Billus, "what kind of a girl is this second cousin of yours that's coming to visit us?"

"I don't know much about her," answered Mrs. Billus, "except that she is said to be quite pretty, and—where are you going, John?"

"I am going to take that rug from the library floor and put it down in front of the big looking-glass."—Chicago Tribune.

He Had Popped.

Clarissa (of New York)—Why, how happy you look, Melpomenel. Has—has he popped?

Melpomene (of Boston)—Yes, Clarissa, he has caused the vital and intensely-important interrogation to explode with a short, sudden reverberation.—Boston Traveler.

George Did the Tanking.

Mrs. Gazzam—I went to the theater last night with George.

Mrs. Bunting—Was it one of those tank plays?

Mrs. Gazzam—I think it must have been, for there were six acts and George went out every time the curtain fell.—Judge.

Not an Ideal Hero.

Johnny Peck—Did you ever save any one from drowning, pa?

Mr. N. Peck (dolefully)—Yes.

"But you don't seem very happy over it, pa. Whom did you save?"

"Your mother, my son, before we were married."—Lawrence American.

One on Gorger.

"Here, waiter!" exclaimed old Gorger, "take this stuff back. It isn't fit for a pig to eat."

"Sem, sare, you must not eat eet," replied the waiter; and Gorger wondered why everybody smiled. — Munsey's Weekly.

An Illustration.

"Can a part of a thing be equal to the whole of the thing?" asked Johnnie.

"Well, I don't know," returned Henpeck, with a glance at his wife. "I've known a tongue to be a-waggin'."—N Y. Sun.

A Frequent Stricker.

Money Wanted, Not Blood.

A good story is going the rounds of the German papers about a rich French nobleman who always pretended to be a great friend of the legitimist claimant of the French throne. It was proposed to get up a loan of twenty million francs to aid the claimant. An agent called on the rich legitimist, who replied pompously:

"My blood is always at the service of his Majesty."

"Yes, but we are not going to start a sausage factory," replied the agent.—Texas Siftings.

A Sufficient Reason.

Scribe—What does Haker write for your paper?

Scribbler—He's on the editorial force.

Scribe—That's funny.

Scribbler—Why?

Scribe—Because your paper has no editorial force.—American Stationer.

AN HONEST HEART.

He—Have you, then, no serious moments?

She—Oh, yes. There are times when I think it isn't just right for a girl to be engaged to more than three fellows at once; but I find a good deal more fun in being frivolous.—Munsey's Weekly.

Shamefully Treated.

Brown—So you lost your suit with Dinkenberry?

Dolby—Yes. You see I went to Lawyer Briefless and told him every thing concerning the transaction, and when I asked him to take my case he said he had already been retained by Dinkenberry. Of course I lost it—the rascal.—Detroit Free Press.

Same Cause.

In the Golden Age.

First Student—Augustus Cæsar, I discover in my readings, had among his personal attendants a Keeper of Overcoats.

Second Student (sadly, as he remembers that his own is in pawn)—They had pawnbrokers in those days, then.—Texas Siftings.

—Fauntleroy Boy—"Mamma, it would have been grand to have lived in the good old times, and have a big castle on a hill, and rob everybody who came near it, just like the brave Barons I read about in that big book. I wish I could have been one!" Mamma—"Hush! You shouldn't talk so." Boy—"Can't I just think about such things?" Mamma—"No, you sha'n't. Change the subject." Boy—"Mamma, when is papa coming back to the city?" Mamma—"As soon as his summer hotel closes."—Y. Weekly.

—A Good Breakfast Dish.—Take some of the light bread dough which is ready for molding into loaves, roll out half an inch thick, cut into small squares and fry to a nice brown in boiling fat like dough nuts. These are good to eat with meats, also with sirup, or sugar and cream, as one prefers, and are very little trouble to make.—Orange Judd Farmer.

BIRCHALL EXECUTED

The Murderer of Benwell Dies This Morning.

HE WAS BRAVE TO THE LAST.

Laughed at the Gallows and Refused to Make a Confession.

He Said He Gave Up His Life for a Crime He Did Not Commit—His Body Buried in the Jail Yard—How the Murderer Spent His Last Night on Earth—His Wife Faints After the Execution.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 14.—A few minutes after 9 o'clock this morning J. Reginald Birchall expiated on the gallows the crime of killing young Frederick Cornwallis Benwell, whom he lured to this country and shot on the edge of the Princeton Swamp last February.

How beautifully dawned the last morning of the murderer on earth. The sun rose clear, and a reflection of its brilliancy glanced across the walls of the Woodstock prison and danced into the cell where the prisoner already lay awake. His keepers said that the sun's beams were not more cheery when they proclaimed the day than was the face of Reginald Birchall itself when he arose.

After a light breakfast of ham and fried eggs and buttered toast, the clergyman in attendance during the night entreated Birchall to make his peace with God, but it could be seen that the doomed man cared little for prayers.

The March to the Gallows.

A few minutes before 9 o'clock the sheriff and hangman entered his cell and the murderer was securely pinioned. When asked by the sheriff if he had anything to say, he laughed in a half-earnest manner and said:

"No; I have made all the bequests I had to my wife and my lawyer. My life will not, perhaps, be held up as an example to budding youth—it may be as the awful example—yet I am not as black as I have been painted. I shall go to the scaffold for a crime which personally I did not commit."

He was then led from his cell, down the iron spiral stairway to the jail rotunda, thence out through a gloomy corridor lined with cells on either side of the western yard of the jail. From the jail doorway a dozen paces took him to the foot of the scaffold, and in less than five minutes from the time he mounted it he was swinging in the air a dead man. He was true to his promise and died "game."

Buried in the Jail Yard.

Strenuous efforts were made on behalf of Mrs. Birchall to get the authorities to consent to allow her to take the remains of her husband to England, but the sad desire was fristrated by the receipt of a telegram this morning by her solicitor, Mr. Finkle, from the Attorney-General, to the effect that the provisions of the law must be carried out to the letter. Hence Birchall was buried in the jail yard. The hope of burial in England had to be abandoned but the refusal of the authorities of this last favor has caused much indignation.

The Hangman.

The hangman's name was Thomas Ratley, and he is the Steward of the Sunnyside Yacht Club of Toronto. The hanging of Birchall was his nineteenth execution.

Mrs. Birchall was kept under the influence of opiates all night, but she awoke at 10 o'clock, and when informed that all was over she moaned pitifully and fainted.

How He Passed the Night.

During the night he took a few old letters and papers that were not sent out in his trunk, tied them together and gave them to his keeper, telling him to give them to Mrs. Birchall, but not until to-morrow.

In talking with his guard about the execution, Birchall said: "Oh, well, hanging is as easy a death as any other. I shall never know what hurt me." "No doubt that is true," replied the guard. "The hanging will not be painful. The walk to the scaffold will be the worst; that will be a terrible ordeal." "I know that very well," said Birchall, rather sadly, and then he relapsed into a reverie for a few moments, but was soon laughing and talking in his old way.

Reducing the Census Office Force.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Since October 1 the reduction in the clerical force in Census office has been continued until the number of employes is about 2,000. In March next Superintendent Porter hopes to have the work so far advanced that he will be able to dispense with the services of about 500 or 800 clerks. This will leave a force of about 1,500 which will probably be continued for a year and a half from next March.

Our Army Expenses.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—In his annual report to the Secretary of War, Paymaster-General Smith says that during the last fiscal year $14,425,326 were expended on account of the army, a net decrease of $361,494 as compared with the expenditures for the preceeding fiscal year. There was some increase in the item of longevity pay on account of increase in the number of retired officers and enlisted men.

Five New Stars.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Secretary Tracy issued an order increasing the number of stars on the national ensign and Union Jack to 43. Five new stars are added, one each for North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, Washington and Idaho. The stars are arranged in six rows, the top row containing eight stars and the other five rows containing seven stars each.

An Aged Public Servant Drops Dead.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—William Pope of the District of Columbia clerk in the Third Auditor's office, dropped dead from an apoplectic stroke in the Treasury building. He was 83 years of age and had been in the public service for 26 years. His son, William H. Pope, is well known through his newspaper connections in this city.

Train Robber Newberry Held.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Chief Postoffice Inspector Rathbone received a telegram from Chicago saying that Newberry, the train robber, had been arraigned at Fargo, S. D., had waived hearing, and had been committed to jail in default of $5,000 bail.

THE NEW REMEDY.

Prof. Koch's Article on His Cure for Consumption Causes Disappointment.

BERLIN, Nov. 14.—Prof. Koch's article in the Medizinische Wochenblatt causes great disappointment because it does not, as had been announced, reveal the composition and mode of application of the new remedy for consumption, etc.

The article states that the most important property of the curative lymph is its specific effect upon every description of tuberculosis. The history of various cases is given, showing the operation of the lymph, the changes undergone, etc., the information being highly interesting and important from a diagnostic point of view.

Completely successful results are described as having been obtained in pronounced cases of lupus, tuberculosis in the glands and bones, and incipient consumption.

Discussing the Provincial System.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—The church congress of the Protestant Episcopal Church discussed the topic, "Do we need a provincial system." Papers on the subject were read by Rev. J. H. Edgar, D.D., of Rome, N. Y., in favor of the system, and by Rev. John H. Elliott, D. D., of Washington, D. C., in opposition thereto. The discussion of the subject which followed the reading of the papers was participated in by Rev. Dr. Joseph Corry of Saratoga, N. Y., who favored the establishment of the provincial system for the church; Rev. F. Marion McAllister of Elizabeth, N. J.; Rev. Dr. William Kirkus of Baltimore, and Rev. E. B. Boggs of Newark, N. J., who took strong grounds against the establishment of provinces.

Narrow Escape from a Bad Wreck.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Nov. 14.—There was a narrow escape from a bad wreck on the Delaware & Hudson Railroad just outside the village limits. The Montreal express, while crossing Church street, struck a defective frog. The day coach and a Wagner sleeping car ran on a wrong track throwing the day coach on its side, smashing the glass and throwing 50 passengers in a heap. Only one, J. A. Durkee, a traveling man of Sandy Hill, was injured. He had his head and hands cut, but is not dangerously injured.

A Postal Clerk Drowns Himself.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Medbury Austin, a clerk in the postoffice, has been missing since November 1. Facts were learned to-day which leave no doubt that he drowned himself in the river at the foot of Ferry street. Austin had been despondent and on the night of his disappearance had acted strangely. He was seen to get on the ferry boat that night and when the steamer was in midstream a man was seen to fall overboard and was carried away in the swift current.

No More Lottery Business.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Action on the anti-lottery law was taken by the Board of Managers of the Adams Express Company. The Board was unanimously of the opinion that the provisions of the law were morally as obligatory upon the company as they were legally binding on the postal authorities. The Board adopted resolutions making the resolutions which have been issued by the Post Office Department to its subordinates, applicable to the employes of the express company.

The World's Fair.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—The Congressional Committee appointed during the recent session of Congress to inquire into the management and expenditures of the World's Columbian Commission is in session here, and Hon. Roswell P. Flower, of that committee, proposes to enliven the work by making some searching inquiries, with a view to making a decided change in the course so far laid down by the commission.

Murder Cases Disposed Of.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 14.—The Board of Pardons refused to grant a rehearing to the Nicely brothers, the murderers of Herman Umberger, in Somerset County. A pardon was recommended to George Evans of Clearfield, convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment.

Slavin Will Fight Corbett.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Frank P. Slavin, the Australian champion, has signified his willingness to fight "Jim" Corbett of San Francisco, either in England or America, for £1,000 a side.

Cold in the Catskills.

RONDOUT, N. Y., Nov. 14.—White frost prevailed along the Upper Hudson early in the morning. In the Catskills ice formed an inch in thickness.

ASSAD FARRAN'S REVELATIONS.

He Sustains Stanley and Brings Fresh Charges Against Barttelot.

A Young Slave Girl Eaten to Oblige Jameson—The Girl Tied to a Tree and Stabbed Twice—The Natives Cut Pieces from the Body and Jameson Sketched the Terrible Scene.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Times this morning publishes the full text of Assad Farran's affidavit. It is written in bad English and the original is in Assad's handwriting. Assad commences by explaining that he was obliged in London to contradict his account for certain reasons, especially because the committee did not desire him to reveal anything.

He proceeds to describe how Barttelot, after Stanley left Yambuya, finding food scarce, employed armed Soudanese to attack neighboring villages, but found them deserted. He then had recourse to capturing native women and demanding food for their ransom. Bonny did the same thing. The women escaped often. This caused isolation in the camp, the natives each fearing kidnapping. Assad relates how Barttelot daily ordered the men to be given from 25 to 100 lashes for various offences. He describes the arrival of and the negotiations with Tippoo Tib. He speaks of numerous cases of the stealing of food, the thieves being punished with 100 or more lashes each until their flesh was torn.

Terrible Punishment.

In one case the Major ordered the punishment to be stopped, but a few days later the victim, having recovered somewhat, was given 150 more lashes. The man was then compelled to walk ten hours in the sun daily, heavily chained. This was continued for two months, when the victim's sores became putrid and maggoty. The Major then relieved him for a week and Dr. Bonny gave him medicine, after which the punishment of marching in the sun was resumed. The man finally decamped, but was recaptured after four days, through the offering of a reward, and was shot, despite Jameson's protest.

Jameson's Affair.

After dealing with the reports of Stanley's death and the getting of Tippoo's men comes the Jameson affair at Ribakiba. Jameson expressed to Tippoo's interpreter curiosity to witness cannibalism.

Tippoo consulted with the chiefs and told Jameson he had better purchase a slave. Jameson asked the price, and paid six handkerchiefs. A man returned a few minutes afterward with a 10-year-old girl. Tippoo and the chiefs ordered the girl to be taken to the native huts. Jameson himself, Selim, Masondie and Jarhari, Jameson's servant, presented to him by Tippoo, and many others followed. The men who had brought the girl said to the cannibals:

"This is a present from a white man, who desires to see her eaten." The girl was tied to a tree, the natives sharpening their knives the while. One of them stabbed her twice in the belly. She did not scream, but knew what would happen, looking to the right and left for help. When stabbed she fell dead. The natives cut pieces from her body. Some took the legs, arms, breasts and other portions straight to the huts, while others took the entrails to the river and washed them, Jameson in the meantime making rough sketches of the horrible scene. Then we all returned to the chief's house."

No Contest Will be Made.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—It is reported from Portland, Me., that the Democrats of Speaker Reed's district have decided not to contest his seat in the next House of Representatives. For a while there was talk that this might be done if there was a good Democratic majority in the House. The leaders now contemplate an appeal to the House that a committee be sent down there to inquire into election methods.

Trouble in the Farmers' League.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 14.—A secret meeting of the New York State Farmers' League was held here. Resolutions were adopted declaring that President Edgar Knapp has usurped powers not delegated to him, recklessly squandered the funds of the organization, and issued a libelous and pernicious document which purports to be a history of the League. Mr. Knapp did not attend the meeting.

Secured by France.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—A dispatch from Constantinople says that by an imperial decree issued yesterday the right to construct quays on both shores of the Golden Horn is awarded to a French syndicate, which was the first to apply therefor. The granting of these concessions was vigorously opposed by German capitalists who desired to secure the privileges for themselves.

COLLEGE RIOT.

Fierce Fighting Between Ann Arbor Students and a Company of Militia.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 14.—Last night Company A, State troops, turned out to serenade a member just married. They fired a volley while at the house, and the report called out a thousand students. The students guyed the soldiers, and Lieutenant Granger in command ordered two charges. Most vicious and fierce fighting followed.

Irving Dennison, a student and son of Superintendent Dennison of Toledo, died from his injuries and two more will die. The boys are wild with rage at Granger and will lynch him if they lay hands on him. He had no right to call out the company, and was forbidden to do so by the Mayor. No arrests have been made yet. Numbers of the militia were hurt by stones thrown by students.

CRUSHED TO DEATH.

The Death of a Workman Causes His Friend to Commit Suicide.

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 14.—While moving an old seven-ton engine in the shop of the Jarecki Manufacturing Company the blocks slipped, allowing the monster mass to fall, crushing James McSlay, the foreman of the works, and a Swedish laborer named Benson. McSlay died on his way to the hospital and Benson cannot survive, having received internal injuries. Both men were horribly mangled.

Henry Sutter, until lately a fellow-workman with McSlay, was near the works when the accident happened, and learning his friend's death it so worked upon his mind that he went home and shot himself, dying almost instantly. He had been in ill health for some time and out of work.

Eloped With His Employer's Daughter.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 14.—A telegram received from Wheeling caused a young couple to be recognized at the Union Depot. They gave their names as Jessie Turner and Walter Ammon. The lady is the daughter of a wealthy retired merchant and Ammon was her father's private secretary. It was a case of the old, old story, and although Papa Turner said it could not be, the young people said it would be, and the chances are that the will of the young people will prevail. They left for New York on the day express over the Pennsylvania Railroad at 8 a. m., expecting to get married in the evening.

Assemblymen for Four Years.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Nov. 14.—An amendment to the constitution was introduced in the Legislature which, if adopted, will radically change the present system of representation in the General Assembly, all the members of which are at present chosen biennially. The amendment proposes that the members shall be elected for terms of four years, one half of them to be elected biennially. The House killed the bill to make church property taxable, and the Senate rejected the House bill appropriating $30,000 to enable the State of Vermont to make a creditable exhibit at the World's Fair.

Killed by the Cars.

MIDDLEBORO, Mass., Nov. 14.—Fast freight No. 215 from Boston, Conductor Sargent, ran over two men near the Bridgewater Iron Works last night, killing one outright and injuring the other so that he died before reaching Bridgewater. The gatekeeper at Satucket saw three men walking on the track and warned them to keep off. The third man has not been found. The parties are supposed to belong in Brockton, but their names are unknown.

Knocked Out in the Seventh Round.

BRADFORD, Pa., Nov. 14.—John Van Heest, the featherweight pugilist of Buffalo, defeated Martin Neary, of Philadelphia, in a hotly contested seven-round fight early in the morning just over the State line. Neary was knocked out in seventh round by a left-hand swing on the point of the jaw. He made a game fight, however, and took some terrific punishment.

The Trouble in Honduras.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Mr. Jacob Bias, Consul-General of Honduras, in this city, has received the following cablegram relating to the Republic of Honduras: "President Bogran has reorganized his forces, which have arrived from all parts of the country, and is beseiging Sanchez in Tegucigalpa. Guatemala has positively determined to remain neutral in the present conflict."

The Jockey Club Jury Discharged.

ELIZABETH, N. J. Nov. 14.—The jury in the case of the New Jersey Jockey Club, charged with keeping a disorderly house in permitting bookmaking and betting at its track, came into court after being out 30 hours, and said they found it impossible to agree. The judge thereupon discharged the jury. It is understood they stood seven for conviction and five for acquittal.

THE BROKEN BANK.

There is Still Much Uneasiness in Banking Circles in New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The Chief Bank Examiner is in charge of the North River Bank. It will be necessary to raise about $1,000,000 to put it on its feet, and it is generally regarded as doubtful if the bank will be able to resume.

There was a tremendous rush to sell the stock of the North American Company in the Stock Exchange, and its price dropped from 18 to 7.

The prevailing opinion is that the company will go into liquidation, but the officers deny this. There is still much uneasiness in banking circles.

No Intention of Resigning.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Hon. Wm. H Smith is quoted as saying that the Government has no intention of resigning, and no reason to; that Mr. Gladstone's ministry lost 18 seats in five years, and the Conservatives have lost but 14 seats in the same period.

ADIEU TO POLITICS

Judge Thurman Says Farewell to Public Life.

THANKFUL FOR PAST HONORS.

Dramatic Scene at the Grand Banquet at Columbus.

The Ex-Senator Gave Reminiscences of His Seventy-seven Years—Speeches by Ex-President Cleveland, Messrs. Voorhees, Ewing, Brice, Dickinson, Carlisle, Breckinridge of Kentucky and Others.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 14.—The Thurman banquet was a magnificent affair. Nothing like it has ever before been attempted in the Buckeye State. The 14th Regiment Armory was transformed into fairyland. The rafters of its ceiling and its whitewashed walls were hidden from view by thousands of yards of bright colored bunting and silken flags and banners innumerable. Around the floor, rising tier above tier, were the choicest products of the hothouse, while above all towered majestic palms and fragrant exotics. The orchestra was hidden from view in a mass of foliage, in turn surrounded with a curtain of smilax.

At the southern end of the hall, upon a platform heaped with palms and roses in bloom, were crayon portraiture statues of ex-President Cleveland and the especial guest of the evening. The table of honor rested upon a platform running half the length of the hall. Longitudinal with this there were 16 tables, each with accommodation for 80 guests seated vis-a-vis. Every chair had its occupant, while there were hundreds more who, finding it impossible to gain a place on the main floor, were content to view the proceedings from the gallery.

It was shortly after 8 o'clock when the cheering from the large crowd which had gathered on the outside announced the arrival of the distinguished guests, and when the ex-Senator, arm-in-arm with President John J. Lentz of the Thurman Club, appeared upon the scene closely followed by ex-President Cleveland and Senator Joseph McDonald, the cheering was hearty and prolonged. Mr. Thurman sat on the right of the President, his son Allen W., being next to him, and then in succession Senator McDonald, Don M. Dickinson, W. C. P. Breckenridge, General Thomas Ewing, Governor Boyd. To the left of the chair were seated Grover Cleveland, General R. A. Harrison, Bishop John A. Watterson, Daniel Lamont, and Governor Jackson. Nearly two hours were occupied in discussing the elaborate menu.

It was after 10 o'clock when President Lentz rapped for order and in a few well chosen words, proposed the toast of "Our Guest," Mr. Thurman, on rising to respond, was greeted with uproarious applause which lasted several moments. Silence having been restored, he spoke as follows:

"I am not here to-night to make an elaborate speech. I am here to express in a few sentences my heartfelt appreciation of the honor you have so kindly seen fit to do me: to thank with my whole soul my neighbors, my fellow citizens of Ohio and the distinguished gentlemen from other States for the mark of friendship and esteem. I am here at the age of 77 to repeat my testimony, so often given, of my confidence in the beneficial effects of free institutions and my firm belief of their duration on this continent and their gradual but certain extension over other and larger portions of the globe. I hope that it is not presumptuous in me to say that I think that I have some of the necessary qualifications of a witness on this subject. Short as my life has been, in comparison with the lives of nations, it has been long enough for me to see my native land, under free institutions, increase in population more than seven fold; in wealth in a far, very far, greater degree; in extent of territory more than double its area, in the general well being and prosperity of its people, and in their educational advantages and religious privileges without a rival in the world, while its magnificent works of internal improvement, its wonderful agriculture, its great mines and manufactures, and its marvelous means of communication, the creations of science and skill, surpass anything before known by the human race."

A Dramatic Scene.

Toward the close of his address, delivered at times with considerable difficulty, and in a voice that could be heard but a few yards distant, he suddenly gathered up his strength and throwing his shoulders backward, while his eyes swept the great throng that had gathered to do him honor, he spoke as follows:

"My friends, let me say to you in all sincerity, and without the least mental reservation, that I am not, nor shall I be again, a candidate for office."

The stillness which for a couple of moments followed this declaration was intense. It seemed as though every one of the thousand or more upon whom the words han fallen felt that he had lost a friend. Then as with trembling tones the speaker went on to say that he felt that he had been sufficiently honored by his party, there was a reversion of feeling, the vast audience could no longer restrain itself; every man arose to his feet and napkins were waved amid cheers. And amid the enthusiasm, the statesman who had practically said goodbye, sank into his seat.

The announcement of the next toast, "Citizenship in America," and the presentation of ex-President Cleveland to respond was the signal of another outburst of enthusiasm. Other toasts were responded to by Senator McDonald General Thomas Ewing, Hon. W. C. P. Breckinridge, and Hon. Don M. Dickinson. The absence of Henry Watterson, who was to have responded to a toast, was due to the fact that the theme he selected conflicted with the one assigned Mr. Dickinson. He therefore withdrew his acceptance.

Congratulatory messages were received from Tammany Hall, the County Democracy, and, in fact, all the great Democratic organizations of the country.

Arrest of a Notorious Burglar.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—Joseph, alias "Rory" Simms, alias Wilson, a notorious burglar, was arrested here last night charged with having robbed the safe of Frank Hoffa of Washington, D. C., on October 11 of $10,000 worth of diamonds. Some of the jewelry taken was recovered. Simms had confederates in the operation, and they will probably be arrested in a few days.

A FATAL CRASH.

Fearful Plunge of an Overland Pacific Train Through a Trestle.

SALEM, Ore., Nov. 14.—Shortly after 8:30 o'clock p. m. the Overland Pacific train, south-bound, went through the north end of a long trestle over Lake Labish, about five miles from Salem. The trestle must have given away as soon as the engine struck it, and the train and trestle all went down together. The engine was overturned and half buried in the mud, and following this were tender, mail, baggage, and express cars, smoking car and tourist sleeper. All were broken to pieces.

The total number of deaths from the accident will probably reach as high as 10. Laid out on the ground was the mangled corpses recovered from the wreck; reclining on improvised beds, about the fires were the wounded; standing about lending what help they could were those less seriously wounded and around these and everywhere were the crowds who had come to help or from curiosity.

Among those injured were Captain Jack Crawford, the poet scout, slightly bruised. Samuel Anson, New York city, side and back injured. Dr. Rammel and wife of Philadelphia, both injured in spine. They were returning from a trip around the world. James McGarry, U. S. Marshal of Utah, leg broken and badly cut about the head. William Kimberly, sprained back. The above list comprises only those who were seriously injured. Over 100 were slightly injured.

The Lottery Company's Revenge.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The Critic publishes the statement that the recent flurry in stocks and the temporary panic in the money market were due to the withdrawal from circulation by the Louisiana Lottery Company of its $7,000,000 surplus. This withdrawal, says the informant, was due to a desire to injure Postmaster-General Wanamaker who was reported a heavy borrower; and the motive which inspired this act is said to have been revenge for the injury inflicted on the lottery company by the recently enacted postal law for which Mr. Wanamaker is held responsible.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Everything points to a consolidation of the League baseball clubs in New York to-day.

Dr. H. M. Dexter, editor of the Congregationalist, died during the morning at his residence in New Bedford, Mass.

Daniel Sidney Appleton, senior member of the well-known publishing firm of D. Appleton & Co., of New York, is dead.

Albert R. Welton was found guilty at Birmingham, Conn., of arson and the death of Mrs. Maria Slie on the morning of April 24.

Dillon and O'Brien received an enthusiastic welcome at Worcester, Mass., and more substantial sympathy in the shape of $2,000.

The convention of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at Boston adjourned to meet in Providence, R. I., in June.

The police at Toronto, Ont., arrested Tony Calozzo and Michael Sullivan, who are wanted in Altoona, Pa., on a charge of embezzlement.

The police of Leavenworth, Kan., seized the wine to be used at a banquet of the Bandana Club in honor of Judge Thurman and were arrested on a charge of theft.

The ninth day of Signor Succi's fast in New York city found him apparently in good physical condition. His pulse to-day was 60; temperature 98, and weight 130 1-2 pounds, a loss of one-half a pound since yesterday.

Therese Lorenz, a young German woman who arrived in this country in April last, is about to return to Germany. She is ill with consumption, and having read in a German paper of Dr. Koch's cure, determined to go to him and be cured while she has energy to travel.

It is reported in Chicago that O'Sullivan, the iceman, who is now serving a life sentence in Joliet for complicity in the murder of Dr. Cronin, has intimated to a number of friends who called upon him this week that he is anxious to tell all he knows about the murder and thinks he has already suffered enough for the misdeeds of others.

Assemblyman W. F. Sheehan, of Buffalo, N. Y., emphatically denies the statement in a despatch from Albany that he had made a schedule of the appointments he would make when chosen Speaker of the Assembly. He also denied that he has had a conference with Chairman Murphy and Gov. Hill and further say that he has not been out of Buffalo since before the election.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—For New England and Eastern New York: Fair; slightly warmer; southerly winds.

For New Jersey: Fair till Saturday night; slightly warmer; southerly winds.

For Western New York: Fair; warmer; southerly winds.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—Special inducements will be offered at Edsall's to-morrow. The best goods at the lowest prices is his motto.

—Read the advertisement, ye smokers, of Guttman, the tobacconist, on West Second street, in another column.

—There will be no meeting of the shorthand class of the Y. M. C. A., to-night, because of the Mills meeting for men.

—An employe of The Pond Machine Tool Co., named Whitehead, fell from a beam yesterday and was so bruised that he is laid off from work.

—A new and interesting advertisement appears today from the United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association, offering $2 worth of goods for $1. Read it.

—J. W. Van Sickle, the enterprising North avenue butcher, is selling the celebrated Philadelphia scrappel. It is a delicious morsel these frosty mornings.

—The meeting of the Bible class for ladies, at the Young Men's Christian Association rooms, will be omitted this week, owing to the absence of E. L. Suffern from the city.

—The night electrician at the electric light station, was struck in the face by a loose piece of flying belting, the other night, and his under lip was so badly cut that it was necessary to sew it.

—John P. Emmons, whose reputation for reliability as a mason and builder none can question, publishes a card in today's PRESS which will interest all who desire good work at fair prices. He gives prompt attention to jobbing and all other orders.

—Those in need of a good hanging lamp, stand lamp, or stove, would do well to call at the store of the Pierson Hardware Company, and take advantage of the 20 per cent. reduction on lamps, and 10 per cent. reduction on stoves now offered to cash buyers.

—It is said that Mayor Rankin, the late Republican candidate for Senator in this District, has left Dr. Kempshall's church in Elizabeth which he has been attending, on account of the stand which the reverend gentlemen took in the late political campaign.—Westfield Leader.

—The new line of the New Jersey Postal Telegraph Company will be completed to New Brunswick in about four weeks. The local wire will extend from Newark by way of Plainfield. Another line will run from Newark by way of Elizabeth and Rahway to New Brunswick.

—The Columbia Social Club will give a ball at Amphion Hall Wednesday evening, Nov. 19. The grand march will begin at nine o'clock. The committee of arrangements is composed of David Angerbauer, F. S. Moore, James Daly, Wm. Howell, U. G. Force and Theodore Smith.

—A salmon trout weighing 1½ pounds, was captured below the dam at Bound Brook, Monday, by John Linbarger of Plainfield. It is the first salmon trout known to have been taken in Raritan waters, and local fishermen are alive to the bright possibilities of the future.—Somerville Messenger.

The Boys' Club Military Company.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PLAINFIELD AND VICINITY:—Our club, which you all have heard of in one way or another, has now been opened one month and the results gained have been very gratifying both to the Superintendent and local committee. The membership to date is two hundred and thirty-five with an average attendance for the month of fifty-six. The games and books used are of the very best kind and are, I know, fully appreciated by the class of boys that we hope to reach. Everything that could be done to make the rooms attractive has been done by the committee in charge, and I cordially invite you all to come and visit us and see the good work we are trying to do. The rooms are open every evening except Sundays and holidays from seven to nine.

The boys have formed a military company and meet every Thursday afternoon to drill. They are also forming a drum corps to use when on parades. Last evening a few met and selected the following officers who were considered the best fitted for the positions: Captain, M. C. Sutphen; 1st Lieut., Edw. Fluck; 2d Lieut., Gillard Apgar; 1st Sergt., John Moran; 2d Sergt., Erwin Neighbor; 3d Sergt., John Taylor; Color Bearer, William Marsh.

I hope to be able to let our friends see the boys on parade about the first of December, if possible. We would gladly receive as a gift or loan, an American flag and three or four army swords for the use of the boys.

All those who have so kindly contributed to the club, are more than repaid for the good they have done I am most certain. Hoping to see you at our rooms, when you find it convenient, where you will receive a hearty welcome.

W. H. MINER,
Superintendent.

Nov. 14, 1890.

Mr. Evans Declines.

The support of a disreputable newspaper very often defeats a candidate. John F. Evans seems to know this, or else he is too proud a man to be so associated. Consequently, since he was indorsed and recommended by such a paper yesterday, he has today announced his decision not to accept the Republican nomination for Councilman from the Fourth Ward.

TEN-SECOND SERMONS BY THE PEOPLE.

Another Innovation at the Mills Revival Meetings.—Two Hundred More Converts.—Programme of the Closing Days.

So many people flocked to hear the Rev. B. Fay Mills at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last night that an overflow meeting had to be provided for, and two or three hundred who were crowded out of the church assembled in the chapel and were led by Mr. Greenwood in a service of song, devotion and prayer.

The sermon of Mr. Mills was on the text "Who is on the Lord's side?" and many reasons he gave for one's being an acknowledged soldier for Jesus Christ. After the sermon he gave the usual opportunity for those who desired to become Christians to indicate it by rising, and more than one hundred stood up.

When he had done preaching himself he gave everybody else an opportunity to preach a ten-second sermon, on the same text he had used, and a host of people gave an individual reason for being on the Lord's side. Many of those who thus testified were recent converts. The testimony was a most convincing proof of Mr. Mills's argument that the Lord's side was the reasonable side, and the right side, and the only side. There was a great silence, and not a reason given, when Mr. Mills gave an opportunity for unbelievers to tell why they were not on the Lord's side.

A great many new converts signed cards stating that they desired henceforth to lead a Christian life, and expressing their church and pastoral preferences.

This afternoon Mr. Mills preached an eloquent sermon especially to mothers. To-night he will conduct a service for men only. Mr. Greenwood and the large choir will sing. To-morrow morning J. D. Spicer will lead a business men's prayer meeting on the subject of "Rest"—Matt. xi: 28. At 3:45 a prayer meeting for women will be held in the lecture room of the Crescent Avenue church, on the same topic. Saturday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, a special children's service will be conducted by Mr. Greenwood in the Methodist church. Sunday morning Mr. Mills will preach to men only at the Crescent Avenue church, at 10:30 o'clock. At the same hour a service for women will be held in the First Baptist church, and one for all classes, men and women, at the Methodist church. Sunday evening Mr. Mills will preach to the unconverted, in the Crescent Avenue church, and services for church members will be held in the First Baptist and Park Avenue Baptist churches.

The Trinity Reformed and First Presbyterian churches will be closed all day Sunday, and the Park Avenue Baptist church will be closed in the morning, and the Methodist church in the evening. All the churches will be opened Sunday, November 23, when regular services will be resumed. The last Mills meeting will be held Monday evening in the Crescent Avenue church, as first announced exclusively by THE PRESS.

At the Sunday morning service in the M. E. church the Rev. A. R. Dilts will preach. The topic for the woman's meeting in the First Baptist church will be "The Rescue Band of the Florence Mission." At 3:45 P. M. Mr. Mills will preach to young people only, at the Crescent Avenue church. The 7:30 P. M. meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church will be addressed by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, and that at the First Baptist church by the Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham.

Struck by the Train He was Waiting for.

A. D. Phillips, an electrician well-known in Plainfield, was injured by the cars at the North avenue station of the Central Railroad in this city at six o'clock last evening. He was crossing the tracks in front of the station when his attention was attracted in the direction of Netherword by the shrieking of the whistle of the locomotive attached to a coal train which had halted near the Peace street bridge. He therefore failed to notice the headlight of the Scranton express due at 5:31 and then approaching from the West, and was struck by the front of the engine and thrown a short distance to the freight house side of the track. The train was coming to a stop, and the fact of the speed being greatly reduced prevented a fatality. Mr. Phillips was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where it was found that beyond some ugly cuts on the face his only serious injury was the fracture of the collar-bone. Matron Walrod reports that is he resting easily and is doing nicely.

A singular incident of the mishap is that the train which struck Mr. Phillips is the same one he came to Plainfield on in the morning, and the one he was to return by to his home in Jersey City. Mr. Phillips has a great many contracts for electric lighting in Plainfield, including the wiring of the Union County Club House, and was to remove next week with his family, to a house on Fourth street rented from Dr. Endicott.

The Coming Comet.

It is fancied by a grateful patron that the next comet will appear in the form of a huge bottle, having "Golden Medical Discovery" inscribed upon it in bold characters. Whether this conceit and high compliment will be verified, remains to be seen, but Dr. Pierce will continue to send forth that wonderful vegetable compound, and potent eradicator of disease. It has no equal in medicinal and health-giving properties, for imparting vigor and tone to the liver and kidneys, in purifying the blood, and through it cleansing and renewing the whole system. For scrofulous humors, and consumption, or lung scrofula, in its early stages, it is a positive specific. Druggists.

OPPOSING LAWYERS AND CLIENTS AGREE

The Burlingham Will Contest Settled. Muhlenberg Hospital to Receive Its Legacy in Full.

The Burlingham will contest had dragged its slow length along until yesterday, when some dozen or more of the litigants and their witnesses, with their four lawyers, the surrogate and stenographer assembled in the court room at Elizabeth, prepared for the fray.

The executors were represented by Wm. M. Stillman and Craig A. Marsh; the contestants by J. B. Coward and Judge Joseph Cross, and the Muhlenberg Hospital by Craig A. Marsh. As the first witness was about to be sworn, one of the parties wanted to know whether the matter could not be settled. The lawyers put their heads together and then conferred with their clients. Then followed alternate conferences of lawyers and clients until the day was consumed. The final result was that the contestants and the executors made mutual concessions and it was agreed that the will should be admitted to probate and Elias B. Pope be appointed administrator with the will annexed. The Muhlenberg Hospital made no concession whatever, but will receive its legacy of three thousand dollars in full.

The people of Plainfield were chiefly interested in this bequest to its hospital and will rejoice with the board of governors of that institution in learning that technicalities were not permitted to stand in the way of the fulfillment of the long cherished desire of both Dr. Burlingham and his wife.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. Mills sat for a photograph in Mr. Langhorne's studio, today.

Mrs. E. N. Erickson gave a card party at her home on West Eighth street, last evening.

W. C. Hubbard of Plainfield is the delegate representing the Phi Chi Chapter at the Delta Kappa Epsilon convention in New York this week.

Since the operation that was performed to save the life of S. O. Doane, symptoms developed that gave great cause for the anxiety of his physicians and family. This morning the patient is no better.

Ex-Mayor Randolph has been obliged to put aside his manifold duties as manager of the affairs of the Tilden estate, for a few weeks, and go West to look after his large interests in ranch property and live stock.

Picton Station, situated on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, midway between Westfield and Rahway, is named after the late A. Picton Scudder, a life-long resident of Westfield, and for many years Chosen Freeholder from Westfield township.

Charles Watt, who spent the Summer at Hotel Netherwood, is so charmed with Plainfield that he has brought his family back with him from Europe and leased ex-Councilman Myers' residence at Seventh and Sycamore streets, for the Winter.

John M. Crane started for St. Louis, last evening. He will be away for a couple of weeks at least, but hopes to return in time to vote for Councilman Ackerman. Mr. Crane's errand is the establishment of sub-agencies of the American Casualty Insurance and Security Co., which will be under his superintendency.

A. T. Slauson, the banker, now living on Second place, has bought the extensive lot at the corner of Ninth street and Second place, and will have built thereon an elegant home. Architect Smith, who is the designer of the Corporation Counsel's residence on West Eighth street, has been engaged by Mr. Slauson to do his best.

One of the most earnest co-workers of the Rev. B. Fay Mills during the existing revival is J. H. Manning, the popular and efficient General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association in this city. It was through Mr. Manning's personal efforts that so many men have been induced to close their places of business at unusual hours to aid in the work of the evangelist.

Still Cherished Mementoes of Westfield's Gratitude.

[From the Westfield Leader.]

In the recent fireman's parade, Foreman C. R. Hope of Gazelle Engine Company of Plainfield, and Foreman Robinson of Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company, of Scotch Plains, both carried beautiful silver speaking-trumpets, the inscription on each of which speaks for itself in more ways than one. Interpret it for yourself. Here it is as it appears on the Plainfield instruments:

In Gratitude
Presented to Gazelle Engine Co. No. 1
of Plainfield, N. J.,
by residents of Westfield, N. J., for valuable assistance rendered at the fire in Westfield, N. J., August 16, 1874.

This was the fire which came very near destroying the whole of this town at the time mentioned, and it is interesting to note that the same companies and many of the same men come to Westfield sixteen years after on a brotherly errand bearing as one of their most precious trophies the souvenir presented to them for their unselfish services on that occasion by a grateful and appreciative people.

Services at the Seventh-Day Church.

The Rev. Dr. Lewis will preach at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, at 10:30 o'clock to-morrow morning on the subject: "The power of personal friendship in bringing men to Christ, and in leading them away from Him." All are cordially invited to attend.

THEY'RE ALL RIGHT.

Nothing the Matter with Haynes, Ivins, Hesse and Gallup for Councilmen.

The Democrats of the several wards of the city, met last evening and nominated for election to the council a quartette of men in every way well fitted and worthy the support of all citizens irrespective of party.

The nominee of the first ward is Joseph A. Haynes, the popular station agent of this city for many years. Under his direction the traveling public and the merchants who ship and receive freight, have been provided with every comfort and facility in their patronage of the Central railroad. Not a want about the station is unsatisfied, and in every department is evidenced the thoroughness and carefulness of the man who has been nominated for Councilman from the first ward. He is strongly in favor of the removal of the freight house, and his influence with the railroad company is such that should he be elected the people may feel assured that the unsightly freight yard will in a few months be turned into a beautiful park.

The nominee of the second ward is DeWitte Clinton Ivins, a man who has occupied the highest positions of trust in New York city. In intelligence, breeding and education he is unsurpassed, while as a business man he is shrewd and far-sighted but at the same time thoroughly conscientious and the soul of honor. He will be found, if elected, hand in hand with his colleague, Councilman Spangenberg, at work for the undivided interests of the whole people without regard to politics. Represented by two such men, no ward will be more justly envied than the second.

Councilman Gallup, who was unanimously and enthusiastically renominated, needs no introduction to the people. Ask any honest and unbiased man in the fourth ward, and he'll tell you there was never in the Council a member who better served his contituents; and they will prove how his services are appreciated, and teach the two blackguards who have defamed him a lesson, by triumphantly returning him to the Council.

In that Republican pocket borough, the third ward, Justus H. Hesse, a neighbor of Col. Tyler's, was nominated by the Democrats to run against Ernest R. Ackerman. Mr. Hesse is a New York importer. He is a bright business man and very popular socially. But a majority of 150 can't be overcome in a total vote of only twice that number, when the candidate on the majority's side is just as bright and just as popular. Mr. Hesse's candidacy, however, will bring out the vote of every member of his party and help to accomplish the success of the head of the ticket.

ALEXANDER GILBERT THE CHOICE.

He is Nominated for Mayor by the Republicans, After a Close Contest Against Councilman Roberts.

After much wire pulling and the taking of five ballots in the Republican city convention, last evening, Alexander Gilbert got just enough votes and was declared the party's nominee for the mayoralty. He was closely pressed for the nomination by Councilman Daniel S. Roberts who started well, gained a vote on every ballot and was only three short of a nomination when enough of the five remaining Rockfellow delegates went to Gilbert. The ballots were as follows:

Gilbert	18	19	19	20	21
Roberts	14	15	16	17	18
Rockfellow	8	6	5	2	1

J. B. Coward was chairman of the convention, and C. A. Baynon, secretary. The election officers were E. R. Bird, W. B. Wadsworth and C. A. Baynon. Ernest R. Ackerman nominated Mr. Gilbert; S. P. T. Wilbur nominated Mr. Roberts, and O. L. Jenkins nominated Mr. Rockfellow.

The other offices on the ticket were filled by acclamation as follows:

Assessor—Joseph A. Hubbard.
Collector—John Johnson.
Treasurer—Alexander Titsworth.
School Trustee—Edward L. Finch.
Commissioners of Appeal—J. Fred MacDonald, Manning Vermeule.

In peremptorily declining a re-nomination as school trustee, Mr. Murray said that he had served as such for fifteen years, and felt he had done his duty in that respect, at least. He considered the office more honorable than any other, and would rather be elected a school trustee than Mayor. He thanked the people for returning him so many times (once unanimously) but his duties had grown so many, that he was forced to throw off some of them. "The schools of Plainfield," he continued, "are second to none in the State, which is owing to the election of such trustees as have served in the past, both Republicans and Democrats, and are serving now in the persons of my colleagues, Dr. Huribut, Mr. Kirkner, Mr. Babcock and Dr. Probasco."

Mr. Newhall was nominated by I. C. Pierson, but he, eventually, also declined. The expressions of regret among the delegates were audible when he announced such decision. Mr. Finch was then chosen without a contest.

Notes of the Theatres.

A few months since no metropolitan production was considered complete without its "skirt" dance. Now the terpsichorean craze is the "kangaroo" dance, which, in the willowy manipulations of the female form, goes a step or two further—and higher—than its sensuous predecessor.

Ward McAllister, the leader of New York's exclusive Four Hundred, in his recent contribution to current literature, "Society as I Have Found It," asserts that no gentleman's outfit is complete without a crest. This valuable adornment will be one of the distinguishing adjuncts of the hero in "A High Roller," the new spectacular-farcical production which Messrs Gilmore and Comstock, of the Academy, New York, are to exploit next season.

A souvenir performance is not an uncommon event, but a souvenir week is rather an oddity. The one thousandth performance of "The Old Homestead" is soon to be celebrated, and the management of the Academy, New York, realizing that a single performance would be inadequate to satisfy the demands of the play's countless admirers, are contemplating giving a week's souvenir performances. Meanwhile, souvenir or no souvenir, Denman Thompson continues to portray "Uncle Joshua" to ever delighted and ever crowded houses.

"The Soudan," at the big Boston Theatre, is still the phenomenal success it was the very first week of its presentation. During the first five weeks of its run there was an actual attendance of over 126,000 people. This is positively the largest number of people that has ever attended a performance in the same period of time in the city of Boston.

Plainfielders Make Bargains in Horse Flesh.

M. Quinn, F. Fosher, A. Lutkins, and Newton Smalley, all made good investments in horse flesh at the sale at the American Horse Exchange yesterday.

The only daughter Flora Temple, 2,19½, ever had was offered by Samuel B. Duryea, of Midwont Farm, Brooklyn, and was sold to M. Quinn. This was the nineteen-year-old bay mare The Queen's Daughter, by imported Leamington, thoroughbred, from Flora Temple. Her daughter, Flora Leamington, sired by Alderman, was also sold to Mr. Quinn, as were Dandy Wilkes, a fine black stallion sired by Sherman's Wilkes, dam Beauty, and a black colt by Wonderful 9960, son of Duroc Volunteer 3123, out of Misfortune.

Coming to Plainfield.

Fayette Welsh, a black-face star, who has gained considerable reputation as an artist of no mean ability, and little Dottie Pine, who is a phenomenal child actress, will introduce a highly sensational drama, entitled "Pert; or The Girl Detective," at Amphion Hall next Monday and Tuesday evenings. Fayette Welsh is a first-class comedian, and the able support of Dottie Pine makes the performance a highly creditable one.

The agreeable pleasantness in taking Hires' Cough Cure overcomes all thoughts of medicine. At the same time it is the most effectual and harmless remedy ever discovered for coughs, colds, hoarseness, croup, and whooping-cough. You want to remember this!

A case of interest to the secret orders of the State was decided by Chief Justice Beasley yesterday. The suit is brought by George R. McVey against the Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

James L. McVey became a member of this order and was given a certificate which entitled him to all its privileges and to participate in the beneficiary fund to the amount of $2,000, which sum was to be payable at his death to George K. McVey, the plaintiff. The beneficiary brought suit for this money, but the Order claimed that McVey made false representations as to his habits, etc., when he was given the certificate. The Chief Justice says: "When untrue answers to interrogatives propounded in writting to the the applicant at the time of his procuring a written contract from a society certifying for the payment of a certain sum, are given, and there is no allusion in such contract to such answers, the answers are not waranted to be true, but are mere representations. If representations of this sort are willfully false, and constituted in part the basis of the contract, the contract will be void, on the ground of fraud. The rule for a new trial in this case is discharged."

A Fair Proposal.

A reporter of THE PRESS gleaned the following in an interview with the general agent of the Stetson's Uncle Tom's Cabin Company, which will appear at Music Hall, next Monday evening.

"This company is undoubtedly the largest and best Uncle Tom Co., traveling, comprising 30 first-class artists. So complete is their scenery that the piece could be put on in a barn with better scenic effects than is produced by any other company. They have a double band of white and colored musicians, an orchestra of ten pieces, and one that is hard to beat. The African mandolin students, with this company, are the first and only colored people appearing in public and performing on the Spanish mandolin. The Lone Star Quartette is claimed to be without equal, and the Topsies, there they have something that charms all. The Topsies are two young ladies, and their superiors in character and tepsichorean artists have not yet been produced on the American stage; two Marks, the best that a good, big salary can secure. The street parade is the finest ever witnessed, and of the performance we can say that if they do not give the best production of this sterling old drama ever given in this city, they will cheerfully refund the price of admission. Will any other Uncle Tom's Company on the road do this? No, because they have not the show to do so. Stetson Co. have."

Gifts of Silver Showered Upon Them.

The Red Bank Standard contains a lengthy and interesting account of the silver wedding anniversary of the Rev. E. Everett Jones and wife, formerly of New Market. Mr. Jones was married to Miss Emma L. Sherborne of Philadelphia, twenty-five years ago, just before becoming pastor of the Rahway Baptist church. He was stationed at Rahway four years, Bridgeport, Pa., three years, New Market, ten years, Coatesville, Pa., four years and a half, and is now stationed at Middletown. The wedding celebration was a very elaborate affair. Nearly two hundred guests, including several from Plainfield, were present. An elegant supper was served, and numerous valuable gifts were received, including a bag containing fifty silver dollars. Mr. and Mrs. Jones have had three children: Florence died at the age of 12, at New Market; and May S. is now a teacher and Benton S. a pupil at Peddie Institute.

Ward Nominations for the Minor Offices.

At their respective primaries, last evening, the Democrats made the following nominations:

First Ward—Justice of the Peace—Louis F. Wadsworth. Constable—Thomas Callahan.

Second Ward—Justice of the Peace—Charles S. A. Davis. Constable—William Callahan.

Third Ward—Justice of the Peace—Charles Glaentzer. Constable—Edward Birmingham.

Fourth Ward—Justice of the Peace—Levi Hetfield. Constable—Richard Mattis.

Begins and Ends in a Laugh.

The Music Hall management take great pleasure in announcing that A. M. Palmer's "Aunt Jack" company has been secured to appear in this city to-morrow evening. "Aunt Jack" was the Madison Square Theatre success of the season of '89-90, and, as presented by the company of players specially organized by Messrs Palmer & Taylor, its success has been even more gratifying in other cities than when the comedy was played in New York. The New York Tribune says: "Its sole purpose is to impart innocent pleasure, and it begins and ends in a laugh."

Opposite Results in Similar Cases.

The jury in the trial of the New Jersey Jockey Club, after being kept out over two nights, came into court at Elizabeth again this morning still unable to agree. They stood seven to five for conviction, and were discharged.

But the jury in the trial of the Linden Blood Horse Association—a case that differs in no way, not even in the evidence—took warning by the fate of the other jury that was locked up two nights. They took only one ballot and brought in a verdict of guilty at once.

MORTGAGES IN NEW JERSEY.

Interesting Facts Presented in the Report of the State Labor Bureau.

The mortgage indebtedness of New Jersey farmers, as given in the report of the Bureau of Labor and Statistics, is interesting. There has been a constant increase in the total number of recorded mortgages since the business revival at the close of the last decade. Of the eleven years which the Bureau enumeration covers, 1870 shows the largest number, although but little more than that recorded in 1888.

The tendency in periods of business activity has been toward an increase in mortgages and decrease in forclosures, and the reverse when the industrial conditions have changed; and generally an increase in forclosures has been accompanied by a falling of in mortgages. This tendency has been marked in those counties which are largely urban, namely, Camden, Essex, Hudson, Passaic and Union, as well as in those which have considerable urban population, or Bergen, Cumberland, Mercer, Middlesex and Morris, but not so much in the seven rural counties, and still less in Atlantic, Cape May, Monmouth and Ocean, which may be classed as the seaside counties.

The New Jersey building and loan associations had in 1888, 5,304 borrowing members, with $14,000,000 invested on bond and mortgage, but the official record does not show plainly which mortgages have been given to secure purchase money, and which for money borrowed.

Hunterdon county farming property has declined largely in value since 1880. In Somerset county it is said farming lands have depreciated nearly one-half since 1880, while high taxes, large interest accounts, and the low price of products threaten to swamp many of the tillers of the soil. A similar and perhaps a gloomier story comes from Sussex county. The depreciation in the value of farm land about Belvidere since 1880 is about twenty-five per cent. William H. Morrow says:

"Holders of mortgages delay as long as possible to forclose from disinclination to add costs, and thus swell the amount due. Mortgage debtors are not now making money beyond paying their interest. I think interest is paid more promptly on urban than on rural properties. Farm mortgages are paid only when there is a transfer of the premises and the purchaser has the money to pay, or on the settlement of estates when it is necessary for money to pass. I do not think that twenty per cent. of farmers, who have their farms mortgaged to the amount of forty per cent. of their value, are making a living now."

The farmers of Warren county are said to be thoroughly depressed and disheartened owing to the low price of grain.

Installment mortgages have become very common. The building and loan associations hold them almost entirely. During the past three or four years there has been much pressure by mortgagors to induce mortgagees to accept the principal before it is due, indicating prosperity on the part of the former.

Alden's Manifold Cyclopedia.

Volume XV. of Alden's Manifold Cyclopedia includes the titles from Fluctuate to Galvanism. Following the same general lines as its predecessors it is, in some respects, a marked advance upon them in solid worth. We notice with pleasure the large number of practical topics which are treated, and the thoroughness and accuracy with which they have been handled. There is also the same thorough treatment of scientific matters and of the more abstruse subjects which naturally belong to such a work.

Among the thousands of topics treated in this volume we notice that food and drink has 9 pages; force, 12 pages; forms of address, 4 pages; fruit, 13 pages; galvanism, 35 pages. There are also biographies of Rear Admiral Foote; Archibald Forbes; Benjamin Franklin; Gen. John C. Fremont; James A. Froude; Robert Fulton; Galileo; and many other prominent men. The pronunciation of the words is another prominent and useful feature—especially in the case of proper names. Specimen pages with easy installment terms, sent free on request. John B. Alden, publisher, New York, Chicago and Atlanta.

BRITISH PEOPLE ROUSED.

Indignation General on Account of the Serpent Disaster.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Fresh dispatches from Coruna give a more detailed story of the foundering of the British torpedo cruiser Serpent.

It appears that the inrush of water caused the boilers to explode. This probably accounts for the great loss of life. It is believed that the navigator of the vessel failed to allow for the effect of a strong shoreware current that prevails at that point on the coast.

H. M. S. Lapwing has left Vigo for the scene of the Serpent's wreck. An Admirality officer, in an interview on the subject of the disaster, has expressed the opinion that the Serpent's compasses may have been disturbed by reason of the contiguity of iron along the coast.

The escape of the three sailors who managed to reach the shore was simply miraculous, and their bruised and weak condition gave evidence of the terrible struggle they had been through. They are now being cared for in the hospital. They will be ordered home to England as soon as their condition will permit of their removal, to testify before the inquiry which will be held by the Board of Admiralty.

The Queen is full of solicitude and has again telegraphed the expression of her sympathy and a request that she be furnished all the information obtainable, bearing on the disaster.

There is great indignation throughout the country and high naval officers are hissed in the streets of London.

GREELEY'S INITIALS.

Carved in the Door of an Humble Village School-House.

Where the Great Editor Learned Readin', Writin' and Cipherin'—Primitive Customs Prevailing in the Rural Districts of Quiet Vermont.

In the Champlain valley near the Vermont shore of the lake lies the quiet hamlet of West Haven. This little village, writes a New York Tribune correspondent, is made up of a few farmhouses, an abandoned power mill in a hollow by the roadside, an inn, known as Wood's Tavern, and the village school-house, standing at the junction of two cross-roads. Like many other villages and farms in New England, West Haven has its feature of interest, which is the little old school-house attended by Horace Greeley when he was a boy. When the fall and winter term opens some twenty-five or thirty pupils are registered on the school-master's roll-book.

The school-house is a one-roomed, one-storied frame building that has watched over the destinies of several generations. Here the grandparents of the village children of to-day learned "readin', writin' and cipherin'," and on the old nail-studded door the aspiring youth of past generations have carved their names in rude letters, and their posterity is fast filling up the remaining spaces.

Every thing smacked of age when the school-house was seen by the writer—the well-whittled desks and benches that stretched half way across the room, leaving only a narrow aisle that led to the back row of seats. The walls blotched here and there with glaring new clapboards and an old jute bag that took the place of one of the window-panes. On several places were stuck the ragged remnants of notices of town meetings or "lost or stolen" placards. In the center of the room was an old box stove, full of cracks and contrariness; and in one corner near the master's desk was a pile of hard maple logs, sawed three feet long, for the stove.

Among the many names and initials cut into the school-house door was one that arrests attention at once and instantly makes the old door the most interesting feature of the room, the magic charm of which is felt wherever merit is known and recognized. It was the name of a hero who won the love and admiration of his countrymen by virtue of his sterling integrity, the honest simplicity of his nature and the broad reach of his commanding genius. It was the name of Horace Greeley.

At the time the writer visited West Haven there were people living in the district who had been his school-mates and who delighted in showing to every new-comer the desk in one corner of the room where he sat when a boy at school, and also the road he traveled when he left his home to learn the printer's trade at the neighboring village of Poultney.

Modern progress seems to have neglected West Haven. The inhabitants still retain all the primitive customs and traditions of their ancestry. Some of their methods are exceedingly ingenious, especially in their social gatherings.

Every other Friday evening an old man from a neighboring village conducted a singing-school in the school-house. Singing-school night was looked forward to as the main opportunity that presented itself to break the dull monotony of a lonely Vermont winter. Here the old folk gathered to exchange the gossip of the settlement, and here the love matches of the year were started or completed. Here a girl of the village was privileged to show her preference for her chosen swain for the first time in public, and here the writer saw practiced an ingenious method of getting out of a possibly embarrassing situation.

It is the scheme employed by a bashful youth to avoid the mortification of a refusal when he offers himself to a girl as her escort home!

He waits until the time comes for the usual ten minutes' intermission; then, sauntering up to the girl and taking a huge "pound sweet" apple out of his pocket, offers it to her. If she takes it he is accepted; if not he is refused. But if he has come too late, by reason of some other fellow getting ahead of him, she shows him the apple or the core accepted from the first comer and he then understands the situation perfectly. Thus a communication has been carried on without a word having been spoken by either one on the subject. Meanwhile they have been chatting about something utterly foreign to the matter uppermost in their minds.

All this can be done so slyly that no one is the wiser and the sting of a positive refusal is prevented.

Everybody brings their own candle of lamp, and a turnip or potato serves as a candlestick by simply cutting a hole in which to place the candle.

A Family with an Appetite.

An Adrian doctor says that down in Palmyra, Mich., resides a family of seven. Every Monday regularly a three-hundred-pound hog is butchered and by the following Sunday the hog has been eaten up. Besides all this there is the usual quota of beef and other meats disposed of during the week, which is about forty-five pounds of raw hog to each person.

The World's Diamonds.

The world's stock of diamonds has increased enormously in the last fifteen years. In 1876 the output of the African mines was about one million five hundred thousand carats. Last year it was over four millions, and the great "trust" which controls all the principal mines asserts that it has sixteen million carats "in sight" at the present time.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Herrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

Are at the apex of the heap,
In the line of Stoves and Ranges—
All because they are good and cheap.

Now if you have got a beau,
And contemplate a plan
Of furnishing your kitchen—
PIERSON is the man.

Their Tinware and their Hardware,
Housefurnishing Goods and Lamps,
Makes one feel as if they would like to have
A pocket full of stamps.

So call and see, and you'll agree
That what we now relate
Is not at all a fable,
But wise to contemplate.

And when into your kitchen
You by chance do look around
And see the many useful things
That at PIERSON'S you have found,

You will then unto your friends relate
That story, old and true—
That to step into their store
Is to purchase more and more,
Until you find you got the earth and
cannot get no more.

MY BIG BROTHER JIM.

I am called "the Little Brother,"
For there's two boys, and the other,
He was christened "Jim."
Jim is more than six years older,
And my head don't reach his shoulder
When I stand beside him.

Our Jim is nearly seventeen,
And no such style was ever seen
As he's acquired.
He's quite a dude, and puts on airs,
And strokes his seven moustache hairs,
Till he makes me tired!

Oh, yes, of course the whole town knows
That I'm wearing Jim's old clothes—
Altered, so they'll fit!
He don't wear them long before they're short;
Then our folks rip them all apart,
And I the clothes inherit.

To some purpose, it is stated,
Every thing has been created;
And I believe it's true.
For, though we growl at one another,
I find that even my big brother
Was made for something, too.

When my chums begin to bully,
And I recognize most fully,
It's a serious matter.
Then I just glare, with visage grim,
And yell for "My Big Brother Jim"—
May be they don't scatter!

So, while I, with great good humor,
Pose as Jim's old clothes consumer,
He always fights for me.
Thus you'll see, on contemplation,
Nature's law of compensation,
As plain as plain can be.

—P. C. Fossett, in Golden Days.

STAMPEDED AT NIGHT.

Wild Race in the Darkness with a Herd of Cattle.

AFTER weeks of "rounding up," "cutting up," branding and marking, we had gotten together seventeen hundred head of the finest steers to be found on the banks of the muddy Pecos in New Mexico, says a writer in the Galveston (Tex.) News. Two days later the "boss" rode into camp, consulted with his foreman, and eight men, including the writer, were chose nto drive the snorting, bellowing herd to Springer, N. M., a distance of two hundred and fifty miles.

The evening of the sixth day was cloudy and cool, and indications of an approaching storm were visible.

"Have ter watch 'em putty close tonight, boys," said our foreman. "Looks like we're goin' ter have some rain."

The writer was on first guard. The cattle were restless, showing a decided disposition to run, and instead of walking our horses around the herd we were compelled to travel at a sharp trot. Daylight faded out and pitchy darkness succeeded. The cattle were indistinguishable at a dozen paces, and frequently we were compelled to pull up short to avoid colliding with a steer or with each other. This continued until the arrival of the second guard, when the increased forces succeeded in quieting them somewhat, and the writer and his mate started for camp, guided by the light of the camp-fire, which shone like a star on a little elevation about a half-mile away.

We had scarcely turned into our blankets, fully dressed as usual, with the exception of our boots, when the rain commenced to fall, in drops at first, but steadily increasing to a downpour. Blankets were drawn over heads and grunts of displeasure were heard on every side, when a rumble and shaking of the ground was heard, mingled with hoarse shouts.

"They're running!" yelled the foreman, jumping from his blankets. "Mount! mount! every one of you," running to his horse as he spoke, which was picketed a short distance away.

Not waiting to don boots, the writer sprang to his horse, vaulted into the saddle, and tore off after the foreman, the flickering light of the camp-fire, fast being extinguished by the rain, revealing the remaining men hurriedly preparing to follow.

Guided by the thunder of hoofs the herd was soon overtaken, and, in obedience to the foreman's yells, I strove to "get in front of 'em." I could faintly discern in the darkness a line of bellowing, snorting beasts, and urging "Nigger Baby" to his utmost reached the end of the line and there found two of the boys galloping in the lead, shouting and waving their oil-coats or "slickers" and trying to stop the headlong flight.

The confusion of the scene was indescribable. The terrified snorts of the cattle were almost drowned by the clashing of horns, thunder of the hoofs, and shouts of the men. My oil-coat was strapped to my saddle, not having had time to unfasten it. I tore at the leather straps, succeeded in loosening them, and turning in my saddle shook it before the leaders, adding my shouts to the din around me.

As well try to stop the torrent of Niagara. The wild race was unslackened, and, from traditions, I knew that a misstep of my horse sufficient to throw me, or his fall, meant that I would be cut to pieces by the sharp hoofs of the cattle

Then an unexpected event occurred. The herd divided in two sections, one of which I was the sole leader of, while the other portion galloped off at right angles, led by my two companions. For a few minutes I could hear their shouts, then they grew fainter and fainter, and were finally lost in the gallop of hoofs around me.

On we thundered. My throat was raw and swollen from shouting and my "slicker" had fallen from my hand. The rain had ceased, but I was wet to the skin and numbed by the cool air. I thought the sound of hoofs was not so deafening, and as the clouds blew away so that I could see a few yards in front of me I found that I was leading about a dozen steers that had become separated from the herd. I had just made this discovery when they slackened speed and finally stopped, panting and quivering, all the run knocked out of them. Of what use was a handful of steers out of one thousand and seven hundred? Riding off a few yards I listened, but could hear no sound of my companions. Becoming conscious of a severe pain in my left foot, I reached down and found that I was literally pincushioned with the sharp needles of a cactus, having ridden through a bed of the prickly stuff, my foot unprotected by boots.

In the excitement of the run I had not felt it, but now the pain was intense. I plucked such as I could and then deliberated what was best to do. My lone dozen steers had wandered away and I made no effort to overtake them, knowing the uselessness of the undertaking.

Here was a predicament. In the middle of the prairie, shoeless, and shivering with cold, not knowing in what direction to go to reach camp and my horse blown with his fearful run. Knowing the instinct of horses I dropped the bridle-reins and suffered him to go where he would.

He promptly wheeled around and started off on a slow trot, which he kept up for about fifteen minutes. I knew we were camped on the bank of the river, and supposed that he would go in that direction, but wishing to test his instinct I turned him from his chosen course and to my dismay he complied and started off in the new direction just as willingly. I tested him from every point of the compass, and he seemed to go in any direction just as willingly.

I gave up in despair then, and concluded to keep him moving until daylight, when I knew I could find the river. On he trotted, while I began to curse the fate that ever led me to become a cow-puncher. After riding I should judge an hour I was delighted to find myself on the river bank; but then a new question arose: Was the camp before me or behind me? Again I tested the horse. He would go up or down, just as I pleased. I peered through the darkness, trying to look for any thing that might serve as a guide, when afar off in the distance I saw a faint light which grew to a tiny blaze and then died out. Where there was a light there must be life, and with renewed hope I galloped off in that direction, and about ten minutes later had the satisfaction of seeing the canvas top of the mess wagon looming up before me.

The light I had seen was a match in the hands of one of the boys, who had struck it to light the lantern, which had burned out. Its last flickering gleam had been seen by me quite accidentally, and his providential lighting of a match had guided me aright.

We were the only two of the outfit who reached camp that night. The others, like myself, had chased the cattle until they scattered, and had spent the night in a vain search for camp. Daylight found many of them traveling in an entirely opposite direction, and one nearly ten miles from his destination.

Messengers were dispatched to a ranch across the river and to another twenty miles away. Men were sent to our assistance, and with a force of twenty cowboys the scattered cattle were rounded up in two days and we continued our journey, having lost but six head in the wild stampede.

Evidences of the wild rush of the cattle were plentiful in the broken horns, and two carcasses were found almost trampled to a jelly. The poor brutes, exhausted, had fallen to the ground only to be cut to pieces by the sharp hoofs of their companions. Four times they stampeded before Springer was reached, but the stampedes fortunately occurred on clear nights, and were stopped with little difficulty.

Theory and Practice.

Mistress—Mercy on me, what a kitchen! Every pot, pan and dish is dirty, the table looks like a junk shop, and—why it will take you a week to get things cleaned up! What have you been doing?

Servant—Sure, mum, the young leddies has just been down here showing me how they roast a potato at the cooking school.—Street and Smith's Good News.

A Gentle Hint.

Editor—If you didn't drink so much, Mr. Soque, you could make a great deal of money. How in the world did you ever form the habit?

Soque—Well, I began by taking a nip every time I had a poem rejected, and it's kept me pretty full lately; but I'd really like a chance to reform.—Puck.

WHY THEY FED HIM.

How the Tramp is Utilized in Texas.

[Written for This Paper.]

ANY and peculiar are the experiences which a cross-roads tourist undergoes as he tramps over the country. A tramp, with a suavity of manner and a wild yearning for something to eat and pants that bagged at the knees and cried aloud for repairs, stopped at a farm-house in the southern part of Texas. He was not a very prepossessing-looking person, and at a first glance a close observer would immediately associate him with a jack-knife and plenty of shade.

"Ain't got nuthin' fur you," remarked the farmer, in reply to the tramp's request to give him some cold "vittles" and thus save a valuable life.

The cross-roads tourist turned to go, and heaved a heavy sigh like the sad, low moan of an overworked car horse.

"Wait a minit, an' I'll see the ol' woman. Mebbe she'll give yer somethin' ter eat."

"That old property sigh generally teches 'em in a soft spot," remarked the tramp, sotto voce, as he observed the man and his wife hold an earnest conversation. "Wouldn't surprise me at all, though, ef he wanted me to cut a ton or so of hay for a measly little sandwich. I don't kinder take to the cut of his mug, but the old lady looks more soft. The only farm work I ever wus good at wus gatherin' fruit, an' then I didn' want the farmer 'round to boss the job."

Instead of entering into a discussion as to the amount of work the tramp was to do in return for some "vittles," he was politely ushered into the dining-room of the old farm-house, a chair was handed to him, and he was told to make himself "homely," entirely unnecessary, as he was already as homely as a stage beauty off the stage, and the farmer's wife immediately made preparations for his meal. If she had been ordered to prepare a banquet for half a dozen people she could not have been more busy. For about an hour she was as busy as a bee, and when she finally brought the meal in, as she placed dish after dish upon the table, it became a difficult matter fot the tramp to realize that he was not dreaming—an illusion which was not dispelled until he began to gorge himself.

"Now don't stint yourself," said the farmer, helping the tramp to a large slice of ham, "here's some ham—wife, hand him some of those wheat cakes—a little cabbage will go good with that ham—what's the matter with usin' a fork?"

This last was addressed to the tramp on account of his having abandoned knife and fork for his fingers. The dishes were finally removed—the tramp having removed the contents very effectively—and the tramp leaned back in his chair, picking his teeth with a straw obtained from the broom in the corner, looking the picture of happiness.

"Have you filled yourse'f to your utmost rapacity?" inquired the old lady, kindly. "[Wonder whut those two are starin' at me like thet, for. Reckon I remind the old lady of some son of hers what's turned out bad.] I tell you whut," he said aloud, bestowing a loving smile on the old lady, who kept her eyes upon him intently, "tain't often I gets treated nice like this. There's only a few ladies left like you, madam." Then rising and flecking a small spot of dust from his pants, he was on the point of leaving when he was detained by the old farmer, who said:

"Hol' on. Don't go yit. 'Tain't healthy after eatin' a big meal. How would a little rye go to kinder wash down thet grub?"

"First class, governor. I ain't much of a drinker, but jest to prevent indigestion I'll take a snifter with you."

The farmer handed him a large glassful, but did not imbibe himself. The contents disappeared like a flash. Another glass went on the same mission as the first. The tramp's face fairly shone with happiness, and he leaned back once more in his chair and indulged in half a dozen of the most ludicrous winks in rapid succession at the old lady ever perpetrated by a mortal and at the same time smiling in the blandest manner possible. He was firmly convinced that the old lady was smitten with him, and it's no wonder, for she had not removed her eyes from him for a moment. "Guess that old stuff of a husband of hers ain't got the style about him I have," reflected the tramp, mentally. "Funny how these wimmin kin tell a single man as soon as they see him. Now that woman's got her eye on me for husband No. 2. Wonder ef he's healthy?"

"Feelin' putty good, air ye?" inquired the farmer.

"Bully. But for fear of intrudin' I reckon I'll meander."

The farmer and his wife withdrew to the kitchen, and held another consultation, in which the tramp overheard the old lady say: "No, don't let him go yit," which caused the tramp to chuckle triumphantly. "A case of stuck at first sight," he murmured to himself. "Right before the old man's eyes, too. The old jay wouldn't tumble of a house fell on on him. Can't help but wishin' she was younger and had a little more style about her, though."

"You'd better rest a little while afore you go," said the farmer, re-entering the dining-room. "Er—you feel all right, do you?"

"Prime."

"Now, ef I was you I'd go right into that bed-room thar, an' take a little snooze afore goin'."

The tramp protested—they had been too good to him already. The old lady finally induced him to go into the room and lie down. Just as he was dozing off to sleep he heard a noise at the door, and opening his eyes suddenly he saw the old lady looking at him through the door, which was slightly ajar. "O, I'm a killer, I am!" he murmured, softly, as he buried his dirt-bedecked face in the soft, white pillow. "Wonder what she'd do ef she saw me in a new suit? I dessay I remind her of some old flame, but I don't want no gay lotharier business in mine," and he got up and gently closed the door.

For two solid hours he slept. When he awoke the old farmer was by his bedside.

"Looks as though you hain't been wrapt in slumber in some time."

"O, many's the time I've been rapped in slumber. One time, I remember, I wus on a visit to a friend in New York, an' happened to go to sleep in the park. I was rapped in slumber that time. A cop was the rapper."

But there was a change in both the old farmer and his wife. They did not treat him the same, and there was an air of indifference about the old lady that made him feel uncomfortable. This latter he laid to the fact that he was a talker in his sleep, and he had probably mentioned some female name which made the old lady jealous.

"You're one of God's noblemen," said the tramp, as he picked up his hat and prepared to depart. "I shall allers remember you in my prayers. You are too good to —"

"O, tain't that so much as it's business."

"Business?"

"You see I had a darky cook here last week who was so hot tempered and devilishlike, that I had to discharge her."

"Them cullud gals is orful. Ask 'em fur a little food an' they'll scald yer."

"I gave her a week's notice an' she left yesterday. In the meantime I found out from the drugstore man in town that she had bought enough arsenic to kill erbout fifteen persons. I thought mebbe she wanted ter poison wife and me. I wanted ter throw all the grub away, but wife says, 'no, keep it, an' try it on some good fer nothin' tramp. Ef it kills him, then it's time enough ter talk er throwin' it away.' Well, as I though it would only kill one tramp in the 'speriment, I thought it was a good idea, especially as it would save a lot."

"YOU GIT!" SAID THE FARMER.

"Specially sech a nasty, low-down, impedent tramp as you be," hissed the old lady.

The tramp was insulted. He felt deeply hurt. He looked reproachfully at the farmer's wife, and in a voice trembling with emotion said:

"Madam, you have stung me to the heart. I did not expect this from you. I thought your interest in me wus—"

"You git!" said the farmer and his wife in one voice, the latter seizing a rake that stood outside the door, and dealing him a sounding whack across the back of the head as he emerged from the door.

"Guess I've been thumping the wrong watermelon. She's just like the rest of the wimmin—susceitful," remarked the tramp, as he passed sadly out the farm gate. "Whew! but wasn't that a sockdollager she gave me across the cocoanut!" He had gone about fifteen yards when he stopped, and then turning back walked to the gate, and shouted, shaking his fist at the farmer's wife, who still stood at the door: "Hi! there! you old she-dragon! Can you give me the address of that darky that refused to sleep under the same roof with you? I'd like to shake her hand!"

"You git!" repeated the old lady, rapidly advancing with the rake in her hand.

THE MONEY MARKET

New York City is Absorbing All the Ready Cash.

PHILADELPHIA DRAINED DRY.

Loans Made at One-Eighth of One Per Cent. Until Monday.

Wall Street Brokers Still View the Outlook With Some Uneasiness—The Stock Market Tending Downward—No Further Disclosures in the Condition of the North River Bank—The Feeling Abroad.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—The money market is closer here than it has been for many years. For several days the market has been hardening and the climax was reached when loans were made at one-eighth of one per cent. for 10 day loans. All the brokers were able to secure the necessary accommodation at some rate or other, and no failures resulted.

The banks reported the rate of interest nominally 6 per cent., but the rate was so purely nominal that no one was able to borrow money at that figure. The trust companies were also borrowed dry, and one institution refused to advance anything, even with first mortgage bonds of the Lehigh Valley Railroad as collateral.

New York has been drawing money from Philadelphia all the week. During ordinary seasons New York brokers are content to accept five per cent. margin on orders to buy stocks, but they now demand ten. New York drafts have been coming in all the week on correspondents and clients for the additional five per cent. margin. One house has remitted to New York from $50,000 to $100,000 every day this week.

A swarm of investors, attracted by the low prices of stocks, have sent over funds to buy with. All these drafts aggregate a very large sum, and Philadelphia banks and financial institutions are now drained dry.

Uneasy Feeling in Wall Street.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Wall street brokers still view the outlook with some uneasiness as many conflicting rumors prevail and the drift of the market is still tending in a downward direction.

The depression is intensified by attacks, which prove subsequently to be unwarranted, against the credit of prominent banking firms and institutions. The cable and telegraph are freely used to contradict these alarming statements, but the feverishness has become infectious, and fresh liquidation is thereby developed.

The story from London that Baring Brothers were in trouble had the run of the street. Their agents here say the firm is all right.

The situation at the North River Bank remains unchanged. The directors are maturing plans to reopen it. An application for the appointment of a receiver was put over by consent until Monday. There was no further disclosures of the condition of the North American Company.

REAR END COLLISION.

Four Men Killed and a Large Number Injured in Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 15.—Two persons were killed and 18 injured by the collision on the Pennsylvania Railroad near New Florence, Pa., at 7 a. m. The second section of No. 9 Western express had stopped at New Florence for orders. A flagman was sent back to warn the third section, or the mail train, which also came from the east. A dense fog obscured everything and the mail train ran past the flagman and into the rear of the second section of No. 9. The sleeping car caught fire and was almost entirely destroyed. The locomotive and two express cars were very badly smashed up.

The scene following the collision was exciting in the extreme. The passengers became panic-stricken and in their efforts to get out broke the windows and crawled through.

The names of the killed are: Mrs. S. H. Angel, Washington, D. C.; Henry D. Minott, Boston, Mass.

Injured—G. Miller, express messenger, Allegheny City, Pa., slightly; D. S. Delaney and wife, Haymarket, Va., both seriously; J. F. Matthes, Baltimore, Md., seriously; J. H. Halman, Washington; Wm. Rockster, New York, seriously; C. C. Hicks, Providence, R. I., slightly; Mrs. M. B. Kellogg, Richmond, Va., seriously; J. H. Hill, Sunbury, Pa., slightly; Dr. Weihle, Haymarket, Va., slightly; Mrs. Dr. Weihle, seriously.

The disaster is one of the most serious that has occurred on the Pennsylvania Railroad for a long time. Those of the injured who could be moved with safety were placed on the cars of the Western express that were not wrecked and were brought to hospitals in this city.

Three Italians Killed in a Collision.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Three Italians were killed and seven other Italians seriously injured in a collision between two gravel trains last night, on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad at East Buffalo. The injured men were taken to the Emergency Hospital and the dead hurried off in ambulances to their homes. It is impossible at present to obtain any names.

Smashup on the Long Island Road.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—A passenger train on the Long Island railroad ran into the rear of a market train at the depot at Jamaica, L. I. No one was killed, but a number were severely injured, one believed to be fatally. Engineer Dimick was severely bruised. He says he did not see the train ahead of him, owing to the fog, and received no signal of danger.

Disregarded Orders—Three Lives Lost.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 15.—At 4 a. m. two trains on the Baltimore & Ohio collided near Bellaire. John Watson, engineer, and James Fleisher, fireman, were instantly killed. James Barnett, fireman, was so badly scalded that he died an hour afterward. Several others were seriously injured. The cause was disregard of orders.

Collision on the Great Western.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—A number of cars were derailed but no one was injured by another collision at Taunton near the scene of the recent fatal accident on the Great Western Railroad.

Two Men Killed in Virginia.

PETERSBURG, Va., Nov. 15.—A disastrous railroad wreck occurred on the Norfolk and Western Railroad, near this city. Two persons were killed and a number injured.

WOMEN'S MEDICAL SCHOOL.

A Brilliant Entertainment Last Night to Encourage the Project.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 15.—The Women's Medical School of the Johns Hopkins University is now an assured success. The "at home" given last night by Miss Mary Garrett to the ladies and gentlemen of the country who take a deep interest in the success of the project was a grand affair.

Miss Garrett was assisted in giving a cordial welcome to the guests by Mrs. Harrison, the wife of President Harrison, and the president of the Washington Committee of Ladies, who are co-operating with Miss Garrett in raising a fund of $500,000 to endow the school.

His Eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, was present in his scarlet robes. He was accompanied by the venerable Vicar-General McColgan and Rev. Mr. Lee.

O'Brien and O'Connor Speak in Lowell.

LOWELL, Mass., Nov. 15.—The Irish delegates, O'Brien and O'Connor, were entertained by Rev. Father O'Brien, rector of St. Patrick's Church. At 7:30 last night a procession, comprising all the Irish societies in the city and some of the military organizations, escorted the delegates to Huntington Hall. The hall was elaborately decorated and packed with people. Hon. John. J. Donovan presided. Mr. O'Brien in his speech eulogized Gladstone and Parnell. Mr. O'Connor dwelt largely upon the troubles in Tipperary. Fifteen hundred dollars was contributed to the cause by the audience.

The Rescuer Killed.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 15.—A Western Union messenger was crossing the Pennsylvania Railroad track at Grove street when he noticed an express train approaching. The boy became excited and stood motionless on the track. Edward McKegney, a flagman at the crossing, noticed the boy's danger, ran to the track and pushed the little fellow aside. The train was dashing along, and before the flagman could get off the track the locomotive struck him. He was instantly killed.

Murdered by a Discharged Employe.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—Wilbur F. Hutchings, a stable keeper doing business at 24 Fleet street, but residing in Chelsea, was shot last night in his stable by Benjamin F. Taylor. The latter was formerly employed by Hutchings, but was discharged by him for stealing grain. Hutchings was taken to his home where he died at 11 o'clock. Taylor was arrested. Hutchings was 46 years old and leaves a wife and young daughter.

Miners' Working Time Reduced.

ASHLAND, Pa., Nov. 15.—Commencing on Monday the Reading Coal & Iron Company will reduce the working time of the miners in their collieries one hour a day—the men beginning work at 7 a. m. and quitting at 5 p. m. The reason for the reduction in time is supposed to be that the markets are too much flooded, and to permit a good price for coal. Other mining companies will likely follow in the nine-hour movement.

A Wealthy Cuban Kills Himself.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 15.—Louis J. Camacho, a wealthy Cuban who came to this city 25 years ago, committed suicide in Druid Hill Park last evening. He had taken prussic acid. Camacho has been despondent for a long time, and a few months ago cut his throat and turned on the gas in a room at the Academy Hotel. He was a successful business man and leaves $75,000 to his heirs.

Hon. Moody Merrill for Mayor.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—Hon. Moody Merrill was last night nominated for mayor by the Republicans. Mr. Merrill was nominated on the first ballot, receiving 167 votes to 131 for Thomas N. Hart, his nearest competitor. The nomination of street commissioner and members of the school committee was left to a committee.

A Long Contest Ended.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 15—The long contest for the removal of the New England Railroad tracks at Church street has ended by an agreement of counsel under which the tracks are to be removed by December 1, and suitable damages to be awarded by the Asylum Bridge Commission.

Verdict Against the New York World.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—In Brooklyn a verdict was rendered for $6,500 in favor of ex-Assemblyman Daniel W. Tallmadge against the New York World. Mr. Tallmadge sued the World for $50,000 for libel in calling him a corrupt legislator.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Mr. Blaine Perfecting His Reciprocity Scheme.

CONSULTING WITH MINISTERS.

The Frequent Conferences Are Exciting a Deal of Comment.

The Brazilian Fleet Sails from Barbadoes To-Day—Sioux Indians Highly Excited—Talk About Clarkson and Quay. Buffalo Bill's Indians to Call on the President—A Lively Church Fight.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The presence at the State Department, almost daily, of Mr. Pitken, United States Minister to the Argentine Republic, and Mr. Conger, the new Minister to Brazil, and their frequent conferences with Secretary Blaine are exciting a deal of comment.

The Secretary of State, it is understood, has summoned the Ministers here to consult with them as to the best plan for perfecting the reciprocity scheme. Mr. Blaine's friends regard the development of it as sure to have a most important bearing upon the Presidential nomination in '92. They urge that the plan has already become the most popular yet devised by the Fifty-first Congress.

Mr. Blaine is conducting his conference not only with Messrs. Pitkin and Conger, but also with the diplomatic representatives of the Spanish-American republics. They take place at the residence of the Secretary of State, and much progress is said to have been made already.

Friends of Mr. Blaine say that before 1892 the fame of having developed our trade and given a new impulse to our national prosperity will redound to the credit of the Maine statesman alone.

THE BRAZILIAN FLEET.

Sails To-Day from Barbadoes for New York—Secretary Tracy's Orders.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The State Department received a dispatch from Barbadoes stating that the Brazilian squadron under Admiral Da Silviera would sail from Barbadoes to-day and would reach New York on November 24.

Secretary Tracy sent a letter to Rear-Admiral Gherardi, Chief of the North Atlantic squadron, in which he says that it is the wish of the Department that the welcome given to Admiral Da Silviera and his fleet shall equal, in demonstration of cordiality and good will, that accorded to Acting Rear Admiral Walker at Rio, and it looks to you to extend in the most ample manner all official courtesies so far as they fall within the province of the Commander-in-Chief afloat.

The Secretary follows this with detailed instructions abut the naval reception in New York Harbor, and adds that Rear Admiral Walker has been designated by the President to represent him in receiving the Brazilian Admiral in New York and to accompany him to Washington.

Lively Church Fight.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—A lively fight is in progress in the Shiloh Baptist Church of this city over the selection of a successor to the late Rev. W. J. Walker as pastor. Rey, Wm. A. Scott, who is filling the pulpit temporarily, is a candidate for the position, but opposition to his appointment has developed and has become so serious that at a recent meeting it was necessary for some of Mr. Scott's female sympathizers to hustle him out of the back door and over a fence to save him from personal assault. The question of the pastorate will be determined next Monday.

Sioux Indians Highly Excited.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Information has been received here that the excitement among the Sioux Indians of Pine Ridge Agency, in South Dakota, on account of the expected coming of the new Messiah, is very high and daily increasing, and fears are entertained that it may result in an uprising. The Interior Department say, however, that the Government is in full command of the situation and is prepared to stop promptly any uprising that may take place.

Senator Ingalls Hopeful.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Deputy Second Auditor Franklin has received a letter from Senator Ingalls in which he declares himself to be hopeful and even confident of re-election. The epistle concludes with the quotation: "The race is not always to the swift nor the battle to the strong, but he that endureth to the end the same shall be saved."

A New Observatory Architect.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—H. E. Donnell of New York has been appointed architect in charge of the Naval Observatory building in this city, vice Mr. Grant.

An Exchange at Auction.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 15.—The Pittsburg Petroleum Exchange will be sold at auction to-day. The members of the exchange will occupy the building until April 1st, or until some cheaper quarters can be secured for business.

O'SULLIVAN AMAZED.

The Iceman Denies that He Made a Confession About the Cronin Murder.

JOLIETT, Ill., Nov. 15.—Deputy Warden Merrill of the Penitentiary and Charles Gross, who supervises all interviews with convicts, when shown the alleged confession of Iceman O'Sullivan in a Chicago newspaper, detailing how Dr. Cronin was murdered, pronounced it a "fake."

O'Sullivan was sent for and his alleged confession read to him. He looked amazed and exclaimed:

"It is false from top to bottom. I haven't anything to confess and never confessed anything. If I had I would confess and not suffer life imprisonment. I have always said I ought to have gone on the stand, and say now that I will go on the stand if I get a new trial; but I have no confession to make because I know nothing about the crime to confess."

THE BIRCHALL VERDICT.

He Suffered no Pain After the Jerk—His Brain Weighed.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Nov. 15.—Mrs. Birchall has been kept under the influence of opiates. She has slept nearly continuously and seems to fail to recognize her widowhood. It is learned that she will remain in Woodstock for some little time yet before starting for England.

A jury was empannelled and the autopsy revealed that Birchall had an unusually large brain. It weighed 50½ ounces.

The verdict of the jury is to the effect that no dislocation of the neck had taken place. The windpipe was crushed in. Death was therefore caused by strangulation. The doctors agree, however, that there was no sensibility of pain after the jerk.

This ends the story of Birchall's crime and expiation.

Donohue Purchases the Boston Pilot.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—The Boston Pilot has been purchased by Mr. Patrick Donohue, who owned the property a number of years ago, and who lost it when he became financially embarrassed and owed a large aggregate of small savings made by many depositors. Owing to this complication, Archbishop Williams took hold of the property and installed as editor the late John Boyle O'Reilly, under whose management the paper made money rapidly, and the depositors received back all the money they had invested. Now that Mr. O'Reilly is dead the Archbishop does not care to keep the paper, as the object for which he took it has been attained.

Attempted to End His Life.

KEYPORT, N. J., Nov. 15.—Jabez Feary, manager of the Postal Telegraph office in Newark, N. J., is reported to be lying in a critical condition at Feary's Hotel in Matawan. Mr. Feary, who is well known in business circles in Newark, is said to have attempted to end his life last night by taking chloroform. He is a one-armed veteran, and was a candidate on the Republican ticket in Newark for school commissioner in the recent election, but was defeated. Since his defeat he has been despondent, and since last Tuesday he has been absent from his home.

Verdict for Bertha Doane.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The jury in the case of Bertha Doane vs. Gustof A. Anderson, to-day rendered a verdict of $2,500 for plaintiff. Anderson caused a search warrant to be taken out for diamonds alleged to have been stolen from Senor Pohl at plaintiff's boarding-house in Cornwall, in September last. They have never been found. Plaintiff brought suit for $5,000 for libel and malicious prosecution.

The W. C. T. U. Convention.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 15.—The address of the president of the W. C. T. U. dealt with the year's work and declared the organization to be now closing its best year and the one of its largest increase in membership. It asserted that the original package decision resulted in the most helpful temperance agitation of the year. It declared against high license and for prohibition by law, by politics and by woman's ballot.

Dr. McGonegal Secures a Stay.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—In the Kings County Supreme Court Judge Pratt rendered a decision on the application for a stay of proceedings in the case of Dr. McGonegal, convicted of the murder of the girl Annie Goodwin, granting a stay of execution of sentence pending an appeal, and held that the court erred in accepting a juror who had formed an opinion as to the guilt of McGonegal.

A Western Union Lineman Killed.

HYDE PARK, Mass., Nov. 15.—A Western Union lineman named James McKenna was killed by the New York express from Boston on the Old Colony railroad. He was lifting a pole that had fallen across the tracks; pinning down James Finnegan, foreman of the construction gang. Finnegan was seriously bruised but not dangerously injured. McKenna leaves a family in Nova Scotia.

Verdict Against a Racing Association.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 15.—Sporting men were surprised when the jury in the case of the Linden Park Association, on trial for keeping a disorderly house in allowing pool selling, came into court at noon with a verdict of guilty. Sentence was deferred. The case will probably be appealed.

Mr. Cleveland's Promise.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, Nov. 15.—Ex-President Grover Cleveland promised Mayor Burnett and other prominent local Democrats that he would be present at the annual Jefferson Club banquet here on February 3d, and added that he never broke a promise.

Verdict Against a Street Railway.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—A verdict was rendered against the West End Railway Company for $8,100 in a suit brought by Mary Horr to recover $25,000 damages for injuries sustained by the plaintiff while a passenger on one of the Company's cars.

CROWDS VISIT KOCH

His Consumptive Discovery is Creating a Sensation.

HE STILL RETAINS THE SECRET.

A Little Child Dies After Receiving the Injection.

The Czar Receives a Warning—An Anonymous Letter Found in His Private Apartment—Jameson's Letter Confirms the Cannibal Story—Thirty Mutilated Bodies of the Serpent's Crew Recovered.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—At No. 28 Luneburger strasse, the headquarters of Professor Koch's assistant, Dr. Libberts, where the lymph is advertised for sale, the vestibule of the palatial house is densely thronged by applicants and the street crowded by carriages, all come to procure a supply of lymph.

At Dr. Levy's clinical hospital a consumptive child 12 years of age died shortly after receiving the first injection of the lymph. The death, however, is explained in this case by the injection being merely a forlorn hope, as the child was too far gone.

Koch still keeps the ingredients of the lymph secret, as new chemical products cannot be patened by German law. Within one week all consumptive patients in the Hamburg hospitals will be inoculated.

There is a remarkable exodus of consumptives from the resorts on the shores of the Mediterranean to Berlin, and the hotels are filling fast with such persons. A large number of American physicians have also given notice of their intention to be present on the occasion of Doctor Koch's lecture on November 26.

FRANKFORT, Nov. 15.—One of the patients who has been treated and benefited by Professor Koch's formula was a sufferer from bronchial tuberculosis. The patient had a swelling in one knee, which had for a long time been very painful.

Physicians who had closely observed the case assert that the reactive effect following the injection of the lymp proved that tubercular process existed in the knee, which has since been free from disease.

WARNING TO THE CZAR.

An Anonymous Pamphlet Found on a Table in His Private Apartments.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 15.—A sensation has been created in this city by an incident which has just happened to the Czar. He found on a table in his private apartment an anonymous pamphlet, which called his attention, in a quiet and convincing manner, to the necessity of providing a constitution for Russia.

The tone of the argument was perfectly dispassionate and calm, and the writer advised the Czar to get rid of his present advisers, who, he said, are interested for their own personal ends in keeping him in ignorance of the desires of his people and the opinions and sentiments which prevail throughout his dominions.

It is believed that if the Czar is in any degree amenable to reason, and is not so weakened in mind and character by fear and the overriding wills of those about him that he is incapable of independent thought, this pamphlet cannot fail to make some impression upon him; but it is doubted if anything will ever move him now from his position of frightened hate toward the people.

The Slave Traffic in Zanzibar.

ZANZIBAR, Nov. 15.—The Sultan's decree abolishing the slave trade is a dead letter, the Arabs persisting in the traffic under the very eyes of the authorities. A British cruiser, the Cossack, pursued and captured a slave dhow which had been loaded in open day and run out of Zanzibar under cover of darkness. The Arab crew made some resistance, and one was shot and the others driven into the sea. The slaves were liberated.

Mrs. Jameson Strikes Back.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Mrs. Jameson has written a letter to the Times refuting the charges against her husband, and says that it is ridiculous to ask the public to believe the testimony of such a branded wretch and proven swindler as Assad Faran. She publishes a letter from her husband, in which he explains the cannibalistic story in a thoroughly plausible way.

Conference of Austrian Bishops.

VIENNA, Nov. 15.—The Austrian bishops are holding a conference in this city. They have visited the Papal Nuncio and it is announced that they intend to issue a pastoral letter early in December.

Thirty Bodies Recovered.

CORRUNA, Nov. 15.—The bodies of 30 of the Serpent's crew have been recovered. They are all badly mutilated by contact with the rocks.

Less Power for District Assemblies.

DENVER, Nov. 15.—In the General Assemblies of the Knights of Labor Mr. Powderly had an amendment to the constitution adopted taking away from district assemblies the privilege of declaring boycotts or ordering strikes until the Executive Board gives its final decision. District assemblies are also forbidden to suspend members until the General Board examine into the case. The election of the board will be held on Monday.

Clarkson and Quay.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The talk about General Clarkson succeeding Mr. Quay as chairman of the National Republican Committee is hardly credited here. Mr. Clarkson wants Mr. Quay to remain where he is, and besides Mr. Clarkson has made all his arrangements for a long tour in Europe. He expects to leave for Paris next month, and will spend the winter at the French capital, and therefore it is not likely that he would accept the chairmanship at this time.

BOLD KIDNAPPING.

An Unknown Man Entices a Boy Away from a Children's Mission.

BOSTON, Nov. 15.—A bold case of kidnapping occurred about 7 a. m. At that hour it is claimed an unknown man enticed 11-year-old Calmar W. Bryant away from the yard of the Children's Mission, 277 Fremont street. The children of the institution say that for the past three or four days the same man has been standing around the gate, and several times has asked the Bryant boy to accompany him on a walk or to go to some certain place, but each time the boy has refused.

Mrs. Ellen Bryant, the boy's mother, works in a restaurant on Hollis street. She has two children besides Calmar, who was only placed in the institution temporarily, having been there but seven weeks. Mrs. Bryant cannot think of any reason why her boy should be sought for. His father is dead and she has no relatives that she thinks would steal the boy. She knows nobody that answers the description of the man.

The Southern Pacific Accident.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 15.—A dispatch from Salem, this State, says the coroner's jury, empanelled to inquire into the cause of the death of the persons killed in the accident of the Southern Pacific railway on Wednesday night, returned a verdict last night that the accident was the result of an unsound and unsafe bridge, and that the Southern Pacific company is guilty of criminal negligence in allowing such a structure to stand and to be used for the passage of trains.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

A Rhode Island clergyman was fined for pulling down his wife's back hair on the street.

The Princeton and Wesleyan elevens play a big game of football in New York this afternoon.

A republican manifesto signed by 121 students of the Coimbra University has been issued in Lisbon.

Succi, the New York faster, lost 1½ pounds in weight during the last 24 hours, and is frowing weaker.

Senator Stanford's California friends are preparing to launch a well matured boom for him in connection with the Presidency.

The forces of President Bogran, of Honduras, and the revolutionary General Sanchez have fought near Tegucigalpa. Bogran's troops were victorious.

Henry L. Siehman, proprietor of a large cigar manufactory at Robertson, Lancaster County, Pa., has failed with liabilities of $68,000 and assets $60,000.

Willie Green, the 15-year-old son of George Green, of Fort Plain, N. Y., while leading a cow from the pasture was attacked by the animal and fatally hurt.

The O'Shea divorce case came up for trial before Mr. Justice Brett in the Divorce Court in London to-day. It is likely that is will not take more than a day to hear all the evidence.

Frederick Gould, one of the three seamen rescued from the foundered torpedo cruiser Serpent, and who is now in the hospital at Camarinas, Spain, is also a survivor of the lost gunboats Wasp and Lily.

By a premature explosion of dynamite in Custer's stone quarry, at Lima, Ohio, Charles Burdett, Henry Wisscup and George Fisher were blown to pieces and Frank Fisher and Samuel Watt seriously injured.

Hugh Stewart died at Altoona, Pa., from a fracture of the skull made by his 17-year-old nephew, Boyd Gillmore. Stewart, while drunk, attacked his sister, young Gillmore's mother, who struck him with a baseball bat.

William. C. Bull, the missing manufacturer who left Bennington, Vt., on Saturday last and for whom a reward was offered, returned last night. He can give no intelligible account of his wanderings, but had evidently been in Detroit, Mich.

All the granite cutters and sharpeners employed by the New England Granite Company, at Concord, N. H., over 250 in number, have gone on strike because of a disagreement between the bosses and the men in construing a certain clause in the scale of prices relative to payment.

The Brooklyn, N. Y., jury in the case of Asa Waterman, the theatrical manager, charged with the murder of Peter Doran, while walking with the latter's wife, announced their inability to agree upon a verdict. They were discharged.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—For New England and Eastern New York and New Jersey: Fair; no change in temperature; variable winds.

For Western New York: Fair; slightly warmer; winds becoming southerly.

BY THE WAY.

—That Belgian lamp Gavett is advertising has no superior in the market.

—A special call is made for teachers at Warren Mission. Those not doing school work will find at this chapel a ready field for work.

—There will be no session of the penmanship and book-keeping class at the Young Man's Christian Association room Monday evening.

—A meeting will be held at the Young Men's Christian Association rooms next Thursday evening to organize such bible classes and meetings as may be deemed necessary.

—Two farewell meetings will be held by the Rev. B. Fay Mills in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Monday—in the afternoon, for women, at 3:45, in the evening, for men, at 7:30.

—The residents of East Fifth street whose windows have been broken by stones from "sling-shots," have discovered who the boys are and will make an example of them if the nuisance does not cease.

—I. D. TenEyck's horse ran away with the hitching post to which it was tied, on Grove street, yesterday, and after upsetting the butcher wagon to which it was attached, and breaking the harness, was captured.

—Two of the bloodhounds belonging to Stetson's Double Monster Uncle Tom's Cabin Co., which is to exhibit at Music Hall, Monday evening, were recently imported from Siberia, at a cost of nearly five hundred dollars each.

—One of the things most remarked by visitors to Plainfield is the beauties of the Crescent city's sunsets. Last evening's was very pretty, and a peculiar feature was the presence of a dainty thin crescent moon in the western sky among the superbly-tinted clouds.

—A correspondent endeavors to draw an "odious comparison" by calling attention to the fact that in THE PRESS, recently, the Board of Education reported three tons of coal stolen while the base ball Managers of the Crescent League reported gate receipts of almost $5,000.

—The Rev. B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, Mr. Greenwood, the singer, with the secretary of the Plainfield Young Men's Christian Association and others, met the Westfield pastors in the Presbyterian parsonage last Saturday afternoon. It is now definitely settled that Mr. Mills and Mr. Greenwood will come to Westfield Feb. 20, for a series of meetings. Mr. Mills was a favorite college chum of the Rev. Mr. Cadwell's at Hamilton College. —Westfield Standard.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Wm. D. Murray will be one of the speakers at the Y. M. C. A. convention, to be held in Westfield, from the 28th to 30th insts.

Emil C. Woltmann has been nominated by the Democrats for councilman in the third ward, in place of Justus H. Hesse, who has declined.

James A. Skelly, formerly of the Plainfield Electric Company, has recently been married to a young lady of Sterling, Ill. He is now Superintendent for the North American Construction Co.

The wedding is announced to take place on Monday afternoon, the 24th inst., of Miss Eda Augusta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Carpenter of Westervelt avenue, and George Augustus Gillespie.

Aaron Allen, of Washingtonville, and his grandson, Harry Coddington, of Somerset street, who have been spending a month among relatives in Illinois, have returned home after a delightful visit.

Sidney E. Flower, the Democratic candidate for City Treasurer, was a soldier in the late Civil War, having served over four years. He participated in all the principal battles of Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia ending with the surrender of Appomatox. He was wounded at the second battle of Winchester, and was honorably discharged at Fort Bridger, Utah, after a service of one year against the Indians in the outbreak of 1865.

The friends and neighbors of T. S. Armstrong, right hand-man at the pharmacy of H. P. Reynolds, joined in giving him a complete happy surprise Thursday afternoon, when they assembled at his home in joyous celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong's tenth wedding anniversary. Among the guests were Mr. Reynolds, wife and sister, Mr. Armstrong's sister, and his brother, the Hon. E. Ambler Armstrong, of Camden. The bride and groom of a decade received many gifts.

What Mr. Mills and Mr. Greenwood Get.

Those busy-bodies who have been speculating on the amount to be paid to Messrs Mills and Greenwood for their services in conducting revival services here may be interested in the announcement made by the Rev. W. R. Richards from the pulpit of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last night. Mr. Richards said that no stated sum had been promised to the evangelists, but suggested that the opportunity was open to all to contribute to the cause as much as they felt able to give. Contributions may be made, under cover of an envelope, to any of the local pastors connected with the coming of Mr. Mills to Plainfield.

—"Aunt Jack" to-night.

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN.

Evangelist Mills Says It Is Perhaps the Sinners' Continued Rejection of the Holy Ghost.

The meeting for men conducted last night by Mr. Mills in the Crescent Avenue church was attended by fully 1,300 people. The sermon of Mr. Mills was very powerful. His theme was "The Unpardonable Sin," and among the many scriptural passages which he forcibly expounded was the following:

Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.

And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him; but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.

Just what this blasphemy against the Holy Ghost was, the preacher would not specify, but he laid especial stress on the fact that it might be the sinner's continual cry: "Some other time!—some other time I will begin to serve Thee!"—the constant putting off of the moment for accepting Christ. Just now the Holy Ghost was very near to the people. To reject God repeatedly was to bring a time when one could not accept Him. The last opportunity was bound to come—the last opportunity might be that of the present moment. Oh, the danger of delay!—the certainty of eternal death when one threw away that last chance! The time would come to the unrepentant sinner when God would no longer plead, when there would be no other Divine offer, and then for that last decision against God there would be no forgiveness either now or hereafter.

The local pastors also urged that now was the accepted time, and in response to the repeated eloquent appeals many professed conversion.

HELPING A PRODIGAL HOME.

Hearts that Long Have Mourned Will Praise a Plainfield Woman's Charity.

A young wayfarer reached this city last evening after a journey on foot from Philadelphia. He was weary, hungry and penniless, and had been so often refused help before he reached Plainfield that he had scarcely the courage to ask longer for assistance. He told his story, however, to a good woman on East Fifth street, and seemed so straightforward and honest that he was generously aided. He had run away from a happy home in Connecticut six months ago, and after drifting around from place to place finally found work in Philadelphia. Misfortune followed him, however, and presently he found himself out of work and out of money. His heart had been longing for home, and now it was hungrier than ever, so he had set out to return to his father and mother, who had been all this time mourning for him without having an idea where he was. All he asked of his listener was money enough to reach Newark, where he had relatives who would send him home. The woman gave him a big dinner and paid the car fare asked, and the young man, profuse in his expressions of gratitude, left on the seven o'clock train.

A Bazaar and Entertainment Combined.

The G. A. R. fair at Amphion Hall closes this evening. Last night's entertainment opened with a vocal selection by Comrade W. C. Smith, entitled "Naming the Baby." It was loudly applauded. The next, a recitation by Miss Clum, was very nicely rendered, as was also a vocal selection by Mr. Southard. J. E. Hall was to recite "Sheridan's Ride," but on account of illness he substituted a scene from "Rip VanWinkle." Little Jessie Hall sang "The Spanish Cavalier," followed by a tableau, the "Soliers Dream," under the direction of the veteran actor, Robt. Mattox. In the tableau were Comrade H. C. Drake and Mrs. Drake, Mrs. Summers, Mrs. Mattox, Eddie Hand and Gertie Jones. This closed the stage entertainment.

To-night is the last night. The citizens should turn out and give the brave boys of Winfield Scott Post, a big house. They have worked hard to make the fair an artistic as well as a financial success.

Messrs. Murray and Suffern at Somerville.

(From the Somerset Gazette.)

W. D. Murray, Esq., of Plainfield, President of the Y. M. C. A. of that place, with Mr. Suffern, addressed a very large audience at the Second Reformed church last Sunday evening upon the subject of the work and value of the Y. M. C. A., and the importance of sustaining it as a means of reaching and influencing young men. Mr. Murray spoke for about twenty-five minutes, using excellent language and making points as admirable in behalf of the work in which he was engaged as any we have heard. He put the matter of the necessity and importance of the work by young men for young men with accuracy and so as to bring conviction to the minds of his hearers.

Mr. Suffern spoke afterwards, presenting three points why young men should be looked after, which were also cogent and instructive.

The Coming Comet.

It is fancied by a grateful patron that the next comet will appear in the form of a huge bottle, having "Golden Medical Discovery" inscribed upon it in bold characters. Whether this conceit and high compliment will be verified, remains to be seen, but Dr. Pierce will continue to send forth that wonderful vegetable compound, and potent eradicator of disease. It has no equal in medicinal and health-giving properties, for imparting vigor and tone to the liver and kidneys, in purifying the blood, and through it cleansing and renewing the whole system. For scrofulous humors, and consumption, or lung scrofula, in its early stages, it is a positive specific. Druggists.

FREE LIGHT FOR THE COUNCIL.

Manager Moore Offers to Furnish the Electricity for Nothing. If Landlord Clark will put in the Fixtures.

The Council met in special meeting, last evening, and adopted the ordinance giving the Plainfield Electric Light company the right to place and maintain as many poles, and string as much wire, throughout the streets, lanes and alleys, as it pleases for ten years to come.

Councilmen Smith and Roberts wanted the time made one year, and they voted against the ordinance at every reading and on its final passage. Councilmen Dunham, Gallup, Hetfield, Johnson, Moffett, Newhall, Rushmore and Spangenberg, voted for it. Councilmen Jenkins was absent.

At the request of Councilman Spangenberg, Manager Moore was given the privilege of the floor. He thanked the council for calling a special meeting to adopt the ordinance, and also for all other many courtesies. The Plainfield Electric Light company, he continued, would hereafter light the council chamber free if the owner would put in the fixtures.

Dottie Pine at Amphion Hall.

Dottie Pine and Fayette Welch will appear at Amphion Hall, next Monday and Tuesday evenings, in the sensational comedy-drama, "Pert."

The play is evidently moulded about Dottie Pine, for without a capable little artiste such as she to interpret the principal character it would not amount to much.

Dottie is a sweet little Miss near the line of her teens, and she is possessed of that vivacious animal spirit which enables such little actresses as she to become popular with audiences.

Fell as She Left the Prayer Meeting.

A young woman who was leaving Mr. Cleaver's meeting room in THE PRESS building, last evening, caught the heel of her shoe at the top of the stairs and fell forward. Fortunately there was a man a few steps below to stop her. She fainted away, however, and may today find a number of bruises.

To-Night.

The Boston Herald says of the play at Music Hall, to-night, "The interest and laughter constantly increase. It has the decided and unusual advantage of having a third act, which is better than the first two."

Chemist's Idea of Wine.

We have heard a great deal of the superior excellence of Speer's N. J. Wine, and of its being adopted in European hospitals in preference to their own wines. The most scientific men of the country and liquor-assayers appointed by State government, pronounce it a most valuable article for sickness. We cannot write more on this subject, but publish the following card, which speaks for itself:

PORTLAND, Feb. 1.

The undersigned, having become practically acquainted with the Wine produced by Alfred Speer, of New Jersey, would say that he considers it a superior article, and far preferable to the quality or Port Wine generally furnished in this market.

VICTIM OF CIGARETTES.

A Young Man Confined in an Insane Asylum from Excessive Smoking.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 15.—A great deal of interest is taken here in the proceedings for the release of Cornelius Bruyn from the Middletown Insane Asylum. The matter will come up on Monday before Judge O'Brien, of New York, who has issued a writ of habeas corpus.

Cornelius Bruyn was confined at the instance of his brother James V. Bruyn, of this city, who said that his brother was not insane but suffered from delusions. The trouble resulted, he said, from a too excessive use of cigarettes. His brother Cornelius smoked packs of cigarettes daily, and for months past had been unable to go to sleep unless he had a cigarette in his mouth.

He also conceived the hallucination that he was followed by the police, and he fled from London because, he said, the police had an idea that he was "Jack the Ripper." His visits to Kingston during his last visit to this country have been for the purpose of "escaping from police pursuit."

The Bruyn family is one of the oldest in Ulster County, and the father of James and Cornelius was cashier and president of the Ulster County Bank.

Buffalo Bill's Indians.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The agents of the Wild West Show called on Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs Bell this morning and made arrangements to have the Indians of the show at the office of the Commissioner to-day. Commissioner Bell telegraphed to Carlisle, Pa., for an interpreter, and will examine the Indians as to their reported ill-treatment while abroad. The President will receive the Indians this afternoon.

Republican Nominations.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 15.—The Republican city convention nominated for Mayor, Charles Sidney Smith; for City Treasurer, Benjamin Tripp; for Overseer of the Poor, Charles H. Thurber; for Harbor Master, Wm. H. Gladding.

Sunol's Latest Attempt.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—At Bay District track to-day Sunol, in attempt to lower her record of 2:10½, made a mile in 2:11½. The quarters were made in 32½, 1:04 and 1:37½.

A Well-Known Contractor Dead.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Gilbert Peterson, for many years a resident of this city and well known throughout this State and in Washington as a contractor of public works, died last night.

Stanley in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—Mr. Henry M. Stanley delivered his lecture "The Rescue of Emin, and Our March Across Africa," at the Academy of Music, before a large audience last night. His thrilling tale of adventure by land and by flood was followed by the audience with much interest. Mrs. Stanley, accompanied by her mother, occupied one of the boxes.

Cincinnati Expelled.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—At the National League meeting the Cincinnati Club was expelled from membership by a unanimous vote. The franchise for that city was then awarded to John T. Brush, of Indianapolis, who said he represented Cincinnati capitalists.

Stopped His Train Too Suddenly.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 15.—A gravel train backed into the freight yard at Valley Falls while a train of dumps was coming down on the same track. The engineer of the latter train stopped s suddenly as to throw his cars into a pile. Fifteen of them were demolished.

HONORED, BUT DECLINES.

John B. Brown Receives the Unanimous Nomination for Mayor by the Democratic City Convention—Joseph S. Cutter Will Probably be the Candidate.

The city delegates gathered in convention at the Democratic headquarters, last evening, were the mostharmonious political assemblage ever seen. There was not a contest for any office. V. L. Frazee was chairman, and John Mortimer, secretary. The nominations were as follows:

Mayor—John B. Brown.
Collector—Aaron W. Band.
Assessor—John J. Kenney.
Treasurer—Sidney E. Flower.
School Trustee—The Rev. Joseph Pemberton Taylor.
Commissioners of Appeal—Jeremiah Manning, Jasper G. Cadmus.

A committee consisting of Councilman W. L. Hetfield, J. F. Loeser, A. P. Hetfield and E. C. Searing, subsequently called upon Mr. Brown at his home but could not persuade him to accept. His physicians were strongly opposed to his assumption of any continuous labors or exciting duties. However, he consented to leave the matter to his son, but that gentleman's answer to the Committee was a decided "no."

The choice of the party now for Mayor, will probably be ex-Councilman and ex-Fire Commissioner, Joseph S. Cutter. He ran against Mayor Male two years ago and was only defeated by a majority of 235. He was ahead of his ticket in every ward, and if the people had not been told that if they elected Mr. Male he would "give them a City Hall," Mr. Cutter might have won.

YOUNG FIRE-BUGS.

J. M. C. Marsh Saves Westfield from Destruction.

(From the Westfield Standard.)

A thin flame of fire wavering about near the foundation of Darsh's barn last Saturday night about six o'clock, attracted the attention of Mrs. John Schmitt, who was looking out of a rear window overlooking the barn. She could dimly make out two forms moving about, and suspecting something wrong, called to her husband. Mr. Schmitt investigated, and upon nearing the barn saw two small boys run off. Mr. Darsh at this point came out with a light, and burnt paper was found under the barn, where some straw had been placed.

J. M. C. Marsh was summoned, and soon afterwards caught little Willie Keaton and Geo. LaMatty as they were running across Broad street. Keaton confessed that they had intended to burn the barn, "just to see the boys come around with the engines and truck." The boys were allowed to go after sundry threats of dire punishment should they ever attempt such a thing again. A strong northwest wind was blowing at the time, and should a fire have been started it might have burned the entire block.

PENNY ANTE UNLAWFUL.

Plainfield Men Charged in Elizabeth, With Gambling.

(From the Elizabeth Journal.)

There is apparently a vigorous warfare or crusade being waged throughout the county against gambling in whatever way it is carried on.

Yesterday morning while the appearance of Judge VanSyckel was awaited a brief session of the court of general quarter sessions with Judge McCormick presiding was held, and there was arraignments of several defendants.

The first cases caused a little sensation in the court room. The accused were residents of Plainfield, and the indictment against each was the same, charging the defendants with playing penny-ante, or unlawful gaming.

The arraignments were made in order as follows: John Dady, Thomas Fahey, Wm. Peterson and Harry Harriman. Each pleaded non vult, and was bailed in the sum of $300, for sentence to be imposed on November 22.

Even the Second Team Beats Fanwood.

The Fanwood bowlers were defeated Wednesday evening by the second team of the Elizabeth Athletic Club by the score of 1,585 to 1,449.

The work of the Elizabeth boys was of a very high order, and very even. Pepin, of their team, was high man, he securing 197. Davis, of the same team, came next with 172. Only three scores were made by the Elizabethans below 150, and half of them were above 155. Although some of the Fanwood men did poorly, others of them put up fair scores. R. P. Moore did the best for the Fanwood team, he scoring 169. Downer was next with 164.

When the Teachers Meet Over the Brook.

A meeting of the Somerset County Teachers' Association will be held in the Public School Building at North Plainfield, N. J., on Saturday, Nov. 22, 1890, at 10 o'clock a. m.

The programme will be as follows:

Summer Schools	Mr. Hoffman
Penmanship	Miss Beavers
Stars	Mr. Haynes
Drawing	Miss McCoy
The Thought Side and the Language Side of Arithmetic	Mr. A. B. Guilford

Time Table Changes.

The Winter schedule that goes into effect on the Central Railroad, to-morrow, will have but few changes between Plainfield and New York. They are these:

The 5:08 and 5:31 P. M. trains for New York daily, will hereafter leave at 5:11 and 5:36; and on Sundays, the 1:33 P. M. will leave at 1:42. The 5:45 A. M. from New York daily is changed to leave at 6:00; and the 1:15 P. M., Sundays, is changed to 2:15.

HOW SWEET TO BE A DUNELLEN BRIDE!

No Rest for the Weary Till the Groom Feeds His Serenaders.

The hamlet of Dunellen has had nothing but sleepless nights since Mr. and Mrs. William J. Hamilton returned from their wedding trip. It's not the fault of the bride and groom, nor the desire of the quiet-loving old people of the borough, but the young blood of the village is so fond of excitement that when it once gets aroused there's no knowing how long it will be before it quiets down again to its normal condition.

Mr. Hamilton is one of the most popular men in Dunellen, and his wife is a general favorite, and as soon as it was known that they were home from their bridal journey all the young men and boys in the place were so tickled to death that they decided on a serenade. The form of serenade they chose was not exactly suited to the tastes of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton. There was more noise than melody in their music. Old tin kettles and wash boilers thumped vigorously with stove lifters and hickory clubs yielded but a harsh sort of harmony, and no one but the serenaders themselves seemed to find any pleasure in such discordant notes.

Much to the surprise of the crowd, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton didn't appear on the balcony before which they were assembled to thank them for their courteous and generous greeting. Had they been permitted to glance inside the Hamilton home they might have seen frowns instead of smiles on the face of the groom, and lines of vexation on the countenance of the bride. The hour grew very late, but the serenaders persisted perseveringly, and did not disperse till some time after midnight.

Though nonplussed at Mr. Hamilton's frigidity, they decided to try again the next night to bring him forth and tell them how glad he was to see them and to be accorded such a profusion of salutes. So they thumped away in increased numbers, and added to the variety of sounds by introducing such popular instruments as tin horns and cow bells. Still Mr. Hamilton did not respond to their nice neighborly testimonial of popularity, and again they went home puzzled. Next night they enlarged their list of attractions by pressing an old accordion into service, and were gratified at the appearance of a face in an upper window. The face was only that of the boarding mistress of the house, and they couldn't hear, for the noise, just what she said, but the fact that they had begun to attract attention was a source of much gratification, and, satisfied for one night, they went away.

Every night since then they have continued their concerts, and have built big bonfires in front of the house in the hope that Mr. Hamilton would come forth and thank them. Of late they have grown angry at his repeatedly ignoring them, and so have begun to make the midnight hideous with shrieks and cat calls and hootings. In consequence a feeling of considerable strife is being manifested, and it is not possible to predict just now just what outbreak may not result. William Bodine and other church trustees and good people have been greatly scandalized to have such goings on. Mr. Bodine tried to get the serenaders arrested for burning up a big box a piano for his church came in, but the borough constable laughed him to scorn. Mr. Hamilton has been given to understand that if he would only say one kind word to the people at the next concert they would let him off mildly and not demand an elaborate banquet at all in return for their kindness. All they want is a few tarts and some cider and some strawberry pie. Mr. Hamilton says they must not expect any preserved peaches from him. They have gone too far, and have trodden too heavily on his love of rest, to get any fodder there. So the people not in the serenaders' band are anxiously waiting, and dreading what will happen next, and the serenaders wear looks of grim determination and mutter incoherently beneath their breath. They are said to be gathering cabbage stalks to throw at Mr. Hamilton's front door, and the pickets of the village fences are mysteriously disappearing.

The serenade has already lasted two weeks.

The Race Track als.

Peter De Lacy, the proprietor of a gambling house on the Bowery and of a pool room on Park Row, New York, and the Rev. Dr. Kempshall were happy together at Elizabeth last night. Juries in the Union County Court, under imperative orders from Judge Van Syckel to do so, found the Linden Park Blood Horse Association guilty of keeping a disorderly house, and found Ike S. Thompson guilty of making a book at the New Jersey Jockey Club track. Thompson was convicted on the testimony of Park Akahill and Louis Price, two gamblers in De-Lacy's employ, who said that their testimony was not given in the interest of morality, but in order to "get even" with the Dwyer Brothers, who had interfered with their principal's violation of the law in New York city. Seeing there was no chance for an acquittal, under the existing circumstances, Bookmakers Henry Stedeker and Robert G. Irving pleaded guilty to the indictments found against them. The cases against George Johnson and Joseph L. Anderson went over to the January term.

HE WILL CONTEST KEYS' SEAT.

What a Reporter Learned in an Interview With Charles A. Reed.

Charles A. Reed, Esq., who ran on the Republican ticket in Somerset county for Senator against Mr. Keys, was interviewed a few days ago by a representative of the Somerville Unionist-Gazette, and what he said concerning the "Address to Voters" issued by the Republican Executive Committee's Chairman, was so terse and emphatic, that it is given in his exact language:

Reporter: Mr. Reed, there is considerable discussion as to the purpose with which the "Address to Voters" sent out in the recent campaign was issued. Many persons claim that it was intended solely to injure Mr. Keys, and it is also questioned whether any attempt will now be made to put you in his seat. What do you say?

Mr. Reed: The address was issued by Mr. Cook with one special purpose, viz.; to prevent, in case of my election, any demand for a new election to be afterward made upon the ground that the voters did not know that Mr. Keys was ineligible. There was a legal point at stake and we thought that a new election would be applied for if I secured the majority, and under the new law might be granted. It was believed that Mr. Keys would not deny that he voted in New York in November, 1887. However, he did deny it, and the Chairman of the Democratic County Executive Committee denounced the "Address" as a campaign lie. Therefore, to come now to your second point, our people are put in this position: either they must produce their evidence and satisfy the public that they acted honestly, or they must drop the matter and thus tacitly admit the charge was untrue.

Reporter: What then will be done to prove the Republican case?

Mr. Reed: In order to obtain a legal investigation by which the truth of the charge can be arrived at, the law requires that I shall serve a notice upon Mr. Keys that I intend to contest his seat. This I will do. But I do it with the distinct understanding that with the result of such an investigation I have nothing to do, i. e., I do not expect to profit by it.

Reporter: Would you not take his seat if the law would give it to you?

Mr. Reed: I would not. If I had been elected I should have considered the office an honor to be defended to the last, but this election was a fair one and I was fairly beaten. There is no office within the gift of the people which would tempt me to accept upon a technicality a seat to which I was not elected.

A correspondent from Franklin Park, Somerset county, writes: "Mr. Reed, the Republican candidate for Senator had only four majority at this poll, which is generally Republican by about 50 votes. To my knowledge three men voted for Keys who would have voted for Reed had not the Republicans issued their disgraceful circular against Senator-elect Keys. Mr. Keys gained votes at Millstone the same way. Better fight square, G. O. P."

SUNDAY SERVICES.

Brief notices will be inserted under this head free of expense, but must be delivered at this office not later than eleven o'clock on Saturday morning to insure publication.

The Sunday school of the Congregational church will meet at 2:30 to-morrow. There will be no morning service.

SOMETHING INTERESTING.

Advice Which a Popular Young Lady Gives to Our Readers.

There are numberless people who do not call themselves sick, and yet who feel weak, nervous, or tired; they have lost their vim, power of endurance, or ambition to work. They feel miserable, not because they are actually sick, but because their nerves are weak. Such nervous sufferers should know that the feelings and sensations they experience are the Danger Signals—Nature's warning that their nerve force and vital power are at a low ebb and must be replenished and built up, or soon actual disease will prostrate the nervous and physical system.

This was the trouble with the beautiful and talented young actress, Miss Marie Steers, who has won for herself a high position among the popular artists of the profession.

MARIE STEERS.

She writes us as follows, and her communication will be read with the greatest interest by all:

"I must say a word for Dr. Greene's Nervura. Ever since I was a babe any excitement or overwork always threw me into hysterics, and since entering the theatrical field I have suffered more or less from this misfortune, especially on 'first nights' in new characters. As is my usual custom, I made my arrangements for the coming season in June, and up to the present day have been hard at work studying. Dr. Greene's Nervura was recommended to me for nervous weakness, and I used it. Since I can remember I never felt so rested, both mentally and bodily, as I do at present, and am ready to face any audience, from the creme de la creme of New York to the cowboys of the far West.

"For the future, when I hear any of my professional sisters and brothers complain of nervousness, my advice shall invariably be, go to the nearest druggist and purchase a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura. I could not help but send my testimonial, for does not one of our most learned writers say, 'Give honor where honor is due?' MARIE STEERS,

"Care Clipper Office, Centre st., New York city."

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes. Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

The Pierson Hardware Co.

Are at the apex of the heap,
In the line of Stoves and Ranges—
All because they are good and cheap.

Now if you have got a beau,
And contemplate a plan
Of furnishing your kitchen—
PIERSON is the man.

Their Tinware and their Hardware,
Housefurnishing Goods and Lamps,
Makes one feel as if they would like to have
A pocket full of stamps.

So call and see, and you'll agree
That what we now relate
Is not at all a fable,
But wise to contemplate.

And when into your kitchen
You by chance do look around
And see the many useful things
That at PIERSON'S you have found,

You will then unto your friends relate
That story, old and true—
That to step into their store
Is to purchase more and more,
Until you find you got the earth and
cannot get no more.

"AS I SHELLED THE PEASE."

Over and over, a little song
Sung in my heart, the whole day long;
No matter what task to my lot did fall,
The song made music, amid it all;
I washed the tea-cups, I kneaded the bread—
"My love loves me!" in my ear was said;
"True love is better than wealth or ease!"
Was whispered to me, as I shelled the pease.

And as I made custard or baked the cake,
A voice kept saying: "For love's sweet sake!"
And, when the table I sat for four,
Again I heard it, o'er and o'er:
"True love is better than wealth or ease,
True love rejoices in tasks like these!"

The clock on the wall, with its pleasant song,
Ticked away, though the hours were long;
At last it was time for my loved ones three,
To gather around the board with me.
In came two, with a merry shout—
The children are in, but the father is out—
I wondered if my True Love 'twould please'
To know my thoughts, as I shelled the pease!

A hand is heard on the outer door,
A well-known step comes over the floor,
And my Darling is here; though no longer young,
I wondered not that the tune was sung,
For love in its loved one true beauty sees,
When a stranger eye might see naught to please.

The merry children make mirth for all
While the mother smiles and the father tall
Bends low to whisper a loving word,
That by no ear but her own is heard:
"Sweetheart, what viands could taste like these!
With love, I'm sure, you have flavored the pease!"

So, over and over, the whole day long,
Sung, in my heart, the little song:
"What matters it if the house be small,
If Love finds shelter within its wall?
Naught else I crave but my Love to please,
Though humble my task, as I shell the pease!"
—Maud Wyman, in Good Housekeeping.

NEWT BLEDSOE'S WIFE.

How She Got the Drop on a United States Marshal.

SOME days ago an old deputy United States marshal sat in a hotel corridor at Birmingham, Ala., and talked about hunting moonshiners, says a Chicago Times correspondent.

"Some of these moonshiners," said he, "are as treacherous as Indians, and will shoot at an officer from ambush, but they are poor marksmen and seldom hit a man. I have been shot at a dozen times without receiving a scratch. It is this shooting from ambush and the pranks the moonshiners play on a revenue officer when they catch one alone in the mountains that makes hunting them exciting sport.

"I have often spent a night at the home of an innocent-looking mountaineer and next morning found my saddle and bridle cut to pieces or my horse turned out of the stable and driven away. Up in De Kalb County once I spent the night at the house of a man who was supposed to be a good citizen and not in sympathy with moonshiners. I slept in a shed-room, and there was no lock on the door. The next morning my pants were gone. Every thing had been taken out of the pockets and left in the room, but the pants had been spirited away. My landlord expressed much sympathy for my loss, but charged me five dollars for a second-hand pair of his jeans trousers that were probably worth one dollar when new, and I had to pay him the money before I could get out of bed.

"The wives and daughters of moonshiners, as a rule, are smarter than the men and much more suspicious of a stranger. I was over in Clay County on a raid once and was in a locality where almost every man owned a still. In such a place it is hard to locate a still and almost impossible to obtain evidence against the owners unless they are caught in the act of making the 'mountain dew.' I introduced myself as a land agent prospecting for mineral lands, but the natives did not all believe my story and I was regarded with more or less suspicion. I was after a noted moonshiner named Newt Bledsoe, who was known to have been operating a still in that locality for two years. I had trouble in finding a place where they would let me stay all night, but finally a native suggested that I try Deacon Bledsoe.

"'Ther deakin's sot on 'ligion, the Bible, and sich, an' 'e allus takes in strangers,' said the native. I was directed to the deacon's house, two miles down the valley, and arrived there an hour after dark. I did not once associate

"DRAP THAT THAR WEEPIN.

Deacon Bledsoe, who was 'sot on the Bible,' with Moonshiner Newt Bledsoe.

"In response to my hellos a tall, innocent-looking old countryman came out to the gate, and by the light of a pine torch which he carried in his hand he looked me over. 'Be you uns the new Methodist circuit-rider?' he asked. I decided to play preacher for once and answered in the affirmative.

"'Light, parson. I'm a hard-shell, but you're welcome. I never lays it up agin a man 'cause he don't belong to my church,' and the deacon received me with true mountain hospitality.

"At bedtime Bledsoe brought out a well-worn family Bible and invited me to lead in prayer. I had not prayed since I was a boy at Sunday-school, but was in for it, and reading a chapter in the Bible we all knelt down, and I delivered some sort of a prayer. In my petition I referred to those sinners who defied the laws of God and man by making spirits, and prayed the Lord to turn them from their wicked ways. To this Bledsoe responded with a loud amen!

"I rose early the next morning, and, finding that breakfast was not ready, I started for a short stroll in the woods back of the house. As I left the yard I noticed Bledsoe's wife watching me with evident suspicion. I walked on down to a small branch, which ran through the woods three hundred yards back of the house. I saw smoke rising among the trees a little ways down the branch, and walking down that way I found my host, Deacon Bledsoe, building a fire under one of the largest moonshine stills I ever saw. He seemed as much surprised as I was, and in an instant it dawned on me that Deacon Bledsoe and Moonshiner Newt Bledsoe were one and the same person. Before he recovered from his surprise I had him covered with my revolver, and telling him who I was, ordered him to surrender.

"'Drap that thar weepin'. I knowed you warn't no parson,' said a female voice behind me at that moment, and turning I saw Bledsoe's wife. She had the drop on me with a long rifle, and I dropped my pistol. Bledsoe picked up my revolver, and I was marched back to the house a prisoner.

"'Thar's your critter ready saddled an' here's a bite to eat; now git,' said Mrs. Bledsoe, and she kept me covered with the rifle, while her husband handed me back my pistol when I mounted my horse.

"'Won't you pray for us agin, parson, fore you go?' said Bledsoe, with a grin, as I rode away. A week later I returned with a strong posse, captured Bledsoe, and destroyed his still. I could have made a case against his wife, but I wouldn't do it.

"The only romantic adventure I ever met with hunting moonshiners occurred in Marion County five years ago. I was over there hunting some witnesses and incidentally looking out for stills. I was spending the night at the house of a man I had reason to believe was a moonshiner, and a dangerous one. I saw he regarded me with suspicion, but he asked no questions and I felt safe. The man had a daughter about eighteen years old, a very pretty country girl, who seemed to take no notice of my presence and did not once speak to me during the evening. The house was a log cabin, with a loft reached by a ladder. I was given a bed in the loft, and retired about ten o'clock. I heard my host talking in a low tone for some time after I lay down, then I heard him take his rifle from the rack and leave the house. I had been asleep probably two hours when the touch of a hand on my face awoke me. The girl was standing by my bed with a lighted candle in her hand. She motioned me to be silent, and in a whisper she said: 'Stranger, you'll have ter git. Your critter's at the gate. Take ther right-han' road at the forks, cross the creek, and don't stop this side of Lige Marcom's—that's 'bout four miles down ther road. Git out thar!' and she pointed to a small window in one end of the loft. Then she blew out the candle and disappeared as silently as a shadow. I put on my clothes, went to the window and found a ladder on the outside. At the gate I found my horse ready saddled, and, mounting, I rode rapidly away. I have never seen that girl since, but I am satisfied that she had learned of a plot to murder me, and saved my life."

"GIT OUT THAR!"

DISCOVERY OF COAL.

Who Was the First to Dig Up Pennsylvania's Black Diamonds.

The proposition to erect a monument to Philip Ginder, who discovered anthracite coal on Summit Hill, Carbon County, in 1791, has given rise to a number of claims for the honor of discovering coal in Pennsylvania. The Wyoming valley people claim that anthracite was known in that section of the State as early as 1756. There is a tradition that hard coal was burned in the Valley Forge about the time of the French and Indian war. Nevertheless the Mauch Chunk promoters of the the Ginder celebration refuse to be turned aside fron their plans. They point with pride to the fact that the Lehigh Valley Coal-Mining Company began practicing mining in Carbon County in 1792, in immediate consequence of Ginder's discovery, and it was only then that the possible importance of coal as a fuel began to be appreciated. They claim, therefore, that Ginder is entitled to a monument, and they propose that he shall have one, on the just grounds that the discoverer of anthracite is not the individual who knew that the ground contained black stones without knowing their use, but he whose discovery led to the use of coal as a fuel.

Ginder seems to be as much deserving of the honor of being called the discoverer of anthracite coal in Pensylvania as Fulton is of being called the inventor of a steamboat, or Isaac Newton the discoverer of differential calculus, or Robert Raikes the founder of Sunday-schools.—Philadelphia Press.

PATTY'S PRESUMPTION.

The Good Results of a Little Girl's Call.

"HULLO!"

A little white face turned wearily and a gleam of interest shot into the tired eyes as they caught sight of Patty outside the window. Patty was short and fat and her face covered with freckles, but to the little invalid she seemed a picture of beauty, for she belonged to the great outside world of which the sick girl only caught an occasional glimpse from her window in the big red brick hospital.

"Hullo!" she said, returning Patty's vigorous greeting in a weak little voice.

"See, I have brought you some flowers," continued Patty, holding up her hands full of buttercups and daisies. "I got them at a picnic; but how shall I get them up to you? Will they let me climb up to the window?"

Patience nodded, and Patty, tying the flowers in her handkerchief, climbed lightly up, clinging to lightning rod and window sill, and, holding by one hand, emptied the contents of the handkerchief into Patience's lap. The sick child gave a cry of gladness, and, gathering them up, held them to her face.

"They're lots prettier in the woods and meadows," said Patty. "They just peek up among the green leaves so cute. I wish you could see them."

"I wish I could," said Patience, her face full of longing. "I never was in the woods in all my life."

"Oh, my!" gasped Patty, "how sorry I am for you. I wish I could take you there, but we haven't any thing but our baby carriage, and you couldn't double your feet up in that cause you're lame."

Just then the matron entered, giving Patty such a fright that she nearly fell off the window ledge; but the matron smiled when she saw her, and stopped to look at the flowers.

"Her name is Patty," explained Patience, "and she lives next door. She feels so sorry for me because I am lame that she has saved me these flowers. She says if they had a carriage she would take me to the woods, too."

"Well, I don't know about that; if they had a carriage, they would be like all the rest of the folks—never a thought for any one but themselves. I often think that if the people who have carriages would remember the sick in the hospitals, how many weary days would be brightened."

"Patty, Patty," called a shrill voice, "ma says to come home and take care of the baby." And she slid down to the ground pondering the matron's words. Patty lived so near the hospital that she caught many glimpses of the suffering within those high brick walls, but she had never been able to show her sympathy for the little inmates except by an occasional cheery nod and a "hullo," when she caught sight of a face at the window.

Patience had been there so long that she felt very well acquainted with her, and her tender little heart was filled with plans to take her to the woods as she sat bobbing the baby up and down in his crib. She lived in the rear of one of the great avenues, and as she watched the carriages roll past she wondered why it was only those who had none wanted to take sick people to drive.

Just then a carriage came by that Patty had often admired. The stately horses with their clanking silver chains, the immovable coachman in high top boots, and the soft silken cushions against which Mrs. Muchmore leaned, would be just the thing for Patience's lame back, Patty thought.

"She looks sick herself," she commented, as Mrs. Muchmore's dissatisfied eyes rested on her and the baby for a moment, and then turned languidly away. "I shouldn't wonder a bit if she would do it if she only thought of it. I believe I'll ask her."

"I HAVE BROUGHT YOU SOME FLOWERS."

The idea was so fascinating that Patty could think of nothing else. She had always wanted to make a call on somebody, and here was her chance. She remembered having heard somewhere that people who called must have calling cards, and she set about making one. A sheet of note paper was cut in two, and Miss Patty Hawkins was printed upon it in her very best letters. Then her mother's best hat and lace mitts were borrowed. She did not stop to ask for them, so sure was she that the object of her call would make her willing to lend them. The baby was cross that afternoon and would not go to sleep, and Patty was in despair for fear her visit could not be made. But at last she was free, and, summoning all her courage she mounted the massive stone steps, card in hand, and rang the bell. The tall footman who opened the door stared in astonishment at the queer little figure before him. The fat, freckled face surmounted by the tall hat crowned with waving feathers, and the monstrous lace mitts, brought a smile to his usually severe countenance.

"Is Miss Muchmore to home?" asked Patty, serenely handing him the card.

Thomas was about to make reply that Mrs. Muchmore was engaged, when the voice of her maid at his elbow stopped him.

"Don't send her away. The mistress is in one of her worst spells and if any thing can bring her out of it, a sight of that young one will."

So Thomas gravely led the way to Mrs. Muchmore's room, Patty's card on his salver, and followed by Patty herself.

"Miss Patty Hawkins," he announced, throwing open the door.

Mrs. Muchmore raised her languid eyes, and then sat up in surprise.

"Ah! Miss Hawkins, are you well?"

"Yes'm, so as to be about," answered Patty, remembering the oft-repeated phrase of an old woman who visited her mother.

Thomas placed her a chair and departed with a grin. Mrs. Muchmore hesitated for a moment, and then asked: "Is there any thing special you called to see me about?"

"Yes'm," answered Patty, "it is about your carriage. I should like to borrow it." Then, seeing the lady's look of astonishment she hastened to add: "It's for Patience—she's lame, you know—I can walk. If your man is too busy to go, my pa can drive real good. He drives the grocery wagon lots of times."

"I do not think I quite understand you," faltered Mrs. Muchmore. "I do not know who Patience is!"

"Why, she's the little girl over to the hospital!"

And Patty, forgetting that she must hold her head very still on account of her hat, which was very much too large, nodding toward the building. Down dropped the hat to her shoulders, completely hiding her fat face. She hastened to push it back, crimson with embarrassment, stealing a quick glance at her hostess. But no one could have told from Mrs. Muchmore's face but that she was accustomed to having her visitors' hats extinguish them like a pair of sniffers.

"MISS PATTY HAWKINS," HE ANNOUNCED.

By a few words she succeeded in making Patty feel at ease and was listening with interest to the story of Patience.

"Tell her when you see her again that I shall be very glad to take her to the woods to-morrow, if it is pleasant; and my man is never too busy to drive me," she added, with a smile.

Patty, full of excitement, ran home to her mother, forgetting the borrowed hat.

"Why, Patty Hawkins," she cried, angrily, giving her a little shake, "where have you been with my hat?"

"I've been to call on Mrs. Muchmore," answered Patty, eagerly, "and she asked me to come again."

"Well, you are the most presumptionest child I have ever heard of." And Mrs. Hawkins, forgetting vexation, burst into peals of ringing laughter. "Asked you to come again, did she? Ha, ha, ha! with that hat, ha, ha, ha! And those mitts, ho, ho, ho! If you ain't the very funniest looking figure I ever see. You're enough to make the most melancholy woman in the world go into hysterics, ha, ha, ha!"

"She didn't laugh at all," cried Patty, the tears starting to her eyes, "and she's going to take Patience to ride."

True to her word Mrs. Muchmore called for Patience the next day, and it seemed to her, as she sat by the child's side, that she looked at the trees, the fields and the river for the first time, for she saw them through the eyes of the little invalid, whose pleasure was too deep for words.

"It's more like Heaven," she said once, in answer to a question from her new friend. "No, ma'am, I never saw any thing so beautiful before. I got hurt when I was a little bit of a thing, and I never could walk since. Oh! no, I don't mind it so much now, because I can sit in a chair by the window. It is hard to stay in bed all the time."

That was only the beginning of many drives for Patience, and before the summer was over she went for a week to Mrs. Muchmore's cottage by the lake, and Patty was invited to go with her and help amuse her. When she had once begun, Mrs. Muchmore found it hard to know where to stop, and the little inmates of the children's hospital began to think of her as their good fairy.

"What a pleasure it must be to be rich," said a friend to her one day.

"Yes," answered Mrs. Muchmore, "but I never found it out until this summer, and I shall never cease to be grateful to Miss Patty Hawkins for helping me to see the real blessedness in it."—Louisa T. Brooks, in Congregationalist.

—A French paper announces that successful experiments with navigable balloons have recently been carried out at the Meudon Arsenal. After a number of failures M. Renard has succeeded in constructing an electric motor of seventy-horse power, of very small dimensions, weighing only four hundred and eighty kilogrammes, and working for ten hours. It is believed that with the aid of this invention the problem of navigating balloons may be finally solved.

EVIDENTLY the days of big nuggets in Australia are not yet over. By the last mails from Perth comes the statement that "five men arrived from Shaw Falls, Nullagine (a Western Australian gold field), bringing with them 460 ounces of gold and a big nugget weighing 358 ounces 9 pennyweights." It is described as "a very massive and handsome nugget."

THE Berlin fire department has lately received a novel fire-engine which has excited much interest in that city. The carriage is constructed entirely of papier-mache, all the different parts, the body, wheels, poles and the rest being finished in the best possible manner. While the durability and powers of resistance possessed by this material are fully as great as those of wood the weight is of course much less. This lightness is considered a great advantage, as it will enable the new engines to reach the scene of a fire with correspondingly greater promptness. It seems not unlikely that the wooden carriages will in a short time pass out of use altogether.

A DUEL was recently fought at a little village on the Belgian frontier in which every thing was conducted under strict antiseptic precautions. The sword-blades were first placed in boiling water and then carefully washed in a 5 per cent. solution of carbolic acid. The surgeons were ready with a corrosive sublimate solution of one to a thousand and a number of gauze pledgets which had been rendered aseptic by thorough baking. Unfortunately for the success of the experiment the duel was of the ordinary French kind, and the only wound received was a slight cut on the hand, which healed promptly after the application of a small piece of aseptic court-plaster.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

The Best Remedy

In this world, says J. Hoffner of Syracuse, N. Y., is Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son who was terribly penalized three years ago and attacked by fits, has not had any symptoms of them since he took one bottle of the remedy. I most heartily thank for it.

Nervous Prostration Cured.

CROGHAN, N. Y. June, 1888.

I was not able to do anything for 19 months, was confined to bed most of the time, couldn't eat nor sleep, was so nervous and dizzy that I could not walk from the house to the garden. I was all run down by what the doctors called nervous prostration. No medicine seemed to help me. Then I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic and now I can eat and sleep and have no more shaking spells, can do my housework again. I am very thankful for this and recommend the Tonic to all sufferers.

SUSIE YERSHNEIDER.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

FORCED TO SUSPEND

Another Shock for Wall Street Financiers.

A DEFALCATION OF OVER $350,000.

The Firm of Robeson & Smith Ruined by the Junior Member.

The Peculations Covered a Period of Six Years—The Discovery Made by the Cashier—The Forger Confesses His Guilt. He Became Embarrassed Owing to Bad Speculations—A Prominent Club Man.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—It has just been learned that the brokerage firm of Mills, Robeson & Smith, at 96 Broadway, have been ruined on account of the defalcation of $350,000 by Albert H. Smith, the junior member of the firm.

The peculations had continued for a period of six years, and were discovered by sheer accident by William A. Watson, the cashier of the firm. Smith confessed his guilt to his partners and turned over to the firm $30,000 in cash and real estate, which he said was every dollar he possessed in the world.

In his confession he said that about six years ago he became embarrassed owing to bad speculations on his own account. He needed money to make good his losses, and believing that he could return it again he started in on his criminal career. His mode of operation was to buy either 7, 8 or 9 shares of preferred stock and then raise the figures to 70, 80 or 90 on the certificate by simply placing a naught after the figure, and add the letter "y" to the word eight, and the letters "ty" after seven and nine. Having a private account with the firm he was enabled in this way to draw out 80 per cent. of the face or apparent value of the stocks. The firm would borrow the money by placing the certificates in the various loan companies with which they were connected.

Cashier Watson noticed a little irregularity about a certificate that Smith had turned over to the firm, and making some inquiries he soon became convinced that the certificate had been raised. He notified Mr. Mills and Mr. Robeson, who sent for Mr. Smith and asked him to explain. Smith at once broke down and made a full confession. He was allowed to go home, but later was arrested there by one of Inspector Byrnes' detectives.

Smith, who is about 45 years of age, is well known on the street. He bore a good reputation, belonged to many of Brooklyn's fashionable clubs, and was also a member of the late Henry Ward Beecher's church.

Messrs. Mills and Robeson say the defalcation will reach $350,000, and that they are the principal losers. How it was that the forgeries were not discovered long ago is a surprise to all concerned. The firm has assigned and William A. Watson has been appointed assignee.

THE FINANCIAL OUTLOOK.

A More Hopeful View Entertained by Wall Street Capitalists.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—What will to-day bring forth? was asked by many in Wall street, and the conundrum could not be answered. The Barings trouble, the Villard uncertainty, the North American pinch, the North River Bank collapse and the astounding revelations concerning the operations of the brokerage house of Mills, Robeson & Smith were all causes which disturbed the financial solons. The outlook for this week was unanimously pronounced doubtful, but everybody entertained hopes for the best.

"This storm will clear the financial atmosphere," said one well-known gentleman. "It is too bad to see so many poor fellows swept away in the disastrous flood, but the country at large will be the better for it. A speculative fever can only be cured by heroic treatment, which always leaves the patient weak, but he ought to be thankful that his life has been saved."

The market was very feverish at the opening and became dull about noon. The general opinion prevails that at least a lull in the financial storm may be expected, although liquidation is not yet completed. The banks have been obliged by force of circumstances to be lenient with their customers, but the latter will now be asked to settle up their indebtedness as soon as the course of the market permits of their compliance with the request.

The keenest interest is manifested in the Villard properties, and the misanthropes are looking for another terrific crash and wondering when it will come. A good many million of dollars are invested in the stocks and bonds of these concerns, and just now every certificate has an anxious holder behind it. The pressure by the investors to get some definite information concerning the condition of the North American Company has been practically futile, and the uncertainty adds to the gossip which contributes to the uneasy feeling.

Fought Fourteen Rounds.

CHESTER, Pa., Nov. 17.—A stubbornly fought prize fight took place at Baldwin's Run, about three miles from here, at an early hour. The contestants were Ned McLaughlin, a local pugilist, and Jimmy Carroll, of Philadelphia. The fight took place in an empty barn and there were about 300 spectators. The fight began at midnight and lasted one hour and 45 minutes. Fourteen terrible rounds were fought with bare nuckles, and McLaughlin, though he was 10 pounds lighter than his opponent, managed to knock out Carroll. Both men were badly used up, each man receiving a lot of punishment. Ed McCann was referee.

May Reduce the Capital Stock.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Nov. 17.—The Acushaet mills corporation of this city has called a special meeting of the stockholders for Thursday, the 30th inst. Among other matters to be considered is a proposition to reduce the capital stock from $1,000,000 to $800,000.

SICK OF MORMONISM.

A Band of Pennsylvanians Return Home Hungry and Penniless.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Nov. 17.—The Mormon propaganda in the rural districts of Pennsylvania seems to be a failure. Last spring and winter half a dozen Mormon missionaries made their appearance in various parts of Franklin, Fulton and Adams Counties, and assiduously but secretly pursued the work of proselyting. They chose the most secluded localities, and at length succeeded in making 25 or 30 converts. Shortly after embracing the new religion these converts sold their farms and set out for the promised land of Utah.

A few days ago fifteen of them, comprising Stephen McPherren and seven of his friends, with seven children, reached Waynesboro, down in the lower end of this county, penniless, hungry and ragged, having returned from Salt Lake on third class tickets with short rations. They had been gone just a year, but in that time their ruin had been complete. Their homes in Utah, they say, were in a narrow valley between precipitous mountains, over whose tops the sun shone only four hours out of 24. Although the land was productive, the cost of living was so high that they exhausted all their savings and they had become thoroughly sick of the venture. Accordingly they returned home.

STRIKE RATHER THAN OBEY.

Reading Engineers Ordered to Supplant Dissatisfied Comrades.

MORRISTOWN, Pa., Nov. 17.—The crews of coal trains on the Reading Railroad have presented a petition to the company asking that they be paid by the hour instead of by the trip. The petition was ignored and a number of the crews have left the employ of the company.

The places of the conductors and brakemen are easily filled, but it is difficult to get engineers. A number were ordered from another division. Several obeyed, but some resigned rather than take the places. Those ordered to take the places understand that they can leave if they don't obey. The situation has caused a sensation among railroad men.

P. T. Barnum Very Ill.

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 14.—P. T. Barnum, the octogenarian showman, lies dangerously ill at Marina, his handsome residence in this city. For a week he has been confined to his bed, suffering with an attack of influenza in its most malignant form. Dr. Robert Hubbard has been in almost constant attendance upon the invalid. Mrs. Barnum, too, and a trained nurse have watched him solicitously night and day. If he pulls through safely it will be because of their nursing.

Burned to Death While Blacking a Stove.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Miss Kate Finnigan, a servant in the employ of E. M. Wells, at Addison, while blacking a stove with a liquid blacking, held the blacking too near the fire, when it became heated and exploded, the burning fluid flying on her clothing and setting it on fire. She ran into the yard with her clothing all burning and was so severely burned that she died at 4 a. m.

Delayed Vessels Arrive.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The steamers City of Berlin, Umbria and Brittanic from Liverpool; Normannia from Hamburg; Trave from Bremen, and State of Georgia from Glasgow, have just arrived. All the vessels report a stormy passage. Among the passengers on the Normannia was Hon. C. De Cedarcrantz, chief justice at Samos. He was Grand Chamberlain to the King of Sweden.

The Maid Was Innocent.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Mrs. Arthur E. Bateman on Wednesday last missed a diamond brooch valued at $12,000 and had her maid, Louise Lachat, arrested on suspicion. Last night the brooch was found in Mrs. Bateman's house on Fifth avenue behind a curtain, where she left it. The lady expresses herself as very much pleased to learn that the maid was innocent.

Another Victim.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 17.—C. C. Hicks, of Providence, who was injured in the Pennsylvania Railroad accident on Friday, died at the Johnstown Hospital last night. All the other injured persons are likely to recover. The investigation to determine the responsibility for the accident is not concluded yet.

Secretary Proctor's Annual Report Out To-Day.

NEED OF MORE COAST DEFENCES.

Promotion from the Ranks and How to Prevent Desertions.

Ex-President Cleveland a Willing Candidate for the Presidency—Our New War Ships Better Than Great Britain's—Secretary Windom on National Banks and the Circulation of Paper Money.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The annual report of Secretary of War Proctor is made public. The Secretary says that the legislation of the present Congress has been unusually important, embracing provisions for lineal promotion and professional examinations therefor, acts for the prevention of desertion, for the limitation of punishments under the Articles of War, and the improvement of courts martial, and appropriations for additional machinery for the manufacture of large guns, and for the beginning of a system of coast defense.

He thinks the provisions for lineal promotion eminently just to officers, and declares that the decreased number of courts martial indicate that the measures adopted have improved the tone of the army.

One of the most interesting portions of the report is that devoted to coast defences, in which he says:

The military resources of the nation have been so recently demonstrated, and its network of railways is so adapted to a rapid concentration of troops on any threatened point, that no hostile force is likely to seek an encounter with us on our own soil. We have little to fear from invasion.

But our long coast line is peculiarly exposed to an attack from the sea. So long as an enemy can reach vulnerable points without exposing himself to our land forces he may inflict blows which we are unable to parry, and which may cause losses ill to be endured. No great civilized nation to-day has more just cause than ours to look well to the condition of its coast defences, and none, since the civil war, has so wholly neglected them. It is a matter of congratulation that this national deficiency is beginning to excite the attention it merits, especially as time, even more than money, is necessary for its proper preparation.

CLEVELAND WILLING.

The Ex-President Says if the People Want Him He Will Accept.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Representative Springer of Illinois, who nominated Mr. Cleveland in a speech at the Thurman banquet, and who came East with the ex-President in Senator-elect Brice's private car, has arrived here.

He described to a reporter, with interesting detail, the ovations which Mr. Cleveland received at every station where the train stopped. Men, women and children thronged to greet him, and hailed him as the next President of the United States. Finally Mr. Cleveland commented on the heartiness of the demonstrations.

"I would prefer to continue in private life," Mr. Springer quotes him as saying, "with complete control of my own time, but if they want me I shall be willing to accept."

Mr. Springer goes further, and regards Mr. Cleveland's nomination as a certainty. "He will be nominated," said Mr. Springer, "no matter whether New York wants it or not. He can carry Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, and come near carrying Kansas and Minnesota. The whole Northwest is with us on the tariff reform idea, and it has come to stay."

National Banks and Paper Money.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—It is not true, as has been reported, that Secretary Windom's annual report will recommend that the national banks shall be permitted to issue Treasury notes to the full value of the bonds deposited by them as security for circulation. The effect of this policy would be to add about $15,000,000 to the circulating medium of the country. Secretary Windom's regards this proposition, which was originally brought forward by Senator Sherman, with great favor. He does not believe, however, that the prevailing spirit of opposition to the national banks would enable a measure of this character to become a law. The silver men, he has been told, would oppose it, as well as the representatives of the granger interests. Although he will make no recommendations looking to this end, he has reason to believe that the matter will be agitated at the coming session of Congress, and he agrees with other intelligent students of finance that it ought to pass.

Resignation of Dr. Gregg.

BOSTON, Nov. 17.—The resignation of Rev. David Gregg, D. D., from the pastorate of the Park Street Church, in this city, was read to the congregation yesterday. Dr. Gregg has accepted a call to the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, of Brooklyn, N. Y., to succeed the Rev. Dr. Taylor.

AN ARMY LOCKED OUT.

Ten Thousand Hat Trimmers Thrown Out of Work To-Day.

DANBURY, Conn., Nov. 17.—The fur hat manufacturers closed their factories to members of the Trimmers' Union this morning.

As all hats have to pass through the hands of the trimmers the manufacturers' action will throw about 10,000 people out of work at once.

The trimmers are firm and say they are determined not to recede from their position. The probabilities are that there will be a long and bitter fight.

All the factories have plenty of orders on hand, and if the lockout continues very long it will be a severe blow to the prosperity of Danbury, as hatting is the only industry in the city.

To-day the finishers' and makers' associations will decide whether they will support the trimmers. If they decide to do so it will be difficult to predict the outcome. But if the other associations decide not to sustain the trimmers in their demands the manufacturers will probably win the fight in a few days.

The number of factories in the lockout is 18, and nearly 25,000 people are dependent on them for support.

SOCIETY SENSATION.

A New Jersey Belle Wants $25,000 for Breach of Promise.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Nov. 17.—George W. Hamilton, son of ex-Sheriff Robert Hamilton, has been sued by Miss Anna M. Powell, of Tuckahoe, N. J., for $25,000 damages for breach of promise. Both parties are of high families, and the affair has created a great sensation in the county.

For the past eight years Mr. Hamilton has been a frequent visitor to Miss Powell's abode, and their love for each other was apparently very deep. Several days ago, to the great surprise of Miss Powell, she received a curt note, in which her lover stated that he had ceased to care for her and that the engagement was irksome to him, and must, therefore, be considered off. Miss Powell's father learned of the affair and brought the suit.

The Envoys in New Hampshire.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 17.—Messrs. O'Brien and Sullivan, the Irish envoys, were given a great reception in this city yesterday. Mayor Varney presided at the afternoon meeting in Smythe Hall, and O'Brien and Sullivan made stirring speeches. Mechanics' Hall was packed at the evening reception, 3,000 persons being present. Governor Godell presided. Messrs. O'Brien and Sullivan told the story of Ireland's sufferings, and carried the audience completely with them. One thousand five hundred dollars was realized for the fighting fund.

Shot and Instantly Killed.

SANDWICH, Mass., Nov. 17.—Frank Lapham, aged 16, of Cotuit, was shot and instantly killed at that place by Rowland Burrows, aged 21. It seems that Burrows has recently come into possession of a shotgun, with which he has blazed away at nearly everything he saw while on his daily trips as a vender of milk. While at Cotuit Burrows went into a barn where Lapham was husking corn and deliberately pointing the gun at Lapham's head fired. The shooting is claimed to have been accidental. Burrows has not yet been arrested.

A Fuel Famine Feared.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 17.—A fuel famine is feared in Nebraska on account of lack of cars to transport coal from the Union Pacific mines in Wyoming to points in this State. Already a number of towns have reported that the coal supply has been exhausted and no more could be secured. In case of severe weather or a heavy fall of snow great suffering would ensue, as many of the towns in this State are entirely dependent on Union Pacific coal for fuel.

The O'Sullivan Confession.

JOLIET, Ill., Nov. 17.—The belief that O'Sullivan, the Cronin prisoner, has squealed is general here. The reason assigned for the denial is that in case O'Sullivan got out he would meet the same fate that Cronin did inside of three days. The discipline of the prison is also involved. The more earnest the denial the firmer grows the belief that the statement is true.

Dr. Gibier to Assist Dr. Koch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Dr. Paul Gibier, pupil of both Koch and Pasteur, and who lately attended the Berlin conference as an expert in the discovery of microbes, will probably return to Berlin to assist Dr. Koch in his investigations of the microbe of tuberculosis. Dr. Gibier was with him when he first began his scientific investigations.

Death of Editor Gardner.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Edward Gardner, postmaster at Bayonne, N. J., and editor and proprietor of the Bayonne Times, died here yesterday, aged 70 years. Mr. Gardner was formerly connected with the Cambridge Post, of Washington County, N. Y., and subsequently with the Brooklyn Eagle.

Miller Convicted.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 17.—Sebastian Miller, the German Hercules, was found guilty of assaulting Lavina Lupt, a 14-year-old girl, some time ago. Miller is known both in this country and in Europe, and for over a year traveled with Muldoon. He will be sentenced to-morrow.

THE O'SHEA SCANDAL

PARNELL STILL THE LEADER

A General Belief Among His Friends that He Must Retire.

A Talk With the Survivors of the Wrecked Cruiser Serpent—A Terrible Struggle for Life—Berlin's Two Hundred Millionaires—Spain's Ex-Prime Minister Greeted by 60,000 Persons in Madrid.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The chief topic of discussion in political circles is the O'Shea-Parnell case and its remarkable denouement. The general belief is that Mr. Parnell will retire from active public life for a time at least, and that Mr. Dillon will take the leadership of the Irish Parliamentary party.

Mr. Gladstone, it is alleged, would prefer to deal with some one as leader of the Home Rulers whose private character is not a subject of unfavorable public gossip, and it is also declared that the Irish Catholic priests will demand that the leader of their people shall be a morally clean man.

There will probably be no occasion for any controversy over this point, as Mr. Parnell has himself taken the initiative, according to trustworthy advices, toward effecting the suggested change of leadership.

It is expected that the suit will terminate to-day. There is no doubt as to the result. The judge will direct the jury to find for Captain O'Shea, and a decree nisi will be granted. At the end of six months Captain O'Shea can apply to have the decree made absolute. Then the marriage will be dissolved, leaving Mr. Parnell and Mrs. O'Shea free to marry if they wish. This is not an improbable consequence of the suit, according to the best opinion in political circles.

DUBLIN, Nov. 17.—Mr. Parnell, in a letter written to the Freeman's Journal, reminds his followers of the importance of being in Parliament on the opening day. He says it is unquestionable that the coming session will be one of combat from first to last and that great issues depend upon its course.

THE WRECKED SERPENT.

Survivors Tell How the English Cruiser Went Down.

CORUNNA, Nov. 17.—The British man-of-war Lapwing has just brought the survivors of H. M. S. Serpent to Corunna.

A correspondent boarded the vessel and obtained interviews with the fortunate men.

Burton, the first one questioned, said that the disaster to the Serpent occurred at 10:30 Monday evening. The night was a nasty one, but there was no fog. The rock on which the vessel struck was covered by water and could not be seen. All on board were below except the officers and six watchmen. They all rushed up on feeling the shock, but no panic resulted, and the orders of the officers were promptly obeyed. The large boat was soon lowered, but was almost instantly smashed to pieces among the rocks, and its occupants perished. It was useless to lower the other boats, and all efforts to throw a cable ashore failing, the situation was a hopeless one. The men were constantly being washed overboard by the heavy seas. Burton saw one wave wash away twelve men in a group.

Every Man for Himself.

After an hour of this terrible experience the captain gave the men leave to abandon the ship and save themselves as they thought best. Burton jumped overboard, wearing a life belt such as all the watchmen had on. He did not see any one follow him. He swam for two or three hours, fighting the waves, and finally managed to get to a spot sheltered by the rocks, where the water was calmer, and he was able to swim ashore. He was completely exhausted and his leg was somewhat bruised from the rocks. It was pitch dark. He rested for some time, and on starting to walk inland he met a comrade named Luton, with whom he walked until they came to a village two miles from the wreck. The people there conveyed them to Camarinas. Burton is quite well now. He assisted at Camarinas in identifying such of the corpses as were in a recognizable condition.

The Struggle in the Water.

Luton and the third survivor, Gould, are too ill to be on deck, and the correspondent found them in bed below. Luton confirmed Burton's story. He himself was washed overboard half an hour after the shock. He had no belt on. He devoted his strength in trying to avoid the spots where he heard the sea beating upon the rocks. After an hour and a half of this struggling he reached the calm water and landed on a sandy beach. He then first noticed that a piece of flesh had been torn from his leg. He could not tell how the injury occurred. He had not felt any pain before, but now every step was torture. He is improving rapidly.

Both Burton and Luton believe that the Serpent deviated from her course on account of the weather. The moment Cape Villano light was sighted the vessel struck the rocks. The light was very weak. Burton thinks the Serpent sank soon after he left.

Forty-eight Bodies Recovered.

When the Lapwing left the scene of the wreck 48 of the bodies had been recovered and buried. Many of them were unidentified. A majority of the victims were not drowned, but were killed by being dashed on the rocks.

Eyraud's Trial Postponed.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—The trial of Michael Eyraud, the strangler, who, along with Gabrielle Bombard as his accomplice, is charged with having murdered M. Gouge, a notary, in Paris, and who was subsequently captured in Havana, has been postponed until December.

SYMPATHY FOR A MURDERER.

He Killed the Man Who Caused His Wife's Insanity.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 17.—George Maltey, a Polander, is on trial for murder at Montrose, being charged with killing John Burbeck at Forest City in July last.

Maltey charged that Burbeck, who sought to seduce his wife, gave her poisons which made her insane. Her removal to the Danville Asylum was rendered necessary. Upon his return from the asylum Maltey brooded over his wrongs, and finally grew so furious that he hunted up Barbeck and slew him.

As Burbeck's guilt was pretty well established, public sympathy is with Maltey, and his acquittal is confidently predicted.

SUCCI LOSING FLESH.

The Italian Faster Falling Away, But Still in Good Spirits.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Signor Succi, the 45-day faster, is now on the 12th day of his voluntary deprivation of food. A corps of 24 senior students of the Medical College of the University of New York have assumed the duty of watching the faster.

They are divided into 12 watches of two hours each, two being always present. Succi's weight has decreased from 147½ pounds to 128½. His pulse had fallen to 59, which is much below the normal figure. This, however, indicates nothing dangerous in his case, as his pulse is very unequal when in health.

He is in good spirits and is positive that he will succeed in his undertaking.

Thirty Soldiers Killed on the Rail.

SALONICA, Nov. 17.—A train from Askule crowded with Turkish soldiers whose time had expired has been derailed. Thirty of the soldiers were killed and forty wounded. The accident was caused by heavy rains having sapped the foundation of the roadway.

—The Pingry foot-ball team beat the Leal team at Plainfield Saturday by the score of 11 to 0.

—The charming little comedienne, Dottie Pine, and her excellent company, arrived in town this morning.

—The meeting of the Warren Mission Boys' Society No. 2, will be postponed, on account of Mr. Mills's meeting, until Nov. 24, at 8 o'clock.

—The Directors of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association will hold their regular monthly meeting in Jackson & Codington's office this evening at eight o'clock.

—Pierre Larue writes from Paris to Plainfield to ask Police Captain Grant to find his father, Jean Larue, who when last heard from was working for a farmer in this section.

—Fayette Welch, the black-faced star, will appear in conjunction with little Dottie Pine in the greatest of all sensational comedy dramas, "Pert, the Girl Detective," at Amphion Hall to-night.

—Special religious services will be held in the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed church on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evening of this week, commencing at 7:45. All are welcome.

—The "First Church of Christ" will continue to hold meetings every night this week, except Saturday. The subject this evening will be, "Prepare to Meet Thy God." All these meetings are well attended, and interesting, and everyone is welcome to attend.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

A little daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. George Polhemus, of North Plainfield, yesterday morning.

The assemblies, this Winter, will be held at The Casino. The dates are Dec., 15, Jan., 1 and 19, and Feb., 9.

Mrs. Elmore D. Moffett was one of the guests at the silver wedding celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Peter S. VanAngle n at New Brunswick, Friday evening.

Arthur L. Titsworth of Madison avenue, has so far recovered from his recent serious illness, as to be able to be out again. He sat with the choir at the Crescent Avenue church.

Corydon E. Tyler, the former Superintendent of Warren Mission, was the guest, yesterday, of Mr. and Mrs. H. Raymond Munger, of Washington Park. He occupied a seat on the platform with Mr. Mills and the Plainfield pastors, yesterday morning and evening in the Crescent Avenue church.

Miss Jennie Houghton, who for the past year has been preparing for her debut on the stage, has consented as a special favor to Plainfield to make her farewell appearance on skates in The Crescent. She will give an exhibition there on Thanksgiving afternoon and evening, probably for the last time.

A Feast of Reason.

A series of afternoon and evening lectures has been arranged to be given at the Seminary, during the coming season, as follows:

Thursday, Nov. 20—8 P. M.—Explorations in Babylon, by the Rev. Wm. Hayes Ward, of "The Independent."

Monday, Dec. 8—3 P. M.—101 Mistakes, by Mrs. Florence Howe Hall.

Saturday, Jan. 10—8 P. M.—A Conversation on Natural History, by Wm. Hamilton Gibson.

Friday, Jan. 30—3 P. M.—The English Language as it is Spoken in the Best Society; by Mrs. Florence Howe Hall.

Monday, March 9—3 P. M.—Personal Reminiscences of Distinguished People, by Mrs Florence Howe Hall.

Monday, April 13—3:30 P. M.—Bach and Beethoven, Analytical Recital, by Miss May.

A Kick from the Park.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Would it not be well for the Music Hall management to alter their advertisement in the papers so that unsuspecting people might not be deceived by the statement that "North Plainfield stages will run for the performance?" The Somerset street stage did run Saturday night, I believe, but the Washington Park omnibus appeared not. If Mr. Higgins has no idea of running regularly on theatre nights the Music Hall advertisement should be changed so that confiding residents of the Park may not be led to wait a half-hour on the corner for the stage that never comes.

WASHINGTON PARK.

Pastor Kempshall Vindicated.

The Rev. Dr. Kempshall, the pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Elizabeth, announced to his congregation yesterday, that the charge that he had taken a hand in the recent election had been investigated by the elders of the church and he had been vindicated. Mayor Rankin, the Republican candidate for State Senator, was a member of Dr. Kempshall's church and he has left it, after the election, the Mayor asserting that his pastor worked against him because he could not place himself on record as being opposed to the race tracks.

DECLINATIONS AND ACCEPTANCES.

John B. Brown Willing but Unable—He Indorses Joseph S. Cutter who Consents—Justus Hesse too Busy.

The following letters speak for themselves:

To J. E. Martine, President of the Democratic Association:

DEAR SIR:—While deeply grateful for the honor conferred in tendering me the Democratic nomination for Mayor of this city, in deference to the wishes of my family and advice of my physician, I am reluctantly, compelled to decline the proffered honor. I am warmly in sympathy with the views of your convention in selecting as a candidate a citizen whose business and interests make it possible to be in the city during the day, in order that he may be readily reached by our citizens.

Assuring you of my heartfelt gratitude and interest in your efforts for a prudent city goverment. I am respectfully yours,

JOHN B. BROWN,

Plainfield, Nov. 17, 1890.

To J. E. Martine, Jas. Clark, L. F Wadsworth, etc, Committee:

GENTLEMEN:—In response to the tendered honor, making me a candidate for the office of Mayor of this city, I am prompted to accept the distinguished compliment, fully realizing the responsibilities attached to that important office; believing with Jefferson that "public office should not be too eagerly sought nor lightly declined." The needs of our city demand such a prudent, conservative and economical anmistration as is consitent with reasonable progress; and all efforts that tend to encourage a large indebtness, should be stoutly opposed. Should I be called by the votes of my fellow citizens to the office of Mayor, I pledge myself to administer the duties of that office impartially with an eye single to the best interests of the people even the humblest of my fellow citizens.

Very respectfully,

JOSEPH S. CUTTER.

Nov. 17, 1890.

To James E. Martine, Esq., President of the Democratic Association:

DEAR SIR:—It is with regret that I am compelled to decline the honor conferred upon me in your convention of the 13th inst., nominating me as your standard bearer of the Democracy of the Third Ward of this city as councilman.

Business matters compel me much to my regret to decline the honor desired to be conferred. Trusting that the Democracy of Plainfield will succeed in their efforts.

I remain yours truly,

JUSTUS H. HESSE

Plainfield, Nov. 15, 1890.

OBITUARY.

Daniel Runkle.

The death of Daniel Runkle occurred at eight o'clock this morning at the residence of his son, Harry G. Runkle, 61 West Eighth street.

Mr. Runkle had been ill at his son's home two weeks, but his death to-day was very sudden and unexpected.

Mr. Runkle's own home was at Asbury, Warren county, where he had a magnificent country seat, and where he had lived nearly all his life. He was born in 1823, and was therefore sixty-seven years of age. He was a man of immense fortune, estimated to be at least $5,000,000. He was very prominent in financial circles, and was interested in a great many large and important concerns.

He was President and Treasurer of the Warren Foundry, a large pipe producing establishment at Phillipsburg; was President of the corporation of Runkle, Smith & Co., a big construction company in New York, now engaged in building the Havana water works; was at the head of the Havana Water-Works and Havana Gas Companies; was a large stockholder in the Plainfield Water Supply Company and Plainfield Gas Light Company; and also held large amounts of stock in the Hackensack Water Works and Paterson and Rochester Gas Works Companies. He leaves another son besides H. G. Runkle, and a daughter.

Two Topsys, Two Marks, but One Eva.

The version of Uncle Tom's Cabin interpreted by Stetson's double monster company, which will exhibit at Music Hall this evening, has met the especial approval of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, the immortal authoress of that world-famed drama, from the fact of Manager Stetson's adherence to the original text, which is a complete deviation from the custom of other Uncle Tom managers, who interpolate so many attempted gags, stale jokes and vulgar witticisms into their renditions that scarcely a vestige is left of the never-to-be-forgotten work. Aside from the great worth of the company, every act will be presented with new and elaborate scenery, painted by the master scenic artist of the world. The excellent company, two comical Topsies, the two ludicrous musical Marks, the elegant scenery, the novel mechanical effects, the ferocious bloodhounds, two brass bands and the celebrated Lone Star Quartette will all unite in making the engagement a most notable one.

As a cough remedy, Hires' Cough Cure is, perhaps, the best medicine that science has ever discovered. It cuts the phlegm and mucus, relieves the lungs and chest, breaks up cold as nothing else will do. In croup and whooping-cough its prompt action is like magic. No family should be without it.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

FIGURES THAT TALK.

Our National Drink Bill and the People Who Pay It.

"You can not have your cake and eat it, too." So reads the immutable law which we all some time mournfully learned in childhood. A nation can not drink its income and have it, too. What people spend for drink they can not spend for food, clothing or dwellings, books, schools or churches. If a man spends $100 a year for drink he can not spend that $100 for clothes for himself or family, for food or fuel, or any of the comforts of life. This is not a mere abstract argument, but a truth which has awful practical demonstration in every community. We all know families utterly wretched because the husband and father drinks up the earnings which might support them in comfort. The Nation is only a collection of families. According to the latest estimates, which have passed unchallenged, the criticism of those staunch liquor papers, the Chicago Champion and the Brewers' Journal, the whole Nation is spending more than $1,100,000,000 annually for intoxicating liquors, and increasing the amount at the rate of $50,000,000 a year. By a fair deduction of all receipts from State and National taxation of the traffic, it would easily amount to a clear $1,000,000,000, for which the Nation receives no return. If our population is 60,000,000, that amounts to $16.66 for every man, woman and child; at the military rate of one able-bodied man for every five persons, that would give $80 cash loss every year for every able-bodied man in the Nation. If one-half of these do not drink, that will carry the amount which the average drinker wastes up to $160 annually. It easily amounts to $100. Few are the drinking men who are content with less than five glasses of beer a day, making 25 cents a day and $90 a year; for men who drink every other day, get it somehow on Sunday. From their point of view they "must" have it. Add in occasional "treats" and "sprees" and "whiskies" at ten to fifteen cents a glass, and you see how easy it is to overrun $100. Now, for the man who is earning $300, or even $600 a year, think what a terrible draft that $100 for liquor is upon the subsistence of his family. So is the expenditure of $1,000,000,000 a terrible draft upon the families of the Nation.

Let no man flatter himself that he does not have to pay part of that thousand millions because he does not drink the liquor. If one-half of the men in the Nation were to fire off their wages in gunpowder as fast as received, would not the other half have to pay for the fire-works? Certainly they would, for they would have to support the men and the families of the men whose wages had gone up in smoke. It is just the same when wages go down in drink.

This is the greatest cause of hardship to the working-men. Far be it from us to say that all their poverty is caused by drink. There are thousands sober, faithful and industrious, toiling with a devotion that is sublime to support themselves and their dear ones amid ill-adjusted social conditions. The drinking man is a worse rival than the Chinaman. When he is sober he can do nearly as good work as another man, but being always under the harrow he is glad to work for hand to mouth wages. So he brings down the wages of every man who works with him. The intemperate man does not support his wife and children. Hence his wife must go into the wage-market, to work for what she can get, and bring prices down still lower. The sober working-men must pay for the support of the wives and children of drunkards, for the arrest, trial and conviction of drink-criminals, and for the support of their families while they are imprisoned. They must pay, too, for all the idle time and spoiled goods caused by drink in the factory, for all these things increase the employers' expenses, and are sure to cut down the workman's wages.

The tradesmen pay their part, too. We will suppose that at the first four-corners beyond the drinking-man's home there are four business places. No. 1 is a saloon, No. 2 is a grocery, No. 3 a dry-goods store, No. 4 a boot and shoe store. Just beyond lives his landlord. The working-man receives $12 in wages Saturday night, and starts out to spend it as follows:

For Groceries	$2 00
" Dry-goods	2 00
" Children's shoes	3 00
" Rent due	5 00

But he comes to the saloon first, and stops in there. He owes a little "score," which he pays. All the dead-beats who hang around pass the word that he has money about him. They drop in, crowd around, and on one pretext or another get him to "treat the crowd." But the time he comes out, $5 of his money is gone. He has lost that $5. But is he the only one who has lost it? Let us see. When he leaves the saloon, he takes out his memorandum of expenses amounting to $12. In his purse there are now only $7. Somehow that list must be cut down by the amount of $5. He must let the children's shoes go and the groceries or the dry-goods, or leave his rent unpaid. The grocer, the dry-goods merchant, the boot and shoe dealer and the real-estate owner, among them, must get $5 less than they would have received if the saloon had been out of the way.

This, which is true for one man's expenditures, is true proportionately for the Nation. You see it in the bare feet, the fireless rooms, the pinched faces and tattered clothing of the families of drinking men and the wretched tenements where they live. All that means that these people have not bought the food and fuel, the shoes and dry-goods, they would have bought, nor paid the rent they would have paid if the money had not been spent for liquor. In other words, the grocer and the butcher, the dry-goods dealer and the shoe dealer, the coal merchant and the owner of real estate have lost what the saloon has got. What is called "over-production" is simply the withdrawal by the liquor dealers of $1,000,000,000 from the industries of the Nation.

The farmers have the privilege of paying their part to the support and enrichment of the saloon-keeper. They help in the great enterprise, even if they do not drink. How is that? Well, every one knows that the sale of farm products is painfully slow. While women and children in the city are starving, the farmers of Illinois, Kansas and Dakota are lamenting over corn crops that shake like Lebanon and wheat-fields fair as the garden of God. If you could bring the surplus harvest to the deficient stomach, there would be rejoicing at both ends of the line. It is not a mere question of transportation, for you might pile that grain in sky-touching elevators in the cities, and the starvation of the poor go on all the same. They have not the money to buy with, and they never will have while $1,000,000,000 is wasted for intoxicants.

"But, now, see here," says some farming friend, "isn't all the beer and whisky made out of grain? and doesn't that grain have to be bought of the farmers? What difference does it make whether the people buy it in the form of food or in the form of drink?" It is the difference between 25 cents and $50 per bushel. According to the report of the Bureau of Statistics of the United States for 1889, there were used in the manufacture of intoxicating liquors 15,319,863 bushels of corn. The total of all grains so used was 20,990,924 bushels. If we consider it all as corn, and divide the total expenditure for liquor in that year—$1,100,000,000—by the number of bushels, we have a little more than $50 a bushel which the drinkers paid for their grain in the form of liquor. Sold as corn, the bushel of corn brought the Western farmer something like 25 cents. Sold as liquor it brought the liquor dealer a solid $50. But observe, the farmer only received his 25 cents just the same.

Now, the people who have paid $50 for corn in the form of liquor will have so much less money to spend for corn in the shape of corn. If we suppose the retail price of corn to them would average 50 cents, then the $50 they have spent for corn in the shape of liquor would have bought 100 bushels of corn in the shape of corn. But because they have paid $50 for one bushel, they can not buy the other ninety-nine. The farmer has all those left on his hands, and is poor for lack of sale for his splendid crops.

Is it not evident that the farmer can not work alongside of the distiller, the brewer and the saloon-keeper and live? He can not sell corn for 25 cents and have the saloon-keeper sell it for $50 to the very people who would otherwise buy of him.

But would they buy the grain if they did not buy the liquor? Take a wagon load of meal in twelve-pound sacks down among the poor tenements, and offer to give a sack to every needy family, and see how far you would drive before you would have an empty wagon! These people woefully need your grain, but you can not sell it to them because the saloon has exhausted their buying power.

The same would be found true of all other products. Let it be announced that on a certain day a suit of clothes, a pair of shoes, a dress-pattern, a suit of underclothing, etc., would be given freely to every needy applicant. You might use military strictness to guard against imposition, and nevertheless it would be a question whether the whole retail stock of any city would not be exhausted within twenty-four hours. The only thing that keeps them in the stores now is that the people who need them most have not the money to buy them.

The money which is spent for liquor can not be spent for any thing else. The saloon is sucking the blood of every honest industry. It is keeping us poor as a Nation in spite of our splendid resources, just as the individual drinker is kept poor though earning ample wages. The sober people of the Nation suffer with the intemperate, just as the drinking man's family suffer with him. —Rev. J. C. Fernald, in Chicago Advance.

ITEMIZED FACTS.

STATISTICS for 1888 show that out of 19,789 arrests made that year in the city of Baltimore, 18,939 were for drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

IT is against the law to sell whisky on Sunday in Christiana, Norway, and now a movement is on foot to have the sale of beer and wine on that day prohibited also. The official organ of the Norwegian Total Abstinence Society says that the Lutheran bishop, all the ministers of Christiana, and five professors of theology have signed a petition in favor of this action.

THERE is nothing better than plain, nourishing food, fresh air, sunshine and rest to maintain strength in an aged person. No medicine or tonic will do it; there is no scientific foundation for the belief that alcohol, strychnine or any thing of the kind is of benefit. Quinine, beer and whisky are worse than useless as props. They serve to keep up the strength just as the whip keeps up the strength of a tired horse. —J. H. Kellogg, M. D., of Battle Creek Sanitarium.

DR. NANSEN, the Norwegian explorer, crossed Greenland on foot. With five companions he spent several weeks on floating ice. For forty days they tramped over frozen snow, with eighty degrees of frost. Did he use any alcoholic drinks? That he did make use of alcoholic spirits you can see from the following statement, but never as a beverage. He says: "The only spirits we took were as fuel for our stove to melt the snow that we might have water to drink. I think the use of stimulants is a mistake."

The Results of a Spree.

A "spree" after all doesn't pay. A couple of young men near Chicago went out the other day for a "good time," making the round of the slums, until the middle of the afternoon, when one of them taking a dose of morphine, lay down with this letter under his pillow:

"TO WHOEVERE FINDS THIS: I would say, do not blame any one for what I have done. I have ruined myself with whisky and cards. I have a father, mother, and wife, also a sister. It is too late, I know, to ask to be forgiven now. Try and forget me, as I have been too mean to be thought of. I would to God that I had never left home Monday, but it is too late now; so good-bye to all the world. C. B. L."

A DAY OF CELESTIAL JOY.

FAREWELL SABBATH OF THE MILLS REVIVAL MEETINGS.

Hundreds of Penitents Enter the Christian Life—Public Consecration to the Service of the Master—The Hearts of Multitudes Stirred by the Gospel Teachings—Scarlet Sins Washed White as Snow—Greatest Forgiveness, Greatest Love—Glorious Results of Evangelistic Work.

The last Sabbath of the ministry of Evangelist Mills among the people of Plainfield is past, and lives only in precious memory; the last day of the preacher's mission in this city is almost at an end. Many good-byes have already been spoken; the final farewells will be said to-night. When the 9:28 train steams away from the North avenue station it will bear among its passengers the two men, Mr. Mills and Mr. Greenwood, who by the grace of God have wrought so much spiritual benefit to this favored community, and who personally have endeared themselves to so many hearts. Each goes to his home for a fleeting visit, ere beginning work in a new field, Wednesday night, at Syracuse, N. Y.

Who that had eyes to see and ears to hear was not impressed with the glories of this final Sabbath? Nature itself, throughout the day, how beautiful! The skies cloudless; the air delicious with an Indian Summer balm; the city and the country, though clad in the russet garments of Autumn—that season which with the ending of the harvest toil brings a period of tender melancholy—still aglow with a cheer and a brightness and a joy that could not but inspire one's heart. It was a perfect day—a day when all of humankind whose senses drank in these beauties recognized them as blessings from the beneficent hand of the Master, and seemed thrilled with a delicious transport of a happiness which turned their hearts unto righteousness and holiness and lifted their voices in prayers of submission and songs of praise to their Creator.

***

The history of that Sabbath: who does not already know it? That morning service, for the masculine portion of the population, when men and young men and boys gathered together in the Crescent Avenue church till every seat was filled and many had to stand; that great chorus of melody that found utterance in sacred song from the throats of that multitude; the eloquent teachings of the divinely-gifted preacher; the resurrection of so many hearts long dead in sin, and the turning of immortal souls to Christ; the spirit of beatitude that seemed to encompass the people: who that witnessed these things will not recall them with exceeding great joy as long as human faculties shall last?

Plain, practical, powerful utterances were those of the evangelist. Words of Moses, recorded in the thirtieth chapter of the book of Deuteronomy, formed the text of his sermon. This was the passage:

> I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live:
> That thou mayest love the Lord thy God, and that thou mayest obey his voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto him: for He is thy life, and the length of thy days.

So earnest and impassioned were the pleadings of the preacher that his hearers would devote themselves to the service of Christ, that his own countenance shone continually with a rare effulgence and his own eyes constantly were moist with a kindly sympathy; while instances that he related of evidences of the matchless tenderness of the Saviour's love, of the blessedness of Divine forgiveness of human sin, so touched the hearts of the men, young and old, gentle faced and stern, that eyes long unused to tears brimmed over in silent, powerful testimony of the unction of the Holy Ghost.

It was a manly thing—the preacher urged—to accept Jesus Christ as one's Saviour, to enlist on the Lord's side; and with this and other reasons he urged that men thrust aside all false pride and obstinacy of will and decide as their common sense, their judgment, their conscience, must direct them, that it was the wise, the right, the happy thing to do—to choose this day, of the choice before them, life rather than death, blessing rather than cursing. The simple giving of one's heart freely, in full surrender, to God, was the one way to secure eternal salvation. Not to decide to be a Christian was to decide not to be a Christian—and oh what a momentous decision this was!

These men and young men and boys could be such glorious Christians! If they would only give themselves to God how beautiful their lives might be! God had so much work for them to do! There were so many who could be brought into the Kingdom by the example and faithful, true living of all this throng! Other longing hearts would be so strengthened at witnessing each right decision of the wavering, the faltering ones, and by the successive onward footsteps of the new Christian soldiers! It was a grand opportunity to begin a new, a glorious career, to put off the old body of deceit and sin, and to become a man: who would avail himself of it?

Besides the testimony of Mr. Mills as to the wondrous happiness of the Christian life, there was potent argument in the brief devout expressions from the followers of Jesus who were given opportunity to speak at the after-meeting, why all should enter on the service of the Lord.

This after-meeting was one of the most delicious experiences that had ever come into the lives of those present. The seats on the floor of the church were all filled with those earnest in their desire to lead godly lives. Every face beamed with a kindly light; a sweetness and tenderness that could come to only a holy place filled the air. God's gracious sunlight streaming through the partly open windows seemed illumined with the brighter radiance of His own very near presence.

What wonder that every voice proclaiming God's goodness or announcing a determination to stand up henceforth before the world as a Christian had in it a ring of triumph that to an ungodly ear must have seemed a marvel! Rich were the hallelujahs sung by every tongue. Many for the first time openly confessed Christ as their Saviour, before the meeting was over.

Of those professing Christians who gave testimony concerning the wondrous pardon and grace to be found in Jesus many had but recently begun to serve the Lord. How long they had lived consecrated lives, and what the Christian faith had brought to them, was the story of each. All had the same happy experience—from the bright faced lad, not yet twelve years of age, who told of "one week of comfort in Jesus", to him of most benignant countenance, whose snow-white hair and beard were mute evidence that he was nearing that limit of human years when one must tread the unknown way, who had known "fifty-five years of peace in Christ". One man who had been converted only last Friday night now brought his son into the fold. Radiant and resplendent with joy was the spiritual history of all.

It was a touching sight to see one's friends and acquaintances thus arise and testify from overflowing hearts of the blessings of their new-found or time-tried salvation, and the scene was impressed indelibly on many hearts.

"Jesus of Nazareth passeth by" was the theme selected by Mr. Mills for the afternoon meeting for young people; and as at the young people's meeting of the Sabbath before he urged the need of beginning the Christian life in the Springtide of youth.

What beautiful Christians these young people would make!—he said—and in words of precious truth besought them to give themselves to Christ, and thus to devote the best part of their lives to God's service—give Him the years which could be abundantly fruitful in the work of bringing penitence, pardon and peace to sinners' hearts.

A large number, in response to the preacher's solicitation, publicly professed conversion, and many a praying heart, of mother, or Sabbath school teacher, or friend, was thereby made glad.

Both the afternoon and evening meetings were attended by more people than could get into the body of the church. Even with seats and aisles and nooks and corners closely crowded, some were obliged to stand in the vestibules, and some late comers turned regretfully away.

***

The evening service was especially evangelistic. The sermon was directed particularly to the unrepentant. "Yet there is room!" was the foundation of the discourse, and in the utmost sincerity of personal concern Mr. Mills earnestly besought his hearers to turn to Christ while Jesus was still calling, and before the gates were barred against them. There was still room in the church, in the Christian throng, in heaven, for the sinner: but how soon that room would vanish who could tell? Yet there was room. The time to enter was now. To-day the Saviour was calling. To-day He was especially near. Yet there was room. The time would come—the time would not be long in coming—when the sinner rejecting Christ's tender invitation would seek to return and would find himself too late, and the awful cry "No room! No room!" would echo through his ears through a woful, long eternity.

There was such a thing as rejecting Christ once for all. Here was a story in point:

A certain man had a wicked son. Many things had the father forgiven his wayward boy, but the young man continued in his evil way. One morning father and son met on the street face to face, and the father cried out "Oh, my boy! my boy!" and stretched out his arms and supplicated his son to begin a virtuous life. But the son laughed scornfully at his pleadings, and spat in his face, and raised his arm, and struck him, and felled him to the earth. The hard stones of the pavement cut cruel gashes in the old man's face, and the earth and the blood caused grim stains on his features. The son went his way, and the father arose and went home.

The look on the father's face was terrible, and affrighted the household. He went into the garden, and threw himself prostrate on the ground, and literally thrust his face into the earth, and uttered awful inarticulate cries. He was burying his son.

After the father had again arisen and washed away the earth and blood stains the son came home and sought to speak to the father. But the father cast him out, and said "I have no son!" And the young man realized that he had committed the unpardonable sin against his father, and went away forever.

For those thirsters after righteousness who were willing to listen to the pleadings of the Heavenly Father there was still hope. Yet there was room. To refuse the present invitation might be to refuse one's last chance of hope in eternal life.

As the people from farther up the river came floating down the turbid, swollen, rushing stream during a great flood in one of our cities other people manned the bridges that were still firm and threw ropes to those in peril, and rescued them from death. Presently there appeared a man clinging to the roof of a house. The people threw him a rope, but he was fearful, and would not let go his hold on the floating timbers. As he shot under the bridge a man ran across above him and shouted as he re-appeared on the other side, "There's another bridge farther down! There's another bridge farther down!"

Reaching the second bridge, the man had another rope thrown to him, but he only grasped at it half-heartedly, with one hand, and was swept on underneath the bridge. As he again came into view, beyond the bridge, his ears heard the portentous cry from the people who had tried to save him; "There's only one more bridge! There's only one more bridge!"

When the third rope was thrown to him he realized that this was his only hope, and with a mighty spring he left the timbers which had buoyed him up, and with the powerful grip of both hands seized the rope, and was drawn up and saved from the depths.

In such a light must this invitation to accept Jesus be viewed. This might be the last bridge of safety, the last opportunity to obtain salvation.

Not many who heard this plea rejected the invitation to enter the army of God, and at the after-meeting the air rang constantly with the earnest cry "I accept Jesus Christ as my Saviour!" And scores of people, of every age, and from every walk of life, thus signified their repentance of past sins and entered on the Christian life.

This was the last meeting at which Mr. Mills would ask his hearers to stand up and confess their penitence. His Monday meetings, in the afternoon to women, in the evening to men, would be for farewell counsel to those who had already entered on the Christian life. As a word of parting, therefore, he earnestly counseled the converts to count it all settled, for all time, that they would be honest, sincere followers of the Lord, and to strive diligently to be faithful to the vow of consecration they had made.

And in the fullness of his heart he told the people how he would treasure in his memory the hallowed scenes of the past two weeks in this city. The meetings in the First Baptist church, where hundreds turned away from sin and found Jesus; the blessed inquiry meetings in the basement of that church; the throngs who had attended the various meetings of the revivals; the spirit of earnestness shown by the people in the work; the zealousness with which they took hold of the Master's service; the splendid services in the Crescent Avenue church, and in the chapel; the meetings and the multitudes of this very day; this present consecrated after-meeting, when not only the lower floor but the galleries were filled with those so deeply interested in seeking salvation that they could not go away at the close of the first meeting; the very faces of the people, the sight of the throng: all of these things would he graciously remember in other and distant fields.

And so with twinges of regret at thought of parting, but with the echoes of a sacred benediction in their ears, the people dispersed for their homes, and Mr. Mills and Mr. Greenwood retired, after earnest good-bye hand-shakes with many who would not be able to see them again, to their last night's rest in the Crescent city.

Spiritual interest abounded also at the other union services of Sunday, aside from those conducted by Mr. Mills. At the Methodist Episcopal church, in the morning, the Rev. Asa Reed Dilts preached a glowing sermon to a large congregation of men and women. At the First Baptist church the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis gave an interesting talk to a large body of women concerning the work of the Florence Mission, and five members of the Rescue Band told in graphic language of the Mission's work—a labor of love—of rescuing immortal souls from among the lowest dens of vice in New York city—lifting up the fallen from depths from which they themselves had thus been saved. In the evening this same Band conducted evangelistic services in Warren Mission chapel, and aided in the conversion of many, while during the day large contributions for the benefit of their Mission were made in the churches, and extensive donations of clothing for rescued ones were given.

Sunday evening large congregations of church members heard the Rev. Cornelius Schenck preach at the Park Avenue Baptist church, and the Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham at the First Baptist. Prayers were offered for the further results of the revival, and for the unconverted at the meeting led by Mr. Mills.

An effective contrast was drawn by Mr. Mills at the morning service, between the faith of the infidel and that of the Christian, in the story of two church-yard scenes.

The first scene was at the grave of a brother of Robert Ingersoll, where Ingersoll himself, as he had promised his brother, spoke. And what words of comfort, of peace, of joy, did this great orator and unbeliever and blasphemer say? Not one. Only a flight of rhetoric about the singing birds, and the waving grass, and the rustling leaves, and the sighing trees, and the mystery of life grimly cradled between the ice-clad peaks of two eternities, and earth giving back, in response to our questionings, nothing but the mournful echo of our wailing cry, did he utter.

The second scene was at the grave of a Christian brother of Dwight L. Moody, when Mr. Moody, after the services were over, and the heavy clods with their unspeakable sound were falling on the coffin lid of the one he loved, cried out:

"I must speak, or the very stones will cry aloud! Glory! glory! glory! to the Lord God in the Highest, for the salvation of man through Jesus Christ! Glory! glory! glory! Oh, death, where is thy sting! Oh, grave, where is thy victory!"

And for forty-five minutes—said Mr. Mills—Mr. Moody continued to sing the praises of the Redeemer, in wondrous testimony of a religion that was something more, something sweeter, something more everlasting, than vague notions about singing birds, and sighing trees, and ice-clad peaks, and echoes of our wailing cries—something that could take the sting from death and swallow death itself in the glorious day of triumph before the great white throne.

Great Little Men.

Some of the greatest men that ever lived were of small stature and insignificant appearance. The reader will readily recall many instances. Very small are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, but they are more effective than the huge, old-fashioned pills which are so difficult to swallow and so harsh in their action. The "Pellets" are gentle. For liver, stomach and bowel derangements they have no equal.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St. Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

Of furnishing your kitchen—
PIERSON is the man.

Their Tinware and their Hardware,
Housefurnishing Goods and Lamps,
Makes one feel as if they would like to have
A pocket full of stamps.

So call and see, and you'll agree
That what we now relate
Is not at all a fable,
But wise to contemplate.

And when into your kitchen
You by chance do look around
And see the many useful things
That at PIERSON'S you have found,

You will then unto your friends relate
That story, old and true—
That to step into their store
Is to purchase more and more,
Until you find you got the earth and
cannot get no more.

HIS SECOND WIFE.

How She Completely Conquered Her Husband.

"WELL, I never!" said Miss Peggerell. "What is this world coming to?"

"Much the same as it always was, I suppose," retorted Agatha Simplex.

She was the village tailoress; a resolute, bright-eyed woman of seven or eight and twenty.

"I wouldn't have believed it, unless you had told me with your own lips," said Miss Peggerell, dolefully.

"Why not?" said Agatha.

"It's just selling yourself—that's all," sniffed Miss Peggerell.

"No, it's not," said Agatha Simplex, brusquely. "He's a very nice man."

"He's twenty years older than you are."

"Well," said Miss Simplex, "and what difference does that make? I'm solitary and alone in the world—and Mr. Mixsell is willing to give me a home, and I respect him very highly—and I've no doubt we shall be very happy together."

"Humph!" commented Miss Peggerell. Agatha turned sharply around.

"What does that mean?" said she.

"Nothing," said Miss Peggerell. "Only he bullied his first wife into her grave."

"He'll not bully me into mine," shrewdly remarked Miss Simplex.

"I'm not so sure of that."

"I am."

"Well, at all events," added Miss Peggerell, "you can't say you've not been fairly warned."

"No, I won't," said Agatha Simplex, and she married Mr. Moses Mixsell before the moon was a fortnight older.

Mr. Mixsell was a very worthy member of society, bald-headed, double-chinned and rather spoiled, in consequence of always having had his own way. The late Mrs. Mixsell had been one of those meek, retiring little persons who never seem quite certain whether their souls belong to themselves or to somebody else, and there were those who, like Miss Peggerell, did not hesitate boldly to assert that her brief space of life had been shortened by the domineering will and stern discipline of Moses, her lord and master.

But all these reports Mrs. Mixsell the second neither heeded nor believed.

"My dear," said she to her husband, after they had been married about three weeks, "the Hutchison family is going to give a concert here, on Wednesday evening."

"Are they?" said Moses; "well, what of that?"

"I should like to go," said Mrs. Mixsell.

"I shouldn't," said Mr. Mixsell.

"I mean to go," said Mrs. Mixsell.

"And I mean you sha'n't," said Mr. Mixsell.

Agatha's cheeks crimsoned; her eyes sparkled with ominous luster.

"Why not, Moses?" said she.

"I don't approve of concerts," said Mr. Mixsell. "It's my opinion that a married woman is better off at home darning her husband's stockings, than gadding off to public places."

"Don't I keep your stockings well darned?"

"I don't say but that you do," admitted the bridegroom. "But I don't mean to encourage this fancy of yours for running to every wild-beast show and public exhibition in town! And, not to mince matters, I intend to put it down!" with great emphasis on the last three words.

"I shall go!" said Agatha.

"You shall not!" said Moses.

"How will you prevent it?" said Mrs. Mixsell. "Unless, indeed, you lock me into my room!" with a little laugh.

"I shall do that, if it proves necessary," said Mr. Mixsell. "And keep you there on bread and water, my fine madam."

"You dare not!" said Agatha.

"You shall see!" said Mr. Mixsell.

And so the married couple came to high words within the month.

Agatha was putting on her bonnet and shawl in her own room on the Wednesday evening, when Mr. Mixsell came to the door, and eyed her with extreme severity.

"YOU ARE DETERMINED TO MAKE A FOOL OF YOURSELF, EH?"

"You are determined to make a fool of yourself, eh?" said he.

"I am determined to go to the concert!" retorted she that was Agatha Simplex.

"Then it's my duty to enforce my marital authority," said Mr. Mixsell. And he locked the door and put the key in his pocket.

"Here you shall remain, madam," said he, "until you break that stubborn will of yours. At six o'clock to-morrow morning I shall put in a loaf of bread and a pitcher of water."

Mrs. Mixsell made no reply, and her husband began to fear that the task of reducing her to subjection was not going to be as easy as he had anticipated.

He stalked off, and spent the evening comfortably by the fire.

The next morning, Ebenezer Hillgrove, who was going to lay half a dozen yards or so of stone wall for the Mixsells, came, bright and early, to breakfast. Mr. Mixsell himself was frying ham and eggs over the kitchen fire.

"Where's your wife?" demanded Ebenezer.

"She hasn't left her room yet," said Mr. Mixsell, adhering to the letter of the truth, if not to its spirit.

"She was up pretty late at the concert last night, eh?" said Ebenezer.

"At the—concert!" said Mr. Mixsell, forgetting in his surprise to turn the last slice of ham which lay frizzling in the pan.

"I saw her there," said Ebenezer, "in a black silk gownd and a hat with blue feathers onto it! Laughed awful at the comic parts, and cried at the 'Farewell Hymn.'"

Mr. Mixsell, with a last gleam of presence of mind, rescued the ham from its fiery ordeal, and put it on the plate.

"Sit down and eat, Ebenezer," said he, "while I go and see after Mrs. Mixsell."

And off he trudged, with his square loaf of bread and pitcher of water.

Arriving at the door, he unlocked it and peeped in.

There, leaning against the window-sill, with its back to him, was the well-known figure in the black dress and scarlet shawl, with a white worsted scarf half concealing its face.

"Mrs. Mixsell," said he.

No answer was returned.

"Sulking, eh?" said Mr. Mixsell.

Still no reply was vouchsafed.

"Well, you can have it out at your leisure," grimly commented her lord and master. "Here's your breakfast."

And he went his way, firmly convinced that Ebenezer Hillgrove had been mistaken in the fact of Mrs. Mixsell's presence at the concert.

But no sooner was the morning meal concluded than in walked Miss Peggerell.

"Mornin', Mr. Mixsell. How did Agatha enjoy the concert last night?"

"She didn't enjoy it at all," said Mr. Mixsell. "She wasn't there."

"Not there!" echoed Miss Peggerell. "But she was, and she sat next to me, and I walked home as far as Chicken Lane under her umbrella. You'll tell me next I wasn't there myself!"

Mr. Mixsell excused himself and went hurriedly upstairs.

"I'll be at the bottom of this mystery," said he, "or I'll know the reason why!"

He unlocked the bedroom door and flung it open.

"Agatha!" said he, sternly; "Agatha!"

And then he saw that the figure by the window with its immovable white face and unalterable smirk was only that of the dummy which had decorated Miss Agatha Simplex's windows when she took in tailoring, dress-making and the general millinery business. And the window was wide open; and the bed had not been slept in.

"SHE HAS—LEFT ME!"

"Goodness me!" tragically cried out Mr. Mixsell. "She has—left me!"

Just then he heard the sound of puffing and loud breathing behind him, and, turning, beheld the portly form of Miss Peggerell herself.

"What a dreadfully quick-motioned man you be," panted Miss Peggerell. "Why couldn't you have stood still long enough to let me tell you her message?"

"What message?" breathlessly demanded Mr. Mixsell.

"That she was gone back to the shop, and if you wanted to see her you'd find her there!"

Mr. Mixsell considered. Should he go or should he not? True, his pride was concerned; but then, again, how nicely Agatha ironed his shirts and cooked his supper! how pleasant was her welcoming smile when he came home a little late of a frosty October night!

"Yes!" said Mr. Mixsell, "I'll go."

And he did go. The late Miss Simplex sat behind the big "To Let," in the bay-window, composed and calm. She greeted Mr. Mixsell with an icy politeness that went to his heart.

"Agatha!" said the ex-widower; "you—you're not going to leave me?"

"I'll stay with no man who treats me like a child," said she.

"But, I won't treat you so."

"I'll live in no house whose proprietor locks me up," went on Mrs. Mixsell.

"I'll never do it any more, my dear!"

"And forbids me to go to concerts!"

"I'll take you myself next time, Agatha."

And upon this understanding, Mrs. Mixsell returned to the conjugal home, and Mr. Mixsell chopped up the abominable dummy for firewood.

Agatha Simplex had conquered, and Mr. Mixsell never was the same man again.—Asa Bell, in N. Y. Ledger.

A Clerical Bore Rebuked.

Archdeacon Stretch, of Victoria, it is said, was once bothered by a clerical bore named Cass. Mr. Cass had one fad—that the great Napoleon was of Scriptural descent. Pressed for his reasons, he explained "that Napoleon," with the initial letter cut off, gave "Apoleon" or "Apollyon," a name prominent in the Revelation. "Ah," replied the Archdeacon, "your own name 'Cass,' with the initial letter cut off gives 'Ass,' but there's no revelation in that."—N. W Christian Advocate.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

DECORATED FURNITURE.

Inexpensive Draperies—Linen—Hammock and Sofa Pillows—Decorating Old Furniture—Bags for Useful and Ornamental Purposes—Paper Flowers—Royal Battenberg Lace—Linen Crocheted Lace—Wax Flowers—Clay Modeling—Drawn Work—Decorative Painting.

One of the prettiest notions for a screen that shall combine the uses of a photograph-holder with its original purpose is the screen made of a small clothes-horse. Screens with two or three panels, as may be preferred, may be purchased for from fifty to seventy-five cents, and any roughness should be rubbed off with sand-paper before the paint is applied. Two coats of white enamel paint are generally necessary to give a smooth surface. Fine hair lines of gold put at regular intervals around the upright pieces are very pretty, and relieve the plainness of the white paint. The space between the upper bars is to be filled by a decorated panel, and unless the screen is desired to be a photograph-holder as well, this panel may be a plain piece of material, decorated according to the designer's fancy. White mole-skin velvet, painted with pink and white chrysanthemums or yellow daisies, is very pretty; and I have seen one painted with graceful sprays of maiden's hair fern, which was exceedingly pleasing. A wide range of material is open, however, and any thing that suits the fancy is available for this panel. The spaces to be filled are generally about twenty inches in length by nine or ten inches in width. Panels of huckaback, darned with some silk that contrasts well with the color of which the curtains are made, are pretty and easily done, besides being very inexpensive. Canvas, either gray or brown in tone, can be decorated with painting or embroidery, and even as dainty a material as bolting-cloth can be used to advantage. Curtains of India or China silk are shirred at the top and fastened on the upper bar of the clothes-horse, and allowed to fall in full folds to the floor, or are shirred at each bar.

A very pretty screen may be made of orange silk with panels of sheer bolting-cloth, upon which nasturtiums have been painted.

Such beautiful designs can be found in China silk that any one who has not the time or lacks the ability to decorate her panels can make a screen no whit less dainty than her more fortunate friends, by buying some prettily figured silk that will contrast well with the curtains of the screen, and using it for the panels without any other decoration. If it is desired to use this screen for a photograph holder, three places should be cut in each panel, of sufficient size to insert a cabinet photograph. Of course in this case the back of the panel must be lined. The illustration shows one in which the panels have been made of figured olive silk, and the curtains of old rose. Graceful bows should be added when the screen is completed, and with very little cost and a comparatively small amount of work a very pretty ornament for the parlor is the result.

A small wooden pail with a cover, such as is used to pack fruit butter in, can be transformed into a very pleasing work receptacle. It should first be thoroughly washed and aired, to remove all odor of its former contents, and then lined on the inside with quilted silk. This may be either tacked in place, or the entire lining may be carefully fitted and then sewed together, after which a very few tiny tacks at the top will be all that is necessary to keep it in place. Pockets will be found a great convenience, and these may be fastened on the lining at the maker's taste. The lining is the troublesome part of this task, and it is easier and pleasanter to do it first, for then the rest of the work is plain sailing.

The pail should then have two coats of enamel paint. This may either be white, or some delicate shade of pearl or blue-gray. If the bands around the pail are picked out with gold, the decorations may stop there, but it adds very much to have some further ornament. A winter scene, with the branch of a snow-covered tree, upon which a couple of robins are perching, is a pretty design; or a blue sky, across which a flight of swallows stand out boldly, or a cluster of apple blossoms, are all decorations which will be pleasing. Scrap pictures have been pasted upon a pail which has first received a coat of paint, and the effect is very good, though of course not comparable to hand painting.

Given a boy blessed with an aptitude for carpentering, one can evolve a little table out of materials which may be collected either in the garret or cellar. Three old broomstick handles should be sawn off the right length for table legs, and crossed in such a way that they will stand firmly. It will be a task requiring some patience and perserverance to make them firm and secure, and fasten them together so strongly that there will be no danger of their giving way beneath any weight. A piece of strong wire will be found very useful in this task. When this is done, the table is ready for its top. A round barrel-cover will be just the thing, if one has it; if not, either a round or a square top can be constructed. This should be fastened firmly in place on the top of the legs, which will have to be sawn off at such an angle that their tops will be level.

The table is now ready for the household artist. Two coats of carriage paint will make it a very fair imitation of ebony, and gold paint judiciously used will add to it. A large bow of ribbon should be tied where the legs are crossed, to hide the wire and nails, and the top of the table may be covered in a variety of ways. A small stand-cover may be thrown over it, or a piece of felt just the size of the top may be cut and tacked neatly on, painting or embroidering it if desired, and finishing the edges with a fringe made of the same, or a contrasting shade of the felt, slashed to the depth of two inches.

An old wire broiler that has been consigned to the rubbish-heap can be rescued and converted into a paper rack by gilding it and weaving wide ribbons, of two alternating shades, through the bars. The ribbon can either be run through the two sides, leaving sufficient fullness at the ends to allow the front of the rack to fall forward and leave room for the papers, or silk elastic can be put at the ends, and all the ribbon decoration reserved for the front. A bow of the two shades should be fastened on the front of the rack, and two or three gilded cones are a pretty improvement.

Little rush-bottomed chairs, the real old-fashioned ones which are so hard to find nowadays, can be made dainty enough to grace any drawing-room with a little paint. A very pretty one was painted with black carriage paint, and a trailing cluster of nasturtiums painted upon the back. A cushion of rich orange-brown plush was fastened in the seat, and a bow of nasturtium shades of ribbon was tied on one corner of the back. Another was painted a pearly gray and had old rose cushions at the back and in the seat; and one no less pretty was painted ivory white and was decorated with morning glories, and bows of rose and blue ribbon. There is such a variety of ways in which these chairs may be decorated, that it seems almost superfluous to suggest any more.

An old stone butter-jar can be made into a most artistic scrap-jar by one handy with a brush. A background of shaded grays, browns or olives can be put on the jar first, mixed with enamel so that it will have the glossy look of fired pottery. When this is thoroughly dry, paint whatever the fancy prompts. Pretty sprays of Virginia creeper, which are about the easiest thing an amateur artist can attempt, or purple and yellow flags, with their tall, slender leaves, are very effective. The inside of the jar should be painted some color that will harmonize with the decoration.

A child's red bench that has seen its best days can be made fanciful and dainty enough to be a part of a fairy queen's furniture. A coat of white paint must be put on first, and then gold paint can be added lavishly. The rounds at the back can be gilded half the way up and gold bands can be put around the legs. A dainty cushion of white embroidered with yellow makes a beautiful finish for this little seat, fastened in place with yellow and white ribbons. If it is designed to make it more serviceable and less dainty, a more durable color than ivory white can be selected for the coat of paint and the cushion can be made of a darker material, with a less delicate color for the embroidery than yellow.

A very pretty and serviceable paper-rack can be made from a piece of a matting. A strip one-third longer than its width should be taken, and the lower part turned up, as in the illustration. The matting shown in the illustration was brought from Madeira, and could not be easily found here, but there is a quality very much resembling it which can be found at an art store, or the ordinary matting could be used. Manilla rope should be used for the decoration, and the ends frayed out for tassels. A slender strip of wood should be fastened to the edge of the matting which is turned up, to hold it in place. No prettier decoration could be devised than the simple one of the twisted rope, and though the plain surface of the matting could be decorated in addition with painting, yet it is rather a restful relief to the eye to meet with only the soft shades of the matting and rope. This is one of the rare articles that are really as useful as ornamental, and will be an always-ready receptacle for the newspapers which are so apt to accumulate around the house and litter up the tables.—Mrs. M. E. Kenney, in Good Housekeeping.

WHY do the heathen rage? Well, the missionaries aren't exactly soothing in their weather predictions, for one thing, and then the clothes that are sent out in the mission-boxes are mostly of a cut that would exasperate the least dudish savage that ever existed. No man can be truly religious in a pair of trousers made by a lady amateur, however sincere may be her motives.

"WHY, ARE YOU SICK?"

"I know precisely how you feel; it is that nervous, irritable feeling, your back troubles you, and when you try to read a little, your head aches. Isn't that so? I knew it. Oh, bother the doctor! Get a bottle of Vegetable Compound, and take it faithfully, as I have done. I've been through this thing myself, but am never troubled now. Do as I tell you, dear."

Prudent women who best understand their ailments, find in the Compound a remedy for all those distressing ills that require prompt and effective treatment as a guaranty to good health.

FEDERAL AID ASKED

A Forward Movement of the Indians Has Begun.

TOWN OF MANDAN IN DANGER.

A Rumor that a Band of Redskins Have Left Their Tepees.

Gov. Miller Telegraphed to for Arms and Amunition—The Agent at Standing Rock Has Lost All Control of the Indians—Sitting Bull Says He Will Wipe the Whites Out Entirely.

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 18.—A friendly Indian just in from the Sioux reservation says that the forward movement has practically begun, it being the intention of the reds to first attack Fort Lincoln, which has a garrison of but 50 men, and after slaughtering the troops there to descend upon the town of Mandan, which is across the river from here.

Major McLoughlin, the agent at Standing Rock, admits that for the first time he has lost control of the Indians and can do nothing whatever with them.

Sitting Bull, a day or two ago, very coolly told the agent that he and his braves had no use for him and the whites and would shortly wipe them out entirely.

The Indians have bought up all the ammunition in this section of the country, the dealers at Mandan having exhausted their entire stock.

The dealers said yesterday they did not know it was against the law to sell ammunition to the Indians, but by that time all the ammunition had been sold.

Redskins Leaving Their Tepees.

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 18.—A mass meeting of the citizens of Mandan was held to discuss the Indian situation. The citizens have organized for protection. Gov. Miller was telegraphed to for arms and ammunition and he has given instructions to his Adjutant General to use his discretion. The State has about 500 stand of arms and 5,000 rounds of fixed ammunition. All sorts of rumors are afloat. Telegrams to Standing Rock are unanswered, and the latest rumor is that a band of armed Indians left their tepees on the agency at 10 a. m.

Indians Are Losing Faith.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—A telegram from General Miles was received by Major-General Schofield, saying that there seems to be no danger of trouble with the Sioux Indians at the Rosebud and other agencies. The Indians remain restless, however, are exciting themselves by frequent war dances and are still looking for the coming of the Messiah, who is to exterminate the white man. The Indian prophets are doing everything to stimulate the excitement. The failure of the Messiah, however, to appear on specified dates has had a somewhat depressing effect upon their efforts.

ALLIANCE DEMANDS.

Secretary Windom's Report Will Contain No Reference to the Farmer's Schemes.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The Secretary of the Treasury has almost finished his annual report, and it will contain no reference to the financial schemes now being agitated by the Farmers' Alliance. Notwithstanding this fact, the Treasury officials do not hesitate to express anxiety at the outlook.

As is well known, the Alliance demands the free coinage of silver, the passage of a sub-treasury bill and the abolition of the national banking system. Until the recent election these demands did not excite a moment's serious attention. Since the 4th of November, however, matters have assumed a different aspect, and although there is no present crisis, the possibilities of the future are causing some apprehension.

If the Alliance has 43 members of the next House, as is claimed, it has a wedge of no small size with which to open the way for the passage of its schemes.

Trouble With a Maniac.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—A maniac created a sensation in the boarding house of Mrs. Marstello, No. 727 11th street, during the morning. He applied for a room. While one was being shown to him he became violent, and when Police Officer Donovan was called in the maniac drove him out of the house with a pocket knife. Other officers were called, the club was used on the man to reduce him to subjection, and he was carried to the station house in a blanket. He is unknown.

Banished at Last.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The Secretary of State is informed that the notorious Moussa Bey, whose reported outrages on American missionaries in that part of Turkey where he lives have so long engaged the attention of the State Department, has at length been summarily banished to the interior of Arabia. The sentence has been carried out.

Silver Dollars Issued Last Week.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The issue of standard silver dollars from the mints during the week ended November 15, was $757,979. The issue during the corresponding week of last year was $613,965. The shipments of fractional silver coin since the first instant amount to $597,149.

Negligence Does Not Debar.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The Supreme Court of the United States, through Justice Blatchford, decided that a person injured partly through his own negligence is not debarred from recovering damages.

The President Will Not See Callers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The President was engaged all day in preparing his message to Congress and denied himself to all callers. He will be engaged on his message the balance of this week.

TO LEAVE THE KNIGHTS.

The Secession of 3,000 Green Glass Blowers Very Probable.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 18.—A movement has been started by Local Assembly No. 6,111, Knights of Labor, composed of green glass workers, which threatens to end in a big secession from the Knights of Labor ranks.

The movement originated in the alleged improper conduct of Louis Arrington, master workman of the Green Glass Workers' National Assembly, owing to that gentleman's plan to build a co-operative green glass factory, which caused general dissatisfaction to the Pittsburg assembly.

A committee composed of leading members of Local Assembly No. 6,111 has been at work for several weeks, and, according to reports, is meeting with solid encouragement. The plan of the committee is to interest five of the strongest green glass workers' assemblies in the plan of seceding. Dissatisfaction against Mr. Powderly has also been breeding in the Pittsburg Assemblies for three years. The secession of the green glass workers would take from the Knights of Labor at least 3,000 members. A report on the subject is expected next Friday night.

LA BLANCHE WHIPPED.

He Had to be Carried to His Corner After Fighting Thirteen Rounds.

BUTTE, Mont., Nov. 18.—George La Blanche was fairly whipped by George Kessler, a local pug, in a 18-round contest here. La Blanche went into the fight feeling confident that he could best his man in two rounds, but when two of his finest rushes had been cleverly stopped by Kessler he changed his mode of attack.

From that time he used every artifice, throwing Kessler twice and falling on him with all his weight, but it was no go. The plucky little Englishman kept hammering away at his man, and after the 10th round it was apparent that Kessler had the fight, and the Marine recognized it as well as any one.

In the 13th round, finding that he could stand no longer, he deliberately kicked Kessler in the groin while standing in the centre of the ring. This ended the fight, the referee giving it to Kessler on a foul. La Blanche was fairly whipped if ever a man was. He had to be carried to his corner and then to his dressing room, while Kessler jumped the ropes and ran in as light as a boy. Fully 2,000 people witnessed the fight. Kessler owns the town to-day.

BOSTON WILL BE FIRST.

An Institute to be Erected for the Cure of Consumption.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—It is announced that the project for the establishment in Boston of an institute where consumptive patients may be treated by Koch's tuberculosis cure is to be put into operation at once.

A well-known local physician, an enthusiast on the subject of tuberculosis, who has just returned from Berlin where he had an opportunity to investigate the proposed new cure for consumption, is about to take active steps to provide a hospital for the reception of those afflicted with the disease.

The lymph for the inoculations is on its way to this city and arrangements have been completed to make cultures of it, so that a full supply will be constantly on hand for the members of the medical profession who will use it.

Potter and Lovell Under Heavy Bail.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—Walter Potter and Wallace D. Lovell, recently in the banking business here, appeared in the Municipal Court and waived an examination in the lower tribunal on the charges against them of embezzlement of customers' securities left in their hands as collateral. The Court sent the case to the grand jury. Bail for each of the accused was fixed at $75,000 and was furnished.

Inspecting Gettysburg's Battlefield.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Nov. 18.—Assistant Secretary of War Gen. Louis A. Grant, accompanied by Gen. R. N. Batchelder, quartermaster-general U. S. A.; Gen. J. H. Baxter, surgeon-general U. S. A., and Lieutenant-Colonel Dandy of the quartermaster-general's department inspected this battlefield under the guidance of Col. J. V. Bachellor, Government historian of the field.

Robert Ray Hamilton's Will.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The will of the late Robert Ray Hamilton has been offered for probate. The document makes no mention of Mr. Hamilton's wife, who is now in a New Jersey prison, but provides $1,200 a year for life for Beatrice Ray, the child which he calls his adopted daughter. The bulk of the estate is left to the children of Schuyler Hamilton.

Herr Most Cannot Speak.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 18.—Herr Most having arranged for another meeting here, the Mayor has decided not to permit a meeting for that purpose, and threatens to revoke the license of the hall if his orders are not obeyed.

The Minister Refused a New Trial.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 18.—The court refused a new trial in the breach of promise suit brought by Annie Husabel against Rev. Peter Roberts. The jury awarded the woman $3,000 damages.

WALL STREET QUIET

All Danger of a Commercial Crisis Averted.

JAY GOULD'S LATEST PURCHASE.

Rumors that He Has Obtained Control of Several Important Properties.

Creditors of Mills, Robeson & Smith Meet To-day—$70,000,000 Pledged for Baring Bros.—The North River Bank Will Not Resume—No Financial Trouble in Berlin—The Richmond Terminal Deal.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Wall street has taken fresh courage but the change of sentiment is tempered with caution and so lacks enthusiasm. Foreign advices are more reassuring and afford a sustaining influence to local values. It is conceded that all danger of a commercial crisis has been averted, so that the banking institutions of this city are more favorably disposed to their customers who have suffered from the recent financial distress.

A secret conference was held at the Clearing House the outcome of which was not made public on the ground that the country banks might become alarmed at the enormous necessities of the financial community at present. It is understood, however, that each member of the association pledged itself to withdraw a certain amount of loan certificates, irrespective of immediate requirements, and thus fortify itself against any possible emergency.

Three stock houses announced their inability to meet their engagements, but these suspensions had no perceptible effect on the values. While the market shows a disposition to rally, no material advances are recorded. Disagreeable rumors are in circulation affecting the standing of a prominent brokerage house, which it was believed might be forced to make an assignment.

Jay Gould is credited with having obtained control of Union Pacific, Atchison and the Richmond and Danville group of properties. The excuse for this assumption appeared, however, to be almost entirely connected with the large purchases of the securities of those roads that were made by that gentleman's brokers.

Jay Gould and Richmond Terminal.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Regarding the rumor that Jay Gould had secured control of the Richmond Terminal Road, Calvin S. Brice said: "It would be a good thing for Mr. Gould if he got control of the Richmond Terminal system, and I don't know but that it would be agreeable to some of those now interested in that system." Mr. Brice refused to talk further about the story. General Thomas would not say anything about the rumor.

Mills, Robeson & Smith's Liabilities.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The creditors of the firm of Mills, Robeson & Smith, wrecked by the forgeries of the junior partner, are holding a meeting to-day. A statement of the firm's liabilities and assets will be presented. These items are now approximately stated as—liabilities, $600,000; assets, $385,000.

Baring Bros. Resume Business.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The Boston house of Kidder, Peabody & Co. received a cablegram early in the day from Baring Bros. & Co., stating that all matters are arranged satisfactorily and permanently, and authorizing Kidder, Peabody & Co. to resume business as usual.

$70,000,000 for Baring Bros. & Co.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The Central News learns that the fund subscribed as a guaranty of Baring Bros. & Company's obligations amounts to £14,000,000. Telegrams are continually arriving from English and foreign bankers offering assistance if needed.

No Financial Trouble in Berlin.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—A large German house here received the following dispatch from a Berlin firm in answer to an inquiry whether there was any trouble there: "There are not the slightest difficulties, not even rumors."

The North River Bank Will Not Resume.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—State Superintendent of Banking Preston states that it has been definitely decided that the North River Bank will not resume business, the directors not being able to raise the funds required.

RAILROAD MEN IN COUNCIL.

The Demand of the Erie Employes Being Considered by Their Representatives.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 18.—A. P. Pensfield of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Joseph Hubbard of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, Casper Kellar of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, and F. G. Wells of the Trainmen, have arrived here to meet the head officials of the Erie road in regard to settling the differences that exist between the company and men with reference to the demands of the latter which were recently denied by President King.

There are 43 delegates present altogether, representing the employes. The delegates went into secret session, H. B. Youngson of Meadville, Pa., presiding.

Mr. Youngson was asked shortly before the conference what would likely be the outcome of the trouble. He replied that the delegates would consult on the subject of striking or backing down entirely. The men, he said, believe that they have not been treated rightly, and they are mad.

Several delegates also said that there was likely to be trouble between the men and the officials unless the existing demands are granted. Chairman Youngson stated that the result of the meeting would not in all probability be given out for publication.

BIG GUNS FOR HALIFAX.

One on the Way from London of Monster Size.

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 18.—The military authorities here have been advised that a powerful gun has been shipped on board the steamer Gothenburg City, now expected at this port from London, and preparations are being made for its reception. In addition to the one on the Gothenburg City three other guns are to follow soon.

The guns are all very powerful, are of the very latest make and have been thoroughly tested. The one on its way is said to be twice the size of the largest on this side of the Atlantic.

The following description will give an idea of its power: Weight, 32 tons; bore, 10 inches; length, 27 feet 6 1-2 inches; charge of powder, 250 pounds. At the range of 2,000 yards a shot fired will penetrate wrought iron 19 1-2 inches thick. Two guns of this size and two 10-ton guns will be placed in the new fort on McNabb's Island.

Launching the Cruiser Maine.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 18.—The big new warship Maine was launched at noon in Wallabout Bay. Miss Alice Wilmerding, granddaughter of Secretary of the Navy Tracy, broke a bottle of American wine over the vessel's bow and christened the monster. Secretary Tracy arrived at the Navy Yard with his daughter and granddaughter about 10 o'clock. The officers at the yard received his party, and the guns of the Vermont fired a salute of 19 guns. A grand stand holding over a thousand persons, at the bows of the Maine, was decorated with 700 flags and more than 1,000 yards of red, white and blue bunting. There were no speeches made at the launching.

Lucy Parsons' Trial Postponed.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 18.—The Court of Special Sessions was crowded with people to witness the trial of the Anarchists arrested for inciting a riot at Saenger Hall a week ago. Mrs. Parsons, Simon, Gordon, Meixer and Hummer, came into court and Lawer Kallisch appeared for them. The men all pleaded not guilty, but Mrs. Parsons refused to plead. She said she had been guilty of no offence and that she came to this city on a peaceable mission. After some argument by counsel the case was postponed till next Monday, the accused in the meantime being held in $1,000 bail each, which was furnished by Charles T. Reutter and Wm. Roemer.

Trying to Settle the Granite Strike.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 18.—J. G. Batterson, superintendent of the New England Granite Company, submitted a lengthy proposition to a committee of the striking workmen looking to a compromise of the difficulties. Among the offers was one to commence the payment of wages five minutes before the suspension of work in the forenoon and the same in the afternoon. It is thought that the proposition will be rejected.

Small Catch of Whale.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Nov. 18.—A private cable dispatch from Dundee, Scotland, announces the arrival of one of the whaling fleet from Davis Strait with three tons of whalebone. She reports that the entire catch of the fleet, up to November 6, was but six tons of bone and at that time whaling for the season was over. The small catch will have the effect of making a good foreign market for American whalebone.

Trouble at the Clark Mills.

KEARNY, N. J., Nov. 18.—Trouble is brewing in the Clark thread mills and the next few days may witness the inception of another big strike. About 3,000 spinners are involved. Their grievance is not so much a question of wages as that the men consider themselves ill-treated by Superintendent Walmsley and the overseers under him.

The National Council of Women.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association has appointed Mrs. Mary Howell, of New York, to represent that body with her on the Executive Board of the National Council of Women to meet in Washington next February.

A Congressman Handles the Reins.

YONKERS, N. Y., Nov. 18.—The strike of the street car drivers and conductors here is still on. But two cars were run out during the day, one driven by Receiver Stahlnecker, the Democratic Congressman from this district, and the other by Superintendent Foster. Both sides disclaim any intention of yielding.

PARNELL WILL LEAD

He Has Not the Remotest Intention of Resigning.

SHARP ATTACKS BY THE PRESS.

Great Excitement in Dublin Over the O'Shea Revelations.

Dom Pedro Refused Permission to Return to Brazil—England Tests the Consumptive Cure—One Thousand Soldiers Desert—A "Jack the Ripper" in Spain—Thirty-Eight Persons Drowned.

DUBLIN, Nov. 18.—The editor of the Freeman's Journal makes the following statement: "I have direct authority for stating that Mr. Parnell has not the remotest intention of abandoning, either permanently or temporarily, his position or his duties as leader of the Irish Parliamentary party. This may be implicitly accepted as Mr. Parnell's firm resolution, and perhaps by learning it in time the Piggotist press may be spared the humiliation of indulging in a prolonged outburst of useless villification.

"In arriving at this determination I need not say that Mr. Parnell is actuated exclusively by his sense of his responsibility to the Irish people by whose suffrage he holds his public position and who alone have the power or the right to influence his public action.

"The wild, unscrupulous and insincere shrieking of the Piggotists on the platforms and in the press can and will do nothing to alter Mr. Parnell's resolve."

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The provincial newspapers join in a chorus of denunciation of Mr. Parnell. The Dundee Advertiser (Gladstonian) says that the spectacle of Parnell's sneaking out of back doors and sliding down fire escapes is contemptible and pitiable, and that he ought for a time to retire to private life, as the Liberal party will prevent any attempt to brazen it out. Gladstonian papers in many cases advise temporary self-effacement.

THE O'SHEA VERDICT.

The Jury Finds in Favor of the Husband on All the Charges.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The defense still being unrepresented in the O'Shea-Parnell trial either by the principals thereto or by their counsel the case was placed in the hands of the jury by Mr. Justice Butt in a few words explanatory of the rules of law and evidence existing in suits such as they had here presented for their consideration. Shortly thereafter the jury rendered their verdict. It finds the respondent, Mrs. O'Shea, to have been guilty of adultery as alleged, and dismisses the counter charge of connivance in the crime made by Mrs. O'Shea against her husband. A decree of divorce, with the costs of the suit and the custody of the younger children is, therefore, awarded to the petitioner.

A report is out that General Sir Evelyn Wood is making active preparations to dispute the will made by Lady Wood in favor of Mrs. O'Shea, and it is said that Mr. Parnell will also be mentioned in this suit in connection with the charge of undue influence over the testatrix. Lady Wood died last year at an advanced age, leaving considerable property to Mrs. O'Shea. The case will be heard at the next sittings. General Wood is sustained by other relatives in the contest.

A dispatch from Dublin states that great excitement reigns in that city over the O'Shea revelations, and that bodies of men gather in the streets discussing the case and threaten to mob any one expressing a belief in Parnell's guilt.

Thirty-Eight Persons Drowned.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Thrity-eight persons are reported drowned by the capsizing of a ship off the Dalmatian coast. About 100 animals, which were being shipped to the Isle of Brazza, to be employed during the olive harvest, also perished. All on board were thrown into the sea, and the capsized vessel was soon surrounded by a struggling mass of men and animals. A number of boats put out from the shore, and succeeded in rescuing thirteen human beings and thirty-four animals.

Reward Offered for Conspirators.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The Secretary of State for War has offered a reward of £100 for information leading to the apprehension of the conspirators who tried to steal the army educational examination papers giving the formula and results of previous examinations. Pardon is also promised for the accomplice confessing.

Dom Pedro's Pension.

RIO JANEIRO, Nov. 18.—President Da Fonseca has under consideration the renewal of arrangements for the pensioning of ex-Emperor Dom Pedro, who however, will not be permitted under any circumstances to return to Brazil.

General Booth's Scheme.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The Earl of Aberdeen has offered to contribute £1,000 towards putting into operation General Booth's scheme of social regeneration.

One Thousand Soldiers Desert.

CAIRO, Nov. 18.—Advices from the Soudan state that 1,000 of the Mahdi's best soldiers have deserted him.

Election Officers Face a Jury.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 18.—The trial of James Burns, Thomas Miskill and Peter Cassidy, election officers in this city at the last election, indicted for ballot stuffing, has begun in the Hudson County Court of General Sessions.

Three Men Killed.

READING, Pa., Nov. 18.—A boiler explosion at the cooper works of Trexler & Brother at Mertzberg, this county, instantly killed Seaman Hilbert, Charles Oswald and Henry Epler. Five other employes were terribly scalded.

SEVERAL MEN KILLED.

Five Cars Precipitated Into the River While Crossing a Bridge.

KANSAS CITY, MO., Nov. 18.—About 6 a. m., as a freight train carrying employes of Armour's packing house on their way to work, and loaded with hogs and grain, was crossing the bridge over the Kaw River in this city, on the Kansas City, Wyandotte & Northern Railway, one span of the bridge gave way and precipitated five cars into the river, 30 feet below.

It is not known how many persons were on board the train, but there may have been anywhere from a dozen up to 20, and so far as the names are known the list of rescued comprises only four members of the train crew and one or two colored men who were riding across the bridge.

The following is the list of killed so far as known: Henry Coleman, Will Crawford, Fred Allen and Henry Williams.

The following employes of Armour's were seen to get aboard the ill-fated train and as they have neither put in an appearance at the packing houses nor at their homes, it is feared they are killed: Frank Wall, Ed Burke, Ralph Fay, Dave Brown, and Fred Bell.

Three tramps who boarded the train several stations up the road are also missing. The missing are supposed to be killed and their bodies buried under the wreckage.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Corporation Counsel Marsh was arguing a case before the Supreme Court, at Washington, yesterday.

The death of Caroline M. Luckey, wife of Samuel Luckey, occurred at her home in Dunellen Saturday.

Mr. Mills says that he has fallen so deeply in love with Plainfield that he believes he will have to bring his wife here and make the Crescent city his permanent home.

A number of the members of Unity and Perseverance Lodges, Knights of Pythias, of this city, and Goodwill Lodge, of Scotch Plains, are expecting to attend the ball of the Volunteer Association, to be given in the Zouave Armory, Elizabeth. Thanksgiving eve.

The wedding of Miss Jean B. Murray and Councilman Townsend Rushmore, is to take place at the Crescent Avenue church, Wednesday evening, Dec. 3. The young lady is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray, and sister of President Murray of the Y. M. C. A.

Halstead C. Compton will leave town this evening for a visit to the wildest mountain regions of Pennsylvania, where bears and wildcat abound. With his trusty gun, and in the companionship of the grizzled old native hunters, he will retire, after a long journey by rail and wagon trail, to those regions where even the stage-coaches do not penetrate, and where the fiercest of animals can be found at home in their lair.

Mr. Reed not Willingly a Party.

(From the Trenton True American.)

Mr. Reed, the Republican candidate for Senator in Somerset county, has given notice of a contest against his successful opponent, and with it has coupled some very flowery professions that he does so, not from any desire for the seat, but to test the question of whether or not Mr Keyes is a citizen of New Jersey of proper residence.

It is to be said for Mr. Reed that he was not willingly a party to the disgraceful political trick by which it was sought to defeat Mr. Keys just before the election. The trick was manufactured and kept in secret by other Republican politicians in Somerset, until it was thought to be too late to meet its lies, and contradict its effects; and we have reason to believe that Mr. Reed protested against it, but vainly.

His later manifestation may therefore be taken to explain his silence during the canvass by the claim that he thought the story was true.

Mr. Keyes' statement and evidence of his residence in New Jersey are so plain and straightforward that there is no room for a contest except as a means of gently letting down his opponent's pretensions.

A Very Good Show.

The bright little comedienne Miss Dottie Pine, and the excellent black face comedian, Fayette Welch, appeared at Amphion Hall, last evening, in the pleasing sensational comedy drama, "Pert the Girl Detective." Little Dottie's recitations and her dancing of the minuet and the latest craze the gaiety skirt dance, are very entertaining. Fayette Welch, the black faced star kept the audience in a roar of laughter in his specialties of singing, dancing and performing on a number of instruments. This gentleman is one of the best comedians that ever appeared before a Plainfield audience. The company carries special scenery and the piece was well staged. The play is well written with a pretty little story running through it, that holds the attention of the audience to the end To-night there will be new songs and dances.

THE EVANGELIST'S FAREWELL

PLAINFIELD REGRETFULLY SAYS GOOD-BYE TO A GIFTED PREACHER.

End of the Mills Revival Meetings—Parting Scenes at Church and Railway Station—Throngs of People Eager for the Final Hand Shake—Great Chorus of Gospel Songs While Waiting for the Train—Godspeed Messages and Counsel, and Hope of a Great Re-union.

The revival meetings of Evangelist B. Fay Mills are at an end. For two weeks the people of Plainfield have been greatly aroused, throngs have daily neglected personal pursuits to assemble in the churches and to listen to the preaching of the Gospel, and many hundreds of men, women and children have professed conversion and have announced before the world that henceforth they are determined to lead earnest Christian lives.

The man who under the grace of God has thus led the people to a public consecration of themselves to Christ is no more among us. He has labored hard, has reaped a bountiful harvest, and has gone away to enter on new fields. Prayers and blessings from thousands of Plainfield hearts follow him. Benedictions and words of comfort, peace and joy, linger behind.

***

The godspeed given Evangelist Mills and Sweet Singer Greenwood last night will long be remembered. The services of the evening had been attended by a great number of men, despite the storm, and after an affecting farewell scene on the platform of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church the entire congregation poured through the church doors and down the street to the North avenue railway station, where the two men were to board a train for their departure. When Mr. Mills and Mr. Greenwood, with the local pastors, descended from the stage-coach at the front of the station, they found a great crowd gathering. For the next half-hour they were kept busy shaking hands with the many who pressed about them, inside the station. A continuous stream of humanity swept through the entrance for a momentary pause with the evangelist and the singer, and out again. The interior of the building was constantly filled, and such a multitude assembled outside that the railway platform and tracks were blockaded with a dense jam of men and women.

So bubbling over with song were the people that when some one started a hymn every body joined in the singing, and a magnificent praise service by a great chorus of voices resulted. A pause in the singing, and Mr. Mills suggested that the pastors had been bottled up so long that they must be running over with something to say, and asked who the people would like to hear. Then arose a great cry of "Mills! Mills!" and the evangelist was borne upward above the heads of the crowd and placed on his feet on the drinking fountain. Up too went the singer, and then amid much merriment bits of pleasantry flashed back and forth, until Mr. Greenwood began a speech of more sober thought, and solemnly impressed on the people the necessity and value of clinging to Jesus Christ as the rock of their salvation.

Mr. Mills also made an evangelistic speech, and was in the midst of an interesting bit of a sermon when a noisy freight train silenced him, and song broke forth again.

The train which the two were to take was bulletined as being fifty minutes late, so it was decided to take the first train that should come along, as connections in New York had to be made, to prevent the departing friends from being disappointed in making their flying trip home before going to their new field of labor in Syracuse.

Some minutes after ten o'clock the vestibuled Washington express due here at 9:45 whizzed past the station. The train never stops at this city except to let off passengers from Trenton, Philadelphia and the South, and, fortunately for Mr. Mills and Mr. Greenwood, there were two people aboard whose destination was Plainfield. The engineer applied the brakes to bring the train to a stop, but the grip was not sufficient to halt the swiftly moving mass till some distance beyond the station, and the locomotive and cars went flying past to the imminent danger of the people crowding back from the tracks. Presently the train came slowly back, and the evangelistic twain took advantage of the opportunity to get a parlor car seat and swung themselves aboard from the arms of their friends. A large number pressed around to get the last hand shake, but soon the car wheels began to revolve, and the train to glide away. Standing on the vestibuled platform, Mr. Mills and Mr. Greenwood waved their handkerchiefs and smiled on the sea of faces now fading away from their view. A tremendous chorus of good-byes arose from those hundreds of throats. Hats and handkerchiefs were swung in the air. Passengers in the train could be seen flocking towards the platform and craning their necks to see what great magnate of earth was being thus honored. The train went faster and faster; the ovation was at an end; the evangelist and his helper were gone.

Standing there and watching the train recede in the darkness, the clergymen and other Christian workers came to a sudden full realization of the fact that now, their divinely gifted brother gone, a vast deal of work remained for them to do, that those who had been awakened and re-awakened by the spirit of the revival must be helped and sustained in the Christian faith, that they themselves must continue the zealous, glorious work of the departed evangelist, and bring increased results. And so with a feeling of great responsibility as to their own duties, as well as with a feeling of sadness over the parting which might to a great many be forever, the throng of people departed for their homes.

The farewell meeting for women held in the Crescent Avenue church in the afternoon and the farewell meeting for men in the evening were both deeply interesting. The attendance at each was very large, despite the disagreeable weather.

The evangelist preached two good-bye sermons, counseling the people to be steadfast in their faith, and urging the widespread extension of personal effort for bringing the hearts of sinners to a full realization of the gospel of Jesus.

For the last time Mr. Mills gave the people an opportunity to signify before the world that they accepted Jesus as their Saviour, and to sign the cards recording their desire to lead Christian lives and to connect themselves with church membership. A large number availed themselves of the opportunity.

All hearts were indelibly impressed with the beauty of the scene, as the entire throng at each service arose in a body and through the prayer of Mr. Mills dedicated themselves wholly to God's service. Each countenance was resplendant with the glory that shone upon the people in those parting hours.

***

The farewell of the women to the evangelist and singer was spoken by the Rev. Dr. Ketcham, and that of the men by the Rev. Dr. Yerkes. The words of both came deep from the heart, and were full of most impressive meaning. An intense feeling of personal affection was silently manifested when Dr. Yerkes, bidding the preacher and his co-worker godspeed, grasped their hands before that great body of men and spoke of the glories of immortality in heaven; and when Mr. Mills, responding, poured out his soul in an eloquent charge to the people so to live that they all should meet together on the right hand of God the Father before the great white throne in the Day of Judgment, a look of ineffable peace rested on the faces of those whose hearts leaped forward in joyous hope at thought of that great re-union.

In naming over some of the things he would like to stay to preach about—such as the unity of the church, a perfect representation of which had been given in the union evangelistic meetings of the past two weeks—Mr. Mills touched on the temperance question, and in ringing notes denounced the licensing of the liquor traffic as a compromise which God would not tolerate. He considered the open saloons in Plainfield awful blots on the fair face and fame of a most beautiful city, and he urged that the Christian men of the community recognize the sin and shame of being responsible, by their votes and licenses, for such disgraceful, soul-ruinous places of iniquity, and that they in future cease to be slaves to politics and party and cast their ballots for and place in office only men pledged for right. The license system ought to be abolished; until it was abolished the people themselves must themselves be responsible for the curse of the saloon. It was an awful disgrace, a fearful shame, upon the Christian men of the city, that they had not had backbone enough to enforce the prohibition laws that had been enacted locally in the past.

Referring to the wondrous power of the simple Gospel of Jesus Christ, Mr. Mills held up as a glowing example the very meetings of this revival series. What other topic—though never so dear to a man's heart—except the matter of personal salvation, the concern of the human soul, would have drawn forth such multitudes of people, would have aroused such great interest, as had been witnessed during the past two weeks? Col. Ingersoll, that brilliant blasphemer, with all his eloquence could never draw such crowds for fifteen consecutive days, in all sorts of weather, to the neglect of worldly business and pleasure, as had been done here by the power of the Gospel. The great unbeliever had tried to give a series of lectures in a big western city. The first night he had a full house; the next night not so many; the third night only thirty-seven hearers. The one, beautiful story of the Saviour's love, however, would continue to attract vast throngs, and arouse and awaken and refresh weary human hearts by the hundreds and thousands, so long as there were preachers to expound it.

There were many—the preacher said, concluding his final sermon—who had come very near to the kingdom and who if they deliberated, hesitated, questioned God's mercy and power would be lost. These had need to take a lesson from the story underlying the text, "We came to Kadesh-barnea." Kadesh-barnea was very near to the Promised Land; it was as far as the children of Israel ever got. But another brief journey, and they would have come into the land of plenty, the land flowing with milk and honey, yet they sent spies to search the country, and became disheartened, and were incredulous of God's power to keep His promise to deliver the giants and walled cities of the land into their hands, and, still doubting and disobeying, retraced their steps and perished in the great and terrible wilderness through which God had brought them.

Many souls in this city had come to Kadesh-barnea in their search for salvation. Let all these, trusting wholly in God, take at once the final step which would bring them safe into the Promised Land.

The preacher urged all the people to work unceasingly for the Master, to grow and grow and grow in grace, to develop their faith, to bring others into the kingdom, to become spiritual giants and conquer the evil hosts of the enemy round about them. He urged re-consecration, the utter giving up of themselves to God and His holy purposes; and prayed, as the throng bowed their heads before him, "The Lord bless thee and keep thee; the Lord cause His face to shine upon thee, and place his arms about thee; the Lord be gracious unto thee, and give thee peace!" And a vast sigh arose from those hundreds of souls in a softly breathed "Amen!".

The evangelist and the sweet singer are gone, but the spirit of revival still lives. If earnest, unceasing work by consecrated pastors and laymen has half the power which the faithful Christians of the city believe it has, the labors of the coming weeks and months and years will be fraught with great results, blessings manifold, and the evangelistic growth will continue until the entire city is Christianized, and all the people have become apostles of the Lord.

***

And whatever of greatness and goodness the future may contain for the people of this community, and whatever splendid growth the city's churches may acquire, the marvelous visitation of the Spirit of God which has been so abundantly manifest during these days devoted to His worship and work will ever be cherished as a most hallowed memory by the thousands whose privilege it has been to partake of the blessings of full surrender and consecration to Jesus Christ, whose ambassadors have labored so devotedly in our midst.

Her Body Cut to Pieces.

MADRID, Nov. 18.—The dismembered body of a woman was found in the Rua Ferrocarril. It is supposed that the woman was murdered by some maniac, who cut the body to pieces. There is, however, no clue as yet to the mystery.

THE SAME OLD STORY.

Gas Company and Electric Light Company Combine, and Monopoly is Established.

One of the members of the Council said to a PRESS reporter, last evening, that if he had known that the Electric Light Co., had been purchased by the Gas Light Co., he would not have voted to pass the ordinance giving the former the right for ten years to string wires through all the streets, alleys and lanes of the city, until he was assured by the new owners of the Electric Light Co., that there would be no increase in the rates to private consumers.

"I have a good notion," he continued, "to present another ordinance at the next meeting, repealing the privilege. Manager Moore of the Electric Light company, is certainly guilty of deceit, if not outright dishonesty, in his dealings with the Council. Now that all competition in street and domestic lighting is wiped out, the people can be charged outrageous rates with no redress."

But the story of the sale is not yet true. As one of the principal stockholders and directors of the Gas Light company said this afternoon: "If you don't see it in THE PRESS, it isn't so. If any documents of sale and transfer had been consummated, I would know it, and I assure you nothing of the kind has taken place. However, I do not deny nor affirm that it might happen. The Plainfield Electric Light Co's plant has been in the market for two or three years. Should the Gas Light company buy it, it will not be their policy to raise the rates." The same reporter was told by Manager Moore, "I have just returned from Boston and have no knowledge of any sale occurring in my absence."

The Ladies Say it's Different, but It Isn't.

There are certain announcements of a regular and persistent character that are periodically blazoned forth in the newspapers, and which the general public is not expected to take too seriously. "Positively last appearance;" "good for thirty days only;" "there is a plenty of them scattered here and there." Just now preparations are being made for a cake sale, or something of that character, that is to take place at Scotch Plains, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of All Saints church.

It will be held at Excelsior Hall this week Thursday, from three to half-past ten. It will not be like other church fairs, THE PRESS is told—for, strangely enough, there is an impression on the part of some that there is an element in church fairs which is not just as it should be. There is a cruel proverb, one knows, to the effect that it costs twenty-five cents to get in, and twenty-five dollars to get out. Now this is wrong—undoubtedly wrong—but there are people who believe it, and that is why the Ladies' Aid Society has spread the rumor that this fair will not be like other fairs.

But it isn't so! There are reasons for being convinced that this fair is of the very order, class, genus and species of the fairs of the Ladies' Aid Society in byegone days. And if the ladies' modesty would only permit them to recognize the fact, that is the very thing that of all others will induce people to flock thither at they have heretofore been accustomed to flock. Go, with as many of your friends as you can get together, you will have a jolly good time, and needn't buy a thing if the fancy doesn't strike you. But if you do feel like buying, you will find an abundance of things in the way of Christmas gifts, and for other purposes, and they won't charge McKinley prices, either. The proceeds will go towards the payment of the bonded debt of the church.

Seriously, they want you all to come if you do nothing more, and your welcome will be large and enthusiastic.

Senator McPherson's Brother Killed.

A. D. McPherson, a brother of United States Senator McPherson, of this State, and one of the best known men in Ohio, was run down by an engine and killed yesterday morning at the Covington (Ky.) stock yards.

Mr. McPherson was the live-stock agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. He had just left the office and was crossing from one track to another when a yard engine struck him. He fell backwards between the rails and the wheels cut off both legs below the knee. He was also injured internally, besides receiving severe cuts about the head. He was removed to a hospital, where he died.

Bountiful Gifts from Plainfield's Abundance.

The subscriptions made in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian and the First Baptist churches, Sunday morning, for the benefit of the Florence Mission for rescuing people from the lowest degradation of life in the slums of New York, amounted to nearly $250 at each, and the collection at Warren Mission chapel Sunday evening netted $25, so that a total of more than $500 was raised for this worthy object. Besides that, Plainfield to-day sent to the metropolis a big truck load of good clothing to be used in making new men and women of the rescued ones.

Great Little Men.

Some of the greatest men that ever lived were of small stature and insignificant appearance. The reader will readily recall many instances. Very small are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, but they are more effective than the huge, old-fashioned pills which are so difficult to swallow and so harsh in their action. The "Pellets" are gentle. For liver, stomach and bowel derangements they have no equal.

CONCERNING THE SCHOOLS.

Teachers Will Have Their Salaries to Spend, Thanksgiving.

At the request of Miss Julia Bulkley, the members of the Board of Education—Messrs Murray and Probasco—present at a meeting of last evening, voted to pay the teachers their November salaries in full on the day before Thanksgiving.

A communication was read from Trustee Babcock to the effect that he recommended the lighting of Irving school from the Electrict Light company's plant rather than from that of the Pond Tool company. The former had said that it would run a wire to the school for $115,82, but Mr. Babcock thought it was not fair to charge the Board the entire cost. The communication was recived, and Mr. Probasco was given power to make a contract with the Electric Light company if he could do so by agreeing to pay half the cost mentioned above and having a public wire run to the Irving school.

The building committee, Messrs Murray and Probasco, were instructed to meet Architect Oscar Teal and make a detailed statement to him of all complaints in relation to the construction of Irving school.

This Week's Meetings at the Churches.

The following announcements were made yesterday, for meetings to be held this week, in continuation of the work of revival.

At 59 North avenue—Business men's prayer meetings each morning this week, from 7:45 to 8:15.

Congregational church—Service Wednesday evening at 8, for all; young people's service Friday evening at 7:30. Card-signers especially invited.

First Baptist church—Meeting for card-signers in the lecture room Tuesday at 4 P. M. Meetings also Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings.

Methodist Episcopal church—Prayer meeting Wednesday at 8 P. M. Special service for converts and card-signers Friday evening.

Hope Chapel—Young people's meeting Tuesday evening. Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Sunday morn- services at 10:30.

Trinity Reformed church—Special religious services in the lecture room Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, at 7:45.

Park Avenue Baptist church—Special meeting Tuesday evening at 7:30, for those desiring to unite with the church, and others. Wednesday evening special meeting at 7:30 and prayer meeting at 8 o'clock. Friday evening, at 8, young people's meeting.

First Presbyterian church—Wednesday evening meeting at 7:45. Friday, at same hour, meeting for young people. Meetings for converts and those desiring to join the church, after each service.

Grace Protestant Episcopal church—meeting Friday at 4:30 for card-signers and others who desire to become connected with the church.

Seventh-Day Baptist church meetings in Dr. Lewis's study Tuesday and Thursday from 3 to 5, for converts and card signers Wednesday evening and Friday evening meetings at 7:45.

Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church—meeting especially for Sunday school members Tuesday afternoon. Wednesday evening, prayer meeting. The Session will also meet Wednesday night to prepare candidates for admission to church membership. Thursday evening, informal conference to perfect plans for the coming season of constant, continued effort. Young people's meeting Friday at 8 p. m. Saturday evening, meeting for all new converts and expectant church members.

Y. M. C. A. rooms—meeting Thursday evening, for all men, to organize Bible and other free classes.

Each of the pastors will be glad to see at all of these meetings all those who have signed cards stating preference for his church, and all others interested to come. At the close of most of these meetings the pastor will meet any who wish to talk with him upon the subject of personal religion. Strangers and those just starting in Christian life are especially invited to be present at all services.

Mr. Knowland of Plainfield, in It.

The Lehigh and Pittsburg Construction Company filed articles of incorporation Saturday with the clerk of Union county. Its business is the work of constructing railroads, and it purposes to carry on operations in the United States, Mexico and Canada. The company's capital is $100,000. The corporators are Frederick Knowland of Plainfild; Cecil Campbell Higgins of Bartow, N. Y., and John H. Bissell, Jr., of Elizabeth.

The Reward.

One of our city merchants closed his store last Tuesday in deference to the revival meetings while they were in progress, at what he supposed would be a loss in his business; but he was willing to make the sacrifice in order to give his clerks an opportunity to attend the meetings. When the sales of the week were footed up he found he had done the largest week's business of the season.

—The peerless Jennie Houghton will skate during both the afternoon and evening of Thanksgiving Day, at The Crescent.

As a cough remedy, Hires' Cough Cure is, perhaps, the best medicine that science has ever discovered. It cuts the phlegm and mucus, relieves the lungs and chest, breaks up cold as nothing else will do. In croup and whooping-cough its prompt action is like magic. No family should be without it.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Masonic.

The Grand Commander of Texas has issued a general order forbidding any Sir Knight in that jurisdiction from entering a bar-room, while clothed with any part of his uniform or regalia.

The corner-stone of Ogle County court-house, being erected at Ogden, Ill., was laid with Masonic ceremonies last Tuesday. There was a large gathering of citizens to witness the ceremony and a parade of Masons and Knights Templar.

The Grand Lodge of Illinois will hold the next Annual Communication in Chicago beginning October 7. The present grand officers will be re-elected in accordance with the custom that prevails in the jurisdiction. There will be considerable business of importance to come up at this session.

The Assembly of the Scottish Rite, at Cleveland next week, will be the largest gathering of high grade Masons ever held in this country. A special train will carry over two hundred members of the Rite from Chicago, and the Eastern and Northwestern States will send large delegations.

Odd-Fellows.

The conflict of authority between J. L. Bamum, Grand Master of Illinois, and John C. Underwood, Grand Sire, is beginning to attract considerable attention among leading members of the order everywhere. The Grand Master arrested the charter of America lodge, of Chicago, for disobedience to his mandate, and the Grand Sire ordered the Grand Master to restore it in two days, which he refused to do. A lively fight is therefore on hand in that jurisdiction; but the law and the facts seem to be on the side of the Grand Master.

Grand Master T. F. Rixey has finally decided that the resolution passed at the last session of the Grand lodge, excluding saloon-keepers from the order, is in conflict with the laws of the Sovereign Grand lodge, and he has refused to enforce the resolution. The brewers are jubilant and peace again prevails in that jurisdiction.

New Jersey has an Odd-Fellows home free from debt and a balance of $8,500 in the treasury. The home has twenty-eight inmates supported by 12,000 members, who contribute annually twenty-five cents each to the institution. Jersey may yet be admitted to the union.

Enterprise Lodge of Baltimore has already adopted a resolution to visit the world's fair in a body in 1893, if Chicago in the meantime secures a site.

The Owls.

A new nest of this peculiar but popular order will be organized in Chicago September 27. There are nearly four hundred names on the charter list, all being members of the Masonic lodges in Chicago. The nest will be instituted by members of the order from St. Louis, about two hundred of whom will visit the World's Fair City for that purpose and bring with them all the costumes and paraphernalia necessary in hatching the nocturnal birds. The order will, in a measure, supersede the Mystic Shrine, as all Master Masons are eligible for membership, whereas none are admitted to the Shrine unless thirty-second degree Masons or Knights Templar.

Knights of Pythias

The anniversary of the organization of the Uniform rank was celebrated in Rhode Island last week by all the divisions in that State. The Knights assembled at Pawtucket where, after parade and battalion drill, they took the steamer for a trip to Providence, where supper was served, addresses delivered and the festivities kept up till a late hour.

Illinois will report a net increase of membership this year of 3,000, and thirty-seven new lodges instituted. This condition of prosperity seems due, in a large measure, to the efforts of the present Grand Chancellor Joseph H. Kellogg, who has visited nearly every lodge in the jurisdiction during his term of office.

Ancient Order United Workmen.

The Grand Legion of Select Knights held the regular annual session of the order in Chicago last week. The grand body is composed of legions in Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois, and delegates from those respective States were in attendance. While this military branch of the order is not growing very rapidly, the legions that have been organized are gaining in membership and developing a fair degree of activity.

The Elks.

The members of Columbus Lodge No. 37 are making arrangements to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the organization of the lodge September 18. Invitations have been sent to all the prominent Elks throughout the country, and a large gathering and an enjoyable evening is expected.

Royal Arcanum.

The Supreme Secretary has a death notice which contains some interesting information. The records of the office, August 1, show 107,368 members of the order in good standing, distributed among 1,292 councils. In July, 57 full rate and three half-rate death claims were paid, amounting in all to $175,000.

McDOUGALL.

POWDERLY ELECTED.

He Will Lead the Knights Another Year at a Reduced Salary.

DENVER, Nov. 18.—At the morning's session of the General Assembly of the Knights of Labor Mr. Powderly's salary was reduced from $5,000 to $3,500, after which he was re-elected Grand Master Workman. Hugh Cavanagh, of Cincinnati, will act as Worthy Foreman for the next two years, while John W. Hayes will continue in the capacity of Secretary and Treasurer, and the Executive Board will be elected this evening.

According to reports the order has a paying membership of less than 200,000. The assembly is expected to come to a close to-morrow.

Remarkable Operation.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The remarkable operation of transplanting a bone from a live dog to a boy to take the place of a bone that was lacking, was performed at the Charity Hospital, on Blackwell's Island. Boy and dog will remain bound together until their bones unite.

Stanley's Lecture in Springfield.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 18.—Henry M. Stanley lectured in the City Hall last night to an audience of 2,000 persons. Nothing new in reference to the rear column or other question of dispute was brought out. Mr. Stanley was introduced by Governor Brackett.

Pennsylvania Farmers' Convention.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 18.—The Farmers' Alliance will hold a State convention here on November 26 for the purpose of organizing a State Alliance and electing delegates to the National Alliance convention to be held at Ocala, Fla., December 2.

SOMETHING INTERESTING.

Advice Which a Popular Young Lady Gives to Our Readers.

There are numberless people who do not call themselves sick, and yet who feel weak, nervous, or tired; they have lost their vim, power of endurance, or ambition to work. They feel miserable, not because they are actually sick, but because their nerves are weak. Such nervous sufferers should know that the feelings and sensations they experience are the Danger Signals—Nature's warning that their nerve force and vital power are at a low ebb and must be replenished and built up, or soon actual disease will prostrate the nervous and physical system.

This was the trouble with the beautiful and talented young actress, Miss Marie Steers, who has won for herself a high position among the popular artists of the profession.

MARIE STEERS.

She writes us as follows, and her communication will be read with the greatest interest by all:

"I must say a word for Dr. Greene's Nervura. Ever since I was a babe any excitement or overwork always threw me into hysterics, and since entering the theatrical field I have suffered more or less from this misfortune, especially on 'first nights' in new characters. As is my usual custom, I made my arrangements for the coming season in June, and up to the present day have been hard at work studying. Dr. Greene's Nervura was recommended to me for nervous weakness, and I used it. Since I can remember I never felt so rest d, both mentally and bodily, as I do at present, and am ready to face any audience, from the creme de la creme of New York to the cowboys of the far West.

"For the future, when I hear any of my professional sisters and brothers complain of nervousness, my advice shall invariably be, go to the nearest druggist and purchase a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura. I could not help but send my testimonial, for does not one of our most learned writers say, 'Give honor where honor is due?'

MARIE STEERS,

"Care Clipper Office, Centre st., New York city."

Dr. Greene of 35 West Fourteenth street, New York, its discoverer, is the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to the treatment of all forms of chronic diseases through letter correspondence, and will give by mail his opinion and advice in any case free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled. Send for symptom blank to fill out, or write him about your case.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Mathewson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

The Pierson Hardware Co.

Are at the apex of the heap,
In the line of Stoves and Ranges—
All because they are good and cheap.

Now if you have got a beau,
And contemplate a plan
Of furnishing your kitchen—
PIERSON is the man.

Their Tinware and their Hardware,
Housefurnishing Goods and Lamps,
Makes one feel as if they would like to have
A pocket full of stamps.

So call and see, and you'll agree
That what we now relate,
Is not at all a fable,
But wise to contemplate.

And when into your kitchen
You by chance do look around
And see the many useful things
That at PIERSON'S you have found,

You will then unto your friends relate
That story, old and true—
That to step into their store
Is to purchase more and more,
Until you find you got the earth and
cannot get no more.

THE MAD LOCOMOTIVE.

A Little Hand Accomplished What Strong Ones Could Not.

"A STORY of railroad adventure, eh?"

"If you please," I answered the veteran engineer, as we sat in the cool shade to the east of a big Providence round-house. I may say that Peter Hank, the narrator of this exciting incident, is well known by me, and esteemed as a man of truth by everybody who knows him.

"I never had but one son. All my boys were girls. But when little Burnside was born, I tell you we were happy. Yet I never supposed that chap would save my own life and lots of other people's. That's just what he did, however. You know, I always run the express. We got a big engine, some years ago, on the road. She weighs more than any machine we ever used before. I never liked her, when I saw her in the shop, that giantess, No. 643. She never had any name. And that machine never liked me. All because of this:" The engineer took his pipe from his mouth to look me squarely in the eye. "I was in the shop one afternoon just to look her over. That's when they were painting her up. The painters and varnishers were crawling all over her. Of course she wasn't fired up. Another engineer and I just were walking round her huge body. I said: 'Jake, that critter will heat the first trip, and a hot box on her will mean lots of work. I hope I may never be asked to run her.' Well, sir, believe it or not, I know she heard it and was mad. When I climbed into her cab, just to look at her there, I naturally enough took hold of her reverse-lever. She threw that lever over, sir, quicker'n lightning, and caught my leg just under the knee, taking out a bite as big as a walnut. My! How she pained me! It was weeks before my stiff leg was all right."

Then he resumed his pipe while that soaked into me.

"Now, you newspaper men don't take any stock in such things, I know. But no railroad man would say I was a fool if I thought hard of the machine. And all railroad men have seen engines act just as if they had spirits in them. There ain't an engine on our road, or any other, which will work as well for one man as she will for another. Every engine has her favorites for whom she will do any thing, and her enemies, for whom she acts like a she demon."

A fact, by the way, which the writer has since verified on considerable inquiry among locomotive engineers.

"Well, sir, if you believe me, that No. 643 hadn't been out o' shop a week before the master mechanic sent for me one night to take her. I remember I was eating supper. It was my two days' lay-off. Little Burnside was sitting in his chair beside me. He was just eight years old the Thursday before. It was a very hot August night. I was asked to put the big engine through for a special. There was a party of big fellows from Washington who were returning from the White Mountains. I was to drive 'em down to Wickford Junction for Newport.

"'God help me, Susie!' I said to my wife, pushing back my chair. 'I don't know why, but I'd rather be killed by a pistol shot here at home than to go.'

"'You foolish fellow,' she replied. 'What ails you?'

"'I don't know,' I said. 'But that machine hain't been run a dozen times. Besides, she hates me. This is to be a show-off run, like lightning, and I know she'll kill us all.'

"My wife she just rose up then. Being a good Christian church member as I ain't, she exploded on me.

"'Pete, I'm ashamed of you! You're the best runner on the road, and this is an honor. D' you want to get discharged and lose our daily bread? God will take care o' my husband. Here!

WE THREW OUR WEIGHT AGAINST IT.

It's a hot night, and you'll be back by eleven o'clock. Take the boy. He's always wanted a night ride.'

"That got me. I just rose up; she put on the boy's little cap and gave me his coat, and I went off, taking the boy. I remember how he laughed. I carried him over the rails in the dark yard on my shoulder, and he kept patting my cheek and kissing me, till I boosted him into the cab of No. 643. How proud he sat up there on my box between my legs.

"Well, again," continued Pete, rubbing a fresh match on his overalls, "nothing occurred as we coupled on, and ran quite awhile. We drew four Pullmans besides the baggage-car. It was hot and dark. We had the right of way, but were to approach Wickford cautious, for there we should find the regular New York express, which we should overtake. No. 643 worked stiff, as I knew she would, but she was so big, that when she got started, nothing could trouble her much, and she just tossed the load along as light as a feather. I noticed that the throttle-valve worked pretty hard when I had to shut off steam once or twice slowing through a station. Still I could jerk her in and out well enough with one hand. An ugly throttle is a terrible thing, sir, though. For, you see, a man can't be sure. Suppose you couldn't shut off. Suppose your throttle got stuck, full head on, going at fifty miles an hour, and you a-coming into a station, for instance, even if there was nothing standing there, I tell you, you'd feel about as the Almighty would if the earth got loose and He couldn't stop her."

Then Hank puffed smokeless whiffs.

"Well, again," he resumed, presently. The excitement of his own memory had brought the sweat-drops to his forehead; his pipe had gone out the third time. "That throttle-valve did stick on me! That's just what did happen. We were, I calculated, about eight miles from Wickford. Somehow, though, there wasn't any station to slow me up, yet I had a feeling, an awful feeling, too, that I could not if I would shut her off. 'Pshaw!' I said to myself, and I played with the boy's curly head with my right hand. But my left hand kept pressing and trying that throttle harder and harder. I couldn't stir her! I reached over and put my right hand on the lever. I could not move her! I got off my box. I seemed to be in a perfect frenzy. I sprang at that valve with both hands and all my weight. She didn't move a hair! And the way we were kiting! Probably we were flying over fifty miles an hour. I yelled at the fireman:

SHE SHUT OFF AS EASY AS DRAWING YOUR BREATH.

"'Give us a hand, George!'

"He knew it all in a second, and tumbled in from the tender to put both his hands beside mine.

"'Now!' I shouted.

"We threw our weight against it. But that old beast just shook herself and jumped and jumped, as much as to say: 'You can't shut off my wind!'

"'Pete!' cried the fireman, 'there's the 'Wickford' on the switch! We've only two miles more to live!'

"Then we struggled like two mad bulls. We pulled. Then we shoved. We planted our feet and pulled and shoved. We had no air-brakes in them days. But if we had, I vow I b'lieve to have put 'em on would have knocked out the cylinder-heads or broke a driving-rod, and sent us all to eternity.

"All this while, there sat my pretty boy, as calm, as laughing, because he thought this was all play. But I knew we'd all got to die, and I caught up the boy. I held him, kissing him. It all took but a moment. There, less'n a mile ahead, stood the rear of the 'New York' on our track at the station. I could see her red light. You better b'lieve I forgot all about the big men behind. I was thinking, should I throw out my boy into the darkness?

"'Papa,' said Burnside, 'what makes you look so?'

"'Because, boy, we can't stop the engine. We're all going to be killed in a minute, unless I toss you out there.'

"'No, papa,' said he, reaching out his pretty hand. 'Let me try it.'

"Well, I did. I don't know why. I was holding him, you understand. And, sir, the moment that child's hand struck that throttle-valve, she shut off as easy as drawing your breath!"

The engineer said he actually toppled over on his seat as if he had seen a miracle. The train slowed up in answer to the brake whistle, and stopped just in front of the station. The matter may or may not have had any miraculous element. The good mother urged the boy's going. The behavior of the metal, one moment binding by heat or other expansion, the next moment releasing itself helped by the tremendous steam pressure in the dome, is one of the many well-known curiosities of metal action.

"Would you really have thrown that boy from the cab if she had not stopped?" I asked.

"Certainly. It would have been the only chance of saving his life. I should have chosen a bunch of green, growing brush, and landed him safely up against the bending branches. Then I should have jumped myself. We always jump when we can do no more good here. My fireman has three times saved his life so. I have once, of which I'll tell you some day. Good-bye. Here's my machine, just out of the yard."—Rev. Emory J. Haynes, in N. Y. Ledger.

How to Sterilize Water.

Dr. C. G. Currier says, in the Medical Record, that water is easily sterilized by keeping it at or near the boiling point for fifteen minutes. Five minutes' heat is sufficient to destroy all harmful micro-organisms. Still less time suffices to destroy the disease-producing varieties which are recognized as liable to occur in water. Thus merely raising to the boiling point a clear water containing the micro-organisms of malarial disorders, typhoid, cholera, diphtheria or of suppurative processes, and allowing it to gradually cool, insures the destruction of these germs.

—Mrs. Aiken—"What do you think of the Monroe doctrine, Mrs. Payne?" Mrs. Payne—"I don't know any thing about him. You see Dr. Keneen does all my doctrin'."—Puck.

THEY'VE GOT HOME.

And This Is a Sample of the Way in Which They Entertain Each Other.

"Why, is that you?" cries the first woman as they meet on the street.

"And is that you?"

"Just got home?"

"Yes."

"So'd I. Have a good time?"

"Beautiful!"

"So'd I. Splendid time. What'd you see?"

"Every thing."

"So'd I. Gain any?"

"Five pounds."

"So'd I. Baby sick?"

"Yes."

"So was mine. Have any mosquitoes?"

"Lots."

"So'd I. Hate to come home?"

"Yes."

"So'd I. Make lots of friends?"

"Yes."

"So'd I. I just cried when I left. Did your trunks get smashed?"

"Yes."

"So did mine. Isn't it horrid? Did your dresses wrinkle?"

"Awfully."

"So'd mine. Got a girl yet?"

"No."

"Neither have I. Isn't it dreadful? Well, good-bye."

"Good-bye."—Detroit Free Press.

NO RESPECT FOR THE CLERGY.

Rev. Enoch Howler—Do you pass ministers on your trains?

R. R. Superintendent—Why, certainly. Just stand along the road somewhere and fifty-four trains will pass you every day.—The Jury.

According to the Necessity.

It was the day of the late unexpected water famine in Englewood. In the house of a man on Yale street there was only half a gallon of the precious liquid, and the youngest member of the family just in from a game of crack-the-whip was preparing to wash his hands.

"Remember, Tommy," said the father, "the water in that pitcher is all there is in the house. You are the smallest of us and your share of it ought to be less than any one else's."

"It doesn't go accordin' to size," replied Tommy, pouring half the contents of the pitcher into the wash-bowl, "but accordin' to the dirt."—Chicago Tribune.

Miss Winkley—Yas.

Mr. Winkley—If dey ain't no one lookin' aftah suppah, conceal a couple ob hams in dem sleeves an' fetch dem hoam.—Judge.

Justifiable Rudeness.

Mr. Smallpurse—I never saw you act so rudely as you did with Mrs. Tourist. You plied her with questions about her summer trips, one question after another, so fast that she got entirely out of breath trying to answer them. What did you do it for?

Mrs. Smallpurse (who had to spend the heated term in the city)—I didn't dare give her a chance to breathe, or she would have asked where I went this summer.—N. Y. Weekly.

A Different Thing.

"Come, dear, just because he has ceased to love you, you must not sit down and cry. On the contrary, you must look your brightest and prettiest. Remember that there are just as good fish in the sea as ever were caught."

"Yes, but auntie, it wasn't because he was good that I loved him. It was because he was bad."—Munsey's Weekly.

Human Nature.

Mother—Don't you know that it is naughty to hurt the cat?

Clair—Yes'm.

Mother—Then why do you do it?

Clair—Dunno; cos it's naughty, I guess.—The Jury.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

SCIENCE CLIPPINGS.

MUSTARD oil is being manufactured in Germany for lubricating purposes. It is said to be unaffected by cold above a temperature of about fifteen degrees Fahrenheit, and does not readily become racid or form fatty acids likely to attack metal.

A NEW alloy, a combination of manganese and tin, has been introduced as suitable for bearings in which shafting is required to run at a high speed, and for other articles for which a high degree of tenacity and great closeness of grain are required.

IN experiments recently made for the substitution of electric lights for the oil lamps at present in use for lighting the compasses of vessels at night, it was found that by bringing an incandescent lamp close to the compass a deflection of the needle was produced.

SEVEN miles from the earth is the greatest altitude as yet attained by aeronauts, and was reached by Messrs. Glaisher and Coxwell, on the 5th of September, 1862. The details of the experience of these gentlemen in this rarefied atmosphere are very interesting. Mr. Glaisher became quite unconscious, while Mr. Coxwell lost the use of his hands, and used his teeth to pull the cord to allow the gas to escape. At the distance of four miles from the earth a railroad train could be heard; the discharge of a gun was heard at the altitude of 10,000 feet; the barking of a dog at two miles, and the shouting of the multitude not more than 4,000 feet.

A Luminous Buoy.

Experiments with a luminous buoy invented by M. Dibos have been made at Havre. By improvements, effected since a previous experiment, in the arrangement of the phosphuret of calcium in the apparatus, the inventor has obtained fewer intermissions in the production of the light and a prolongation of the duration. A first buoy thrown into the channel opposite the semaphore emitted a powerful light upon coming in contact with the water. During this time a boat left the harbor, and when about a mile and a half out, another of the buoys was thrown into the water, which lit up the sea within a very large radius. The power of the light was such that the men at the light-house, two miles and a half distant, saw it clearly with the naked eye. It has, besides, been proved in former trials that the light can be seen at a distance of five and a half miles. The French authorities intend making trials of lighting the channel on the Seine, from the Amfard bank to where the dikes commence, by means of decked boats with masts about two meters high, on the top of which will be placed a light of this kind.—Scientific American.

Electric Light in the Suez Canal.

The number of vessels passing through the Suez canal at night by means of electric light is increasing with extraordinary rapidity. The regulations for the use of the electric light came into operation in March, 1887, and during the remainder of that year (according to statistics given in the recent British consular report from Port Said) the number using it was 394. In 1888 the number rose to 1,611, and last year reached 2,445. Prior to March, 1887, the privilege of traveling by night with electric light had been restricted to vessels carrying the mail's. Since then all ships which conform to the regulations are allowed to proceed by night. The average time of transit has also been considerably shortened. In 1886 it was 36 hours; in 1887, 33 hours and 58 minutes; in 1888, 31 hours and 15 minutes, and in 1889 it had been reduced to 25 hours 50 minutes. The average time for vessels using the electric light in 1889 was 23¼ hours. The shortest time taken by a steamer in the transit of the canal in 1889 was 14½ hours, which is ten minutes less than the fastest passage on record previously.—Scientific American.

A Broken Neck Mended.

Physicians connected with the Presbyterian Hospital are highly elated over the fact of their having successfully mended a broken neck. The patient, Harry Reigel, aged fourteen years, fell from an elevator, landing on his head and dislocating his neck on May 8. When brought to the hospital the case was considered hopeless, but by experiments with extending weights attached to the patient's head and feet the neck was eventually set and kept in place by means of a plaster of Paris jacket. The displaced bones are now properly set and the patient has full power of the neck.—Scientific American.

Cause of Dizziness After Eating.

The immediate cause of dizziness is the blood leaving the brain. The process of digestion calls a large amount of the blood directly to the digestive organs, and in an anæmic condition this sudden withdrawal of so large an amount of blood from other parts of the body may leave the brain with an insufficient quantity to maintain its activity. Nearly one-half of the blood of the body can be drawn into the large blood vessels of the trunk.—Dr. J. H. Kellogg.

The Electrical Telegraph.

In 1747 Bishop Watson sent the discharge of a Leyden jar through 10,600 feet of wire suspended on poles on Shooter's Hill, and a plan for an alphabetical telegraph to be worked by electricity appeared in Scot's Magazine for 1753, which, however, seems never to have been realized. At Geneva, in 1774, a telegraph line was erected by Lesage, consisting of twenty-four pith ball electroscopes, each representing a letter.—M. Farrant, in Science Gossip.

LITTLE GIRL—Mamma. I shall be real glad to go to Heaven, 'cause they have plenty of preserves there.

Mamma—Why, my child, what do you mean?

Little girl—'Cause, mamma, it says in my catechism: "What ought the saints to love God?" Answer—Because He makes, preserves and keeps them.—Judge.

Real Irish Bulls.

There were some good newspaper bulls during the session—all of the genuine Irish breed. Donal Sullivan introduced to the house one from an Irish paper. It was in the form of an advertisement for a laborer and a boy, and concluded thus: "With grazing for two goats; both Protestants."

An Irishman writing in the Times on the late Baron Dowse concluded his eulogium: "A great Irishman has passed away. God grant that many as great, and who shall as wisely love their country, may follow him." A Dublin paper heard that "the health of Mr. Parnell has lately taken a very serious turn, and that fears of his recovery are entertained by his friends." Several English papers quoted this without detecting the bull.

A Cork paper, in describing an interval of peace in a stormy public meeting, said: "For some time a great calm raged."—St. James' Gazette.

Religious Item.

A little boy was saying his prayers at his mother's knee. His little brother passed by and pulled his hair. Stopping in his prayer the dear little cherub said:

"Now, God, please excuse me for a minute until I punish my dear little brother for pulling my hair."

Nothing but his mother's interference saved the brother from being pounded to a jelly.—Texas Siftings.

Fixed for George.

"Lucy," he said, in the low, soft, persuasive voice of an early morning tramp taking a cold victual census of a quiet neighborhood, "why should I not—Ouch! Blazes! Gol-lee!"

"You should have told me you were coming this evening, Harry," she said, reproachfully. "Those pins in my belt were for George."—Chicago Tribune.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

The Best Remedy

in this world, says J. Hofherr of Syracuse, N. Y., is Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son who was partially paralized three years ago and attacked by fits, has not had any symptoms of them since he took one bottle of the remedy. I most heartily thank for it.

Nervous Prostration Cured.

CROGHAN, N. Y. June, 1888.

I was not able to do anything for 19 months, was confined to bed most of the time, couldn't eat nor sleep, was so nervous and dizzy that I could not walk from the house to the garden, I was all run down by what the doctors called nervous prostration. No medicine seemed to help me. Then I took Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic and now I can eat and sleep and have no more shaking spells, can do my housework again. I am very thankful for this and recommend the Tonic to all sufferers.

SUSIE VERSENEIDER.

Our Pamphlet for nervous or nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

WAR NOT IMMINENT

No Immediate Uprising of Indians is Anticipated.

PREPARING FOR AN ATTACK.

United States Troops Ready to Quell Any Outbreak.

Mandan Crowded With Refugees—Two Hundred Armed Indians in the Town—The Citizens Determined to Shoot Down Any Redskin Found in the County Without a Pass—Gen. Miles' Views.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The War Department is in receipt of no information tending to confirm or discredit the alarming news published in the newspapers about a threatened Indian uprising. Several new men are now Indian agents at points in the Sioux Nation, and being unfamiliar with the Indian character, they have become, in the opinion of War Department officials, unnecessarily alarmed by the demonstrations of the Indians, and have given out to the newspapers an expression of their fears, which it is believed will prove to be ill founded.

Says There is No Danger.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 19.—General Ruger and Lieut. Woodruff of the Department of Dakota have returned from a 10 days' trip to two of the larger Indian reservations in Montana. Lieut. Woodruff says no immediate trouble is anticipated and that the visit of General Ruger had much to do to quiet the excitement of the Indians. When asked about the reported danger at Mandan, Lieut. Woodruff said that city was in no more danger from the Indians than is St. Paul.

TO BE SHOT ON SIGHT.

Intense Excitement Prevails in the Country Around Mandan.

MANDAN, N. D., Nov. 19.—Every house in town is full to overflowing with refugees from country districts. The most intense excitement prevails in the country. Settlers are prepared to believe anything about the Indians because of their queer actions lately. Several families came in to-day on foot a distance of 20 miles and over, too poor to own wagons. To-day there are 200 Indians in town armed, but the citizens are armed too, and patrols will be out and people will sleep with their clothes on.

A date will be fixed by a committee of citizens, and Indian agents will be notified that after that date any Indian found in this county without a pass from the agent will be killed on sight. The population is thoroughly aroused, and although conservative men are doing their best to quiet the angry populace there is every reason to believe that unless the Government takes immediate steps to increase the force of soldiers here and at Fort Lincoln every Indian coming into the county will be killed.

WHAT GEN. MILES SAYS.

He Does Not Fear an Immediate Uprising of the Indians.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—General Miles, who is stopping at the Hotel Richelieu, was more communicative than last night.

"The trouble with many of the Indians," said he, "is that they are starving. In many districts their crops have failed utterly and they are thoroughly discouraged. Then the Government cut down their supplies. The Appropriation bill was passed at a late hour and the Indian feels that he is neglected.

"The general tenor of the dispatches received to-day is about the same as those received yesterday. We are now doing all in our power to prevent an uprising, and troops are being disposed with that object in view."

While General Miles would not say he thought the uprising would be nipped in the bud, he intimated that he hoped to be able to prevent a war. In fact, his expressions were more suggestive of peace than they were last night.

Seven Companies of Infantry Ready.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 19.—Seven full companies of infantry stationed at Fort Russell have been ordered to be in readiness to take the field against the Indians at a moment's notice.

Married in a Sick Room.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—John Russell Young, who is one of the best known newspaper men in America, was married last evening to Mrs. Mary D. Davids of Philadelphia. The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Charles T. Eaton of the Church of the Divine Paternity, took place in the Astor House, where Mr. Young has lived for several years past. Nothing could have been quieter than this wedding, the principal reason being the ill-health of the bridegroom. He has been confined to his room with a fever.

Arrested for Grand Larceny.

CANISTEO, N. Y., Nov. 19.—W. P. Bickford, a merchant tailor of this place, was arrested on a warrant sworn out by New York creditors, charging him with grand larceny. Bickford made an assignment to a relative, as agent for his wife, and his stock was replevined by New York parties. Last night the goods were taken from his store without the knowledge of his creditors, hence his arrest.

Returned to Jail.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 19.—Henry Dickson, who escaped from the Tunkhannock jail some time ago, has returned to that institution. He was very penitent, and told the warden that he was sorry for what he had done. He was willing to serve his time out.

General Sewell's Cottage Burglarized.

CAPE MAY, N. J., Nov. 19.—The summer cottage of General Sewell was entered by thieves and everything of value in the house was stolen.

WORK OF THE KNIGHTS.

The Question of Organizing a New Political Party to be Settled To-Day.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 19.—The Knights of Labor will probably adjourn this evening. The question of organizing a new political party will probably be settled then and the place of holding their next annual assembly be chosen.

A general executive board, consisting of Messrs. Wright, Devlin, Holland and Davis, considered the question of strikes, and after a brief discussion agreed to let the clause in the constitution relating to this subject remain unchanged.

The committee on the good of the order made their report which was accepted. They recommended a federation of all labor organizations, the appointment of a committee to attend the next annual convention of the Farmers' Alliance, supported the recommendation of Grand Master Workman Powderly for the prevention of needless strikes, and strongly recommended the appointment of a committee to bring about the forfeiture of the New York Central Railroad to the State.

A RIDE TO DEATH.

Two Pennsylvania Wood Choppers Killed and Four Seriously Injured.

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., Nov. 19.—A number of wood choppers employed on the line of the Ferney Mountain Railroad started for a camp on a hand car. In descending a heavy grade the men lost control of the car, which dashed down the mountain at frightful speed, and collided with an engine standing on the track near Farley station.

Two of the men were killed instantly and four others injured, one fatally. The killed are John Davis, of Tamaqua, and Henry Isinger, of Beavertown. The injured are Israel Beyer, Lock Haven; Horace Freed, Beavertown; Oscar Grugen, Ferney, and Wm. Remstein, Beavertown. Grugen's injuries will prove fatal.

THE ERIE TROUBLE.

The Employes' Committee Will Not Tell the Result of Their Meeting.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 19.—The committee of 43 of the employes of the Erie system who have been in the city for the past two days, have concluded their labors and most of them left for home. They met in secret session and after they finished refused to give out anything. The men all appeared to be serious, and one of the leaders said to a reporter as he left the hotel: "You haven't heard the last of it yet."

It is safe to say that the entire object of the meeting was to discuss the demands made on the management of the road and the answer received from President King. No amount of persuasion could induce any of them to tell whether or not the session had been concluded.

Murphy After Dixon Again.

BOSTON, Nov. 19.—Johnny Murphy, the clever young bantam-weight of Charleston, believes that he was drugged before time was called for the first round in his recent fight with Dixon. Two men who have not lost confidence in little Murphy are Billy Muldoon and Jake Kilrain. Muldoon has sent a statement to this city that he is willing to back Murphy for another battle with Dixon, and Kilrain will furnish half the stakes. Dixon's backer said the colored lad would meet Murphy when convenient, but that the stakes would have to be larger than they were before.

Philadelphia Sends a Doctor to Berlin.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 19. — Dr. John Guiteras, who was selected by the University of Pennsylvania medical staff to visit Berlin and make observations on the experimental treatment of consumption by the Koch method, will sail from New York to-morrow. He has been instructed to make the most careful and minute observations of the Koch method and its results, and forward from Berlin quantities of the unknown lymph for application in cases here.

Gov. Gordon Elected Senator.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 19.—John B. Gordon was elected to the United States Senate to succeed Hon. Joseph E. Brown. The Senate voted first and Gordon got 25 votes to 19 for the field. The House voted at 12 o'clock, and Gordon in the call of the roll received 84 votes. There were a great many changes, and Gordon's name swept through the House like a cyclone amidst the wildest excitement and enthusiasm.

Secretary Noble in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Secretary Noble has returned to Washington. The Secretary was on his way to New York to attend the dinner of the Chamber of Commerce and did not intend to stop here, but the train was several hours behind time and he was unable to make connections. He telegraphed his regrets.

Two Torpedo Cruisers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Secretary Tracy has in contemplation the building of two torpedo cruisers, one of 750 tons displacement and one of 1,200 tons displacement. The plans will be drawn during the next few months, and Congress will be asked to make appropriations for the cruisers.

RUMORS OF TROUBLE

Wall Street Disturbed Again by Wild Reports.

MORE FAILURES ARE PREDICTED

Another London Banking House Said to be in Difficulty.

The Talk of Impending Evil Cannot be Traced to a Tangible Source—Stocks Declining—Two Failures in New York and Two in Philadelphia—Wheat Takes a Tumble on a False Rumor.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—There is a rumor that another prominent banking firm is in difficulties, owing to its inability to rediscount maturing bills.

The Financial News says it hopes the report is not true, but it is afraid that many weak spots have been made in the financial world by reckless underwriting, and that more than one house is tottering under a load of overwhelming unforseen liabilities.

On the Stock Exchange business continues unsettled. Every department is sensitive and distrustful and dealings are limited. The fall in silver caused a further decline of 1/4 in rupee paper, also a decline in Mexican Railway, ordinary falling 3 and preference 4.

WALL STREET FEVERISH.

Alarming Rumors Continue and the Market is Unsettled.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Ugly rumors are again afloat and the market is very unsettled. Several houses were said to be tottering and might fall at any moment. Among the houses named were two or three that had been considered among the strongest of the street, and investigation failed to disclose any grounds for believing that they were in any danger of going to pieces. A dispatch from Philadelphia said that a failure was expected which would make almost as great a sensation in the financial world as the revelations concerning Baring Bros. & Co. The dispatch did not say whether it was a New York or a Philadelphia house, and it did not receive any serious consideration. There was a renewal of the report of the day before that another bank was going to fail. Inquiry among banking circles did not elicit a confirmation of the report. On the contrary, disbelief in it was expressed.

While none of the alarming rumors could be traced to a tangible source, they nevertheless had a very disquisting effect in Wall street, where the more apprehensive ones were disposed to show a belief in the old adage of "where there is smoke there must be fire." More damage has been done in the street by rumors than by actual occurrences. When a smash occurred, people knew the consequences immediately, but when there was talk of impending evil they stood in fear and trembling and let the market swing unrestrained.

TUMBLE IN WHEAT.

A Selling Panic Started in Chicago on False Rumor.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—There was a crash in wheat. In the excitement of a little selling-panic prices broke two cents in a few minutes in addition to a decline earlier. It was simply another chapter of the scare which has been playing havoc with prices in London, New York and Chicago for a week past.

The market had no chance to act on its merits. Men who believed that a plain bushel of wheat is worth $1.05 or $1.10 have not dared to buy it at 96 cents or 94 cents, or even 92 cents. The fear of a general financial panic has driven men to sell out everything right and left.

Two More Failures.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—The failure of P. W. Gallaudet & Co., bankers, of No. 2 Wall street, created little surprise in Wall street. The failure was caused by Russell Sage and several banks calling in loans to the firm. The liabilities are placed at $1,000,000. Shortly after the Gallaudet failure W. F. Owens, banker, No. 52 Broadway, announced his inability to meet outstanding obligations.

Forger Smith Arraigned.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Albert H. Smith, the forger, through whose fraudulent practices the firm of Mills, Robeson & Smith, of which he was a member, was ruined, was arraigned in the Jefferson Market Police Court. He was held in $10,000 bail, and locked up in the Tombs. It is probable that his bail will be increased.

Crushed to Death.

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., Nov. 19.—William Hackett, a foreman for the Reading Railroad Company, was accidentally killed here. He was giving instructions to a gang of workmen under a trestle, near North Mahanoy colliery, when a colliery employe named Cavern pushed a heavy log over the edge of the trestle. The log struck Hackett on the head crushing his skull and breaking his neck causing instant death.

SHOT BY A MADMAN.

The Organist of the Mariners' Temple in New York the Victim.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Miss Gladys Price, aged 24, was shot through the left lung last night by John T. Davis, aged 45, and now lies in the hospital in a critical condition.

Miss Price is the organist at the Mariners' Temple, corner of Madison and Catherine streets, and was just leaving the building after the evening services when Davis shot her.

Davis is a lunatic of the most pronounced character. He has at times followed the sea for a living and lately has frequented the reading room in the basement of the Mariners' Temple. Davis was at once arrested.

At the station house he declared that Miss Price was his wife though the girl avers that she never spoke to him. He also declared that Grover Cleveland was continually following her. He had challenged Cleveland to fight a duel and last night saw him in the church sitting by the side of Miss Price. He said his object was to kill her and then kill Cleveland, who had led her away from him.

Davis expressed no regret at his act, except to say he was sorry he did not kill Mr. Cleveland, which he declared he would yet do.

WILL OPPOSE DON CAMERON.

Mr. Delamater of Pennsylvania a Candidate for United States Senator.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 19.—George W. Delamater, on his arrival here, made an interesting statement. It was the first time he has been in the city since his defeat, and he saw only a few intimate friends and then left for his home in Meadville.

During a discussion of his defeat he intimated that it was by no means his political death blow, and said he was a candidate for United States Senator to succeed Don Cameron.

The announcement was a surprise, and was not meant to be made public for some weeks yet.

Chamber of Commerce Banquet.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Two hundred gentlemen, representing the wealth, the business industries, the literary and financial circles and the bar of this city and State, were guests last night at the 122d annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce at Delmonico's. President Charles S. Smith presided. At the same table were seated Chauncey M. Depew, Carl Schurz, General William T. Sherman, Grover Cleveland, George William Curtis, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, David M. Stone, Samuel D. Babcock and General John M. Schofield.

Gov. Hill Attends Two Weddings.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Governor Hill arrived in the city last night, but will go back to Albany at 5 o'clock this afternoon. The Governor's mission is not political. He came to attend two weddings. The first is that of his personal friend, Col. Samuel J. Tilden, jr., of New Lebanon, who was married at 12 o'clock to-day to Miss Halsey, of Brooklyn. The second wedding is that of Miss Ida Muller, daughter of Judge William L. Muller, of the Court of Claims, who was married at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon to W. Sutherland Hunter, of Philadelphia

The Hatters' Lockout.

DANBURY, Conn., Nov. 19.—The situation in the hatters' trouble is not changed, except that more factories have closed up all their departments owing to the trimmers being locked out. The Hat Manufacturers' Association held its annual meeting, but did nothing beyond briefly discussing the situation. Each side is evidently waiting for the other to take the initiatory steps toward a settlement.

Light Sentence for Manslaughter.

TAUNTON, Mass., Nov. 19. — Jerome Brisebois, of Fall River, was sentenced to 16 months in the House of Correction for manslaughter. Brisebois was a watchman in a Fall River mill, and was bothered by boys. In driving them away he threw a piece of iron among them, striking one boy on the head and causing his death.

Wide Difference in Bids.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19. — Bids were opened at the Treasury Department for the joiners' work on the public building at Pittsburg, Pa. The bids took a wide range, the highest being $411,000, and the lowest that of Wood, Jenks & Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, at $122,000.

Decapitated by the Cars.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 19.—An unknown man who had been loitering about the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad station for several days, deliberately laid his neck on the track in front of a switch engine and was decapitated.

Banker Faulkner's Case Postponed.

AUBURN, N. Y., Nov. 19.—The case of James Faulkner, of the defunct Dansville Bank, was called in the United States Court and put over to the next term. Faulkner was in court in the custody of a deputy marshal from Rochester.

Canals to Close November 30.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 19.—Superintendent of Public Works Hannan has officially announced that the canals would be closed at midnight of November 30. Mr. Hannan said that the season has been a prosperous one.

Found Guilty of Murder.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Nov. 19—In the Court of Oyer and Terminer Stephen Petrese was found guilty of manslaughter in the first degree for the killing of Stephen Fetschke, at Roseton, last month, at a christening.

Another Victim of the Explosion.

READING, Pa., Nov. 19.—Charles Walbert, who was injured in the Trexler stave works, died during the night. This makes the fourth death resulting from the explosion. Several others who were injured are not expected to live.

PARNELL'S FRIENDS

The Irish Leaders Will Stand by Their Chieftain.

LIBERALS WAITING FOR A CUE.

Great Curiosity to See How Gladstone Will Treat Parnell.

An Advance Copy of the Queen's Address Will Not be Furnished the Irish Party. William O'Brien Says that O'Shea is a Loathsome Creature—Tory Attacks Beneath His Notice.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—It is not known whether Mr. Parnell intends to be present in the House when it meets on Tuesday or not. Many believe that he will postpone his appearance to a later and less conspicuous occasion, though it will be rather singular for him to disobey his own urgent "whip," in which he dwelt upon the importance of every Irish member being on hand at the opening.

There is great curiosity to see how Mr. Gladstone will treat Mr. Parnell since the scandal came out. The Globe declares that the Grand Old Man will shock the public if he continues to display personal friendship for "this two-penny Don Juan."

However this may be, Mr. Gladstone is said to be much depressed by the evidence in the divorce case. Although the scandal has been a matter of public gossip for months and even years, and has been alluded to more or less directly in certain weekly prints, Mr. Gladstone, according to his close friends, never heard this gossip, and the prints alluded to are excluded from his library. He is a man of the most strict ideas in regard to family obligations, and the O'Shea trial has come on him as a new and painful revelation in reference to the man for whom he has grown to feel a personal as well as political admiration amounting to more than ordinary friendship among public men.

It is needless to say that the attitude of the rank and file of the Liberals toward Mr. Parnell will be largely shaped according to the cue which they will take from Mr. Gladstone's greeting of the Irish leader.

It is stated that the practice of furnishing an advance copy of the Queen's speech to the leader of the Irish party will not be followed this session.

PARNELL'S SUPPORTERS.

The National League Will Stand by the Irish Leader.

DUBLIN, Nov. 19.—Mr. Leamy, M. P. for the Southern Division of Sligo, presided at the regular meeting of the Irish National League. On taking the chair he said that Mr. Parnell was the chosen leader of the Irish people and that they would stand by him as long as he stood by them. He would lead the champions of Ireland in the Parliamentary combats of the future, and it would be shown that now in the hour of his severe trial, his countrymen were more than ever devoted to him as their political leader.

Enthusiastic cheers punctuated Mr. Leamy's address. Honorable Matthew J. Kenny, Member of Parliament for the Middle Division of Tyrone, and other distinguished Irishmen identified with the National movement made addresses, all laudatory of the patriotism and ability of Parnell and the Irish leaders now in America.

O'BRIEN DEFENDS PARNELL.

He Regards the Tory Attacks as Beneath His Notice.

BOSTON, Nov. 19.—Before starting for Buffalo, William O'Brien in an interview said he regarded the attacks of the Tory newspapers of London against Parnell as beneath notice. For the past ten years the same papers had attempted to assassinate Mr. Parnell's character, not in the least from any motive of public morality, but on account of his unrivalled leadership. All Mr. O'Brien knew of the O'Shea matter was that "O'Shea is a loathsome creature who is capable of anything."

"The Irish party and the Irish people" said he, "may be trusted to guard the interests of the Irish cause, without the least regard to rumors set afloat by moralists like Pigott's employers."

Reaction in Public Sentiment.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—It is undeniable that the excessive virulence of the Tory editorials is causing a reaction in public sentiment with regard to Mr. Parnell in connection with the O'Shea trial. Mr. Thomas Power O'Connor's paper, the Star, says that the Home Rule compact was made between nations, not between persons, and will stand.

Dr. Koch Chagrined.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—Dr. Koch is chagrined at the reappearance of lupus in a patient who was reported to have been cured by the use of the new lymph. This, however, is the only instance in which the treatment seems to have been unsuccessful.

Kills Her Five Children and Herself.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—In the town of Thaun, Alsace, a woman of that place, impressed with the idea that she and her family were threatened with starvation, after cutting the throats of her five children, killed herself.

A Battle in a Church.

VIENNA, Nov. 19.—A fight occurred at Bistritz, Transylvania, between the opposing members of one of the churches there. When the battle was ended six persons had been killed and sixteen injured.

Lady Rosebery Dying.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Lady Rosebery is dying in Paris. She is the daughter of the late Baron Meyer de Rothschild and the wife of Lord Rosebery.

107 Years Old.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 19.—Jacob Vincent, an aged colored man, formerly a slave, was taken to the Washington County House. He gave his age to the census commissioner last June as 107 years.

CLEVELAND TO PATTISON.

The Ex-President's Personal Letter to Pennsylvania's Governor-Elect.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 19.—It having been asserted that ex-President Cleveland had neglected to congratulate Governor-elect Pattison, the following personal letter is given to the public:

MY DEAR SIR: Though I know that you are overwhelmed with congratulations, I cannot resist the temptation to express to you my delight upon your election as Governor of Pennsylvania.

I have felt the most intense interest in the contest in your State, and have had great sympathy with the good people there, confronted as they were with everything that was bad, and this indorsed and supported by a party claiming an immense majority of the voters. It seemed to me that the condition was almost pitiable, and that the struggle between right and wrong, at such odds, ought not to have been forced upon your grand old commonwealth. But when it came, precipitated by the arrogance of those accustomed to deceive and betray the people with impunity, I almost held my breath, and, as an American citizen proud of his country, prayed God for the people's safe deliverance and for a demonstration that they had not lost their love for honesty and right.

The demonstration came and I am now glad that the issue between right and wrong was made so clearly, and that the wrong so impudently displayed the banner under which its fortunes were gathered.

I want to thank you, as a citizen and as one of the people, for the gallant fight you made and for all that you have done in this trying hour to save the American character; and I am so glad that this was done under Democratic auspices—though I think every man who voted for you deserves the gratitude of his fellow countrymen. Yours very sincerely,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Hon. ROBERT E. PATTISON, Philadelphia, Pa.

Max Surskind, a bar-keeper in Erandt's saloon at North and Erie streets, Chicago, was shot and fatally wounded by a former mistress named Olga Hoffman yesterday.

The Governor-General of Canada has signed the death warrant of William W. Blanchard, a sailor of Boston, Mass., in jail at Sherbrooke, Que., for the murder of one Calkins, a blacksmith of Stanstead, Que.

By a vote of 9 to 1, the Atlantic City, N. J., Council passed the high license order. Hereafter the lowest license fee will be $500 per annum. It will range from this figure up to $900. This action will close 75 saloons.

The fourteenth day of Signor Succi's fast in New York found him cheerful and to all appearances suffering no pain. He weighed 126½ pounds, showing a total loss of 20½ pounds. His temperature was 97 and his pulse 60.

Nicholas Murphy of Oneida, N. Y., and John Sullivan of New York city fought four rounds in a factory building near Utica, N.Y. In the fourth round Murphy hit Sullivan a terrible blow, knocking out ten of his teeth and winning the battle.

Nicholas Welter, of Charleston, Montgomery county, New York, arrested for illegal voting in the Presidential election of 1888, pleaded guilty in the United States Court at Auburn and was sentenced to six months imprisonment in the Montgomery County jail.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—For New England and Eastern New York: Fair; no change in temperature; variable winds.

For New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania: Fair till to-morrow night; stationary temperature; variable winds.

For Western New York and Western Pennsylvania: Fair, preceded by light rain on Lake Ontario; slightly warmer, except stationary temperature on the lakes; southwesterly winds, high on the lakes.

THE DAILY PRESS.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—The usual prayer meeting of the Crescent Avenue church will be resumed in the chapel this evening at 8 o'clock.

—Elizabeth's common council was to vote last evening on the adoption of an ordinance fixing each councilman's salary at one dollar a year.

—The Woman's Temperance Aid Society will hold a mother's meeting in Reform Hall to-morrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. A cordial welcome is extended to all.

—Those who read the new advertisement of the Crescent Pharmacy to-day will learn the glad news that Williams is selling the finest glycerine soap in the market at ten cents a cake.

—Mrs. Dr. Edwards, the most celebrated of living clairvoyants, is now at New Brunswick. She has engaged rooms at the City Hotel, corner of Albany and Neilson streets. She will remain only two weeks, till Dec. 3.

—Those lordly young Postal Telegraph boys on bicycles now get their foot-covering polished three times a day, and the local shoe-blacks, once high and mighty playmates with them, bow down and grovel in the dust every time they approach.

—The Plainfield churches are continuing very successfully individual revival services. The meetings last evening were attended by many hundreds of converts and re-consecrated Christians, to the great interest and profit of all. THE PRESS of last evening contained exclusively a correct schedule of meetings for the week.

—The Associations of the Fourth Y. M. C. A. District will meet in annual convention at Westfield, Nov. 28 to 30. An interesting programme has been arranged and it is hoped that the Plainfield Association will be well represented. Information may be obtained from Stephen Cahoone of the District Committee, or at the Association rooms.

—The sinners of Plainfield do not appear to be as hardened as the sinners of New Brunswick. Three thousand persons have turned from sin at the former place within three weeks, while scarcely thirty converts were made at the recent evangelistic services [conducted by Evangelist Echlevers] in this city. Why is this thus? —New Brunswick Fredonian.

—To-morrow afternoon, at half-past three o'clock, at the Woman's Christian Temperance Union rooms on West Front street, there will be a meeting for mothers. Mothers whose hearts have been touched with a new interest, and mothers who are rejoicing over the conversion of their children, are especially invited. It is hoped that the meeting will be enjoyable and helpful.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Clarence Titsworth, of East Fifth street, is home from Alfred University, Alfred Centre, N. Y., for the Thanksgiving holidays.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Bennett, of Duer street, is happier than ever since the arrival of a little daughter Sunday morning.

Congressman-elect Sanford, of New York, in his statement of expenses includes $1,000 paid to F. X. Schonomaker, of Plainfield, for speeches.

George Watts, formerly of this city, who has charge of a mission in Troy, N. Y., has closed his work there for two weeks, and is with D. L. Moody in the cities of Albany and Troy. The evangelists are having a great harvest.

The Misses Sarah and Harriett Manning, of this city, have recently passed a most successful trial of voice and musical ability, and are now under the same manager that represents Mme. Albani, Minnie Hauk, Lilli Lehman, Campanini, and other great artists.

Augustus D. Shepard, of East Front street, was on Monday elected a director of the Fifth Avenue Transportation Co., of New York. The entire board elected was in the interest of Mr. Shepard's brother, Col. Elliott F. Shepard, whose methods of management causes a deficit to the company each year.

The widow of the late Daniel Runkle, father of Henry G. Runkle of West Eighth street, is a sister of A. G. Richey of Trenton, who is attorney of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The Warren Foundry and Machine Company, of which Daniel Runkle was President, was started by Mr. Runkle in 1856, and was made into a stock company in 1860. The firm of Runkle, Smith & Co., at 15 Wall street, New York, of which Daniel Runkle was President, and of which Henry G. Runkle is Treasurer, was chartered nine months ago to put in water-works in Havana, Cuba. Among the offices which Mr. Runkle held, and which THE PRESS has not already mentioned, was the Directorship of the National Bank at Easton, Penn. Mr. Runkle was also the former owner of the Keystone Smelting Company in Pennsylvania. His second son, William Runkle, is Vice President of the Warren Foundry and Machine Company at 160 Broadway, New York.

As a cough remedy, Hires' Cough Cure is, perhaps, the best medicine that science has ever discovered. It cuts the phlegm and mucus, relieves the lungs and chest, breaks up cold as nothing else will do. In croup and whooping-cough its prompt action is like magic. No family should be without it.

JEALOUS OF PLAINFIELD'S CONTRACT

The Pond Company's Rivals Demand a Rigid Investigation.

There is trouble at the United States Watervliet arsenal. William Sellers & Co., machine toolmakers of Philadelphia, declare that the new gun lathes being furnished to the War Department are not only defective but wholly unsuited for heavy ordnance work. The makers of the lathes are The Pond Machine Tool Company, of Plainfield. During the past session of Congress an appropriation of $400,000 was authorized for the construction of heavy cannon for seacoast defence purposes. Nearly all the guns for the Atlantic seaboard are to be built at Watervliet. In order to render the arsenal capable of undertaking the work the War Department found it necessary to have constructed seven gun lathes. Bids were accordingly invited, and many of the prominent machine makers of the country entered into the competition. Among the number were The Pond Machine Tool Company and William Sellers & Company. The latter firm bid $60,000 for each lathe, or $350,000 for the whole contract. The Pond Tool Works bid $30,000 on each lathe, and being the lowest bidder received the contract. The bids in each instance, save one, were on plans drawn by the War Department.

The single exception was the bid of Wm. Sellers & Co. This firm bid on plans of its own. The War Department plans are said to be primarily the plans of Lieut. Gordon of the Ordnance Corps. They were adopted by the Secretary of War. Three heavy guns have already been turned on one of Gordon's Plainfield lathes. None have ever been turned on one of William Sellers & Co.'s lathes, yet the Philadelphia firm has protested in a written communication to Secretary Proctor against the adoption of the lathes being built in Plainfield. In order to satisfy himself more thoroughly that Lieut. Gordon's Plainfield lathe warrants adoption by the War Department, Secretary Proctor has secured the services of Horace See, the naval architect and marine engine builder, and John Fritz, manager of the Bethlehem Steel works, as experts. These two gentlemen understand perhaps better than any other two men in the United States, the strength of metals and the efficiency of different types of machine tools. They will personally inspect, during the present week, the lathe now in operation at Watervliet and report their opinion of its efficiency.

When the 'Possum Bites He'll Wonder Why.

The man who carried a very-much-alive twenty-five-pound opossum around by the tail yesterday and gleefully exhibited it to his friends with a humorous description of how he had whacked its eye out with a club, when it showed its head out of a hole behind his barn, declined the offer of a humane store-keeper who said "Let me treat you likewise." The suffering 'possum hasn't yet been put out of its misery, and its funny captor still carries it about and tells his laughable story and pokes witticisms and his finger at the blood-clot remnant of an eye. Kind-hearted people hope that before the Plainfield Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals interferes the patient 'possum will have secured an ample and painful mouthful from some fleshy portion of its keeper's anatomy.

A Local Sportsman Honored at a Game Supper.

Laing's Hotel of this city, has always been famous for its cuisine, and under the present management of J. B. Miller & Bro. its reputation is well sustained. The present chef of the Hotel, Al Griffen, has become very popular with the guests of the house and its patrons, in his endeavors to cater to the wants and wishes of the public who visit Miller's Hotel. Henry VanLiew, the head waiter, is another popular employe of the house; he always strives to administer faithfully to the wants of guests. Mr. Griffen has the distinguished honor of having been the chef for ex-President Cleveland and other dignitaries. His efforts last evening, when a coterie of friends met to honor another, who furnished a game supper, was a guarantee that Griffen knows how to cater to the wants of those at his tables.

Whatever It Was, It Wasn't a Cent Too Much.

No one except Mr. Mills himself will ever know how much the people of Plainfield have contributed to him for his labors in their city. Those curious to find out might as well set their minds at rest immediately. As THE PRESS has already stated, Mr. Mills entered into no financial bargain with the pastors who brought him here, and if he had not received one cent for his services no promises would have been broken. It is creditable to the city that its inhabitants appreciated the inestimable worth of the evangelist's work, and that sealed envelopes containing subscriptions were showered on the preacher. Knowledge of what was in each envelope is limited strictly to donor and recipient.

A Thanksgiving Appeal.

It is the desire of the Relief Association this year, as heretofore, to distribute among its beneficiaries and others of the worthy poor the customary Thanksgiving dinners. All who are interested in this work are requested to send donations of turkeys, chickens, vegetables, fruit, and the like, to the rooms, 45 West Second street, on Tuesday afternoon or Wednesday morning of next week.

E. R. LEONARD, Secretary.

—An excellent likeness of the Rev. B. Fay Mills adorns the pages of the Central New Jersey Times today.

THE GRAND ENCAMPMENT.

Odd Fellows of New Jersey in Session at Trenton.

The Grand Encampment of New Jersey, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, assembled at Masonic Hall, Trenton, yesterday, in their forty-eighth annual session. The Patriarchs were well represented from Plainfield and all other cantons of the State. There was a large amount of routine business before the session, but the most interesting were the reports of the grand officers.

The statistical record on January 1, 1890, was as follows: Number of persons per last report, 2,942; initiated, 309; admitted by card, 38; reinstated, 11; total, 3,300. From which deduct: error in last report, 7; withdrawn by card, 39; suspended for cause, 3; dropped for non-payment of dues, 190; expelled, 1; deceased, 34; members December 31, 1889, 3,036; increase, 94.

In speaking of the expenditures during the year for relief, benefits and burial, the Grand Scribe reported as follows:

Number of Patriarchs relieved, 281; number of weeks for which benefits were paid, 2,668; amount paid for the relief of Patriarchs, $7,296 90; amount paid for the burial of the dead, $1,203; amount paid for special relief, $844.30. Total, $9,344.20. The annual receipts of subordinate encampments is $18,249.02.

The Grand Lodge meets to-day.

"Hands Across the Sea."

Jefferson & Taylor's latest and greatest success, "Hands Across the Sea," with all of the original company, scenery and realistic effects from the Grand Opera House, New York, will be the attraction at Music Hall next Monday evening. The sale of seats will be begun Friday morning. Concerning this production an exchange speaks as follows:

"The name of Jefferson has never been connected with an unsuccessful theatrical production. Jefferson senior is an actor, his son a manager. The father made a fortune out of "Rip VanWinkle." The son, Chas. B. Jefferson, and his partner, H S Taylor, have a gold mine in "Hands Across the Sea," a thrilling melodrama written by playwright Pettit. The scenic splendor of this play needs no indorsement at our hands. It has been seen and admired by thousands of people."

Jersey Central Fluctuates.

The most important decline at the New York Stock Exchange yesterday was in Jersey Central, a stock which held up above 120, and often went as high as 125 in the Summer months, when all other values were growing less, and which maintained its prices steadily until well in to October. This stock opened yesterday at 99½, and advanced in early dealings to 100⅝. Then the bears begin their work, and before they were through with it it touched 92½, recovering at the close to 94½.

Jersey Central to-day opened at 90, and was the weakest on the list, but recovered in a short time and advanced to 93.

More Bookmakers Arrested.

Bookmakers John Hill, George Johnson, Solomon Lichtenstein and Eugene Brehn were arrested Monday by constables, at the Linden track, and brought before Judge VanSyckel, in a special session of the Union County Court, to answer to two indictments found against each by the last grand jury for illegal pool-selling. They pleaded not guilty, and the Judge peremptorily set down their trials for December 7, and remarked that no postponement would be granted. They were released on $3,000 bail.

A Good Time With the Knights.

Wetumpka Lodge, 3401, Knights of Honor, will give and entertainment to its members and friends to-morrow evening. The Grand officers of the State will be present. There will be visitors from Brooklyn, Newark and vicinity.

The programme will be interesting. The following artists will appear:

Miss Gussie Walcott.....Zither and Pianist
Miss Clara L. Bowne.....Contralto
Miss May Hyler.....Recitationist
Miss Edith Mason.....Soprano
Mr. L. Baxter.....Violinist

An Infant Industry for Plainfield.

The Ketchell Embossing Company, of Plainfield, has filed articles of incorporation. The company begins business with $12 000 capital, and the incorporators are Hudson M. Ketchell, Orlando B. Hastings and William M Burr, Jr. The plant will be situated in this city, with a branch in New York.

The business will be that of pasting and embossing cardboard, paper and like materials.

Tony Hart Declared Insane.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—A sheriff's jury decided that Tony Hart, the actor, was insane. The chief witness was Dr. Frederick H. Daniels, of the Worcester Insane Asylum, where Hart is confined. Hart's estate is valued at $22,000.

A Prominent Colored Mason Dead.

BOSTON, Nov. 19.—Captain Charles F. A. Francis, colored, most worshipful grand master, Prince Hall Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, is dead, aged 46.

Warren Elected Senator.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 18.—Francis F. Warren, of Cheyenne, Governor of Wyoming, was elected United States Senator by the Legislature on the sixth ballot.

Modjeska in Europe.

VIENNA, Nov. 18.—Mme. Modjeska is giving a series of performances at Poser and Cracow. At the conclusion of her tour she will visit London and go thence to America.

SNAPS FROM THE CAMERA.

STEREOSCOPIC photography is again becoming popular.

THE best way of sending photographic films which have not been developed is by registered letter.

DURING the recent photographic contest held by Frank Leslie's Weekly over five thousand prints were received from amateurs. Another contest is now announced, to close December 1, and open to both professionals and amateurs. One thousand dollars will be distributed in prizes.

RUBY light for photographic purposes, in spite of all that has been said in favor of orange green, continues to hold its own in the dark room, although many who use it complain of its effect on their eyes. A remedy for this has been found in the introduction of a pane of ground glass between the eyes and the ruby.

A SIMPLE camera has been produced for taking panoramic photographs on transparent films. The pulling of a string rotates the camera through one-fourth, one-half, three-fourths or a whole circle, the film being simultaneously wound in an opposite direction past a slit one-sixteenth of an inch wide placed behind the lens.

A NEW English societies are endeavoring to persuade the manufacturers of lenses to agree upon a uniform standard of size and number of threads for lens flanges, so that lenses of different makes will fit one flange and save the bother of carrying several different lens boards. Such a system would surely commend itself to all amateurs in this country.

AN English photographer claims to have obtained a photograph in which the natural colors were reproduced when the exposure was made by accident just at the moment when there came a blinding flash of lightning. He says that a friend of his once got a colored plate under similar circumstances, and believes that electricity has to do with photographing colors.

A DARING feat in photography was performed by George H. Baily, of Boston. He succeeded in getting a fine negative of a blast of a ledge near Savin Hill, one of the largest on record, in which two hundred and fifty pounds of dynamite were used. He did it at the risk of being crushed by some huge rock, and moved himself and camera out of the way just as a bowlder several tons in weight was about to land dangerously near him. The picture was taken just as the dust and stones had reached their highest elevation, and is as interesting as it is rare.

THE camera that does the work for the rogues' gallery is concealed. The prisoner hangs his head and refuses to look up when asked to do so, or shuts his eyes and distorts his face. The photographer makes a feint with the camera in sight, takes out the plate and exclaims: "Oh, pshaw! that is spoiled!" or words to that effect, and walks hurriedly out of the room. The prisoner raises his head at once and looks pleasant. He has outwitted the photographer. Then the concealed camera gets in its fine work, and the rogue is still more surprised and pleased at being told that he can go.

A MUSICAL MELANGE.

STRAUSS is perfecting a waltz that will admit of conversation while dancing it.

D'ALBERT, the pianist, has built a villa near Berlin, and will spend the winter there. He will return to the United States for a concert tour in 1892.

ANTON RUBENSTEIN is staying in the Black Forest, and is so busy composing that he rarely goes out except for an hour's stroll late in the afternoon. He is thought to be at work on a grand opera.

MRS. ALICE SHAW, the American whistler, has signed a contract with Patti's Russian impresario to give exhibitions in Russia, Roumania, Austria, Germany and France, beginning in St. Petersburg next month.

TOSTI, the composer, has had an experience common to most successful artists, in having been able to sell for a large sum a couple of songs to Italian publishers who had refused them when offered for very little, but who had forgotten the fact.

MME. MINNIE HAUK is unusually fond of pets. At one time her husband, the Chevalier de Hesse-Wartegg, brought home from South America a remarkably tame parrot, which he introduced into the drawing-room in a closely covered cage. He then asked his wife to sing something for him, which she readily did, and was amazed to hear a voice from the hidden cage say: "Bravo, Minnie Hauk! That is perfectly charming!" At her Swiss home, the great singer is constantly surrounded by pigeons, that eat from her hand, perch on her shoulder and even take a bath in her toilet pitcher unrebuked.

A GOOD story is told of the late Bishop Ullathorne, of Birmingham, who had absolutely no ear for music, and was continually enforcing on his clergy the use of plain chants. During one of his visitations he came to a certain church where the choir gave a capital rendering of the "Twelfth Mass." After the service the organist was presented to him, and he ventured to hope that the bishop had enjoyed the music. "Not at all," was the startling reply. "Very poor stuff!" "But," urged the poor organist, "Dr. Newman was here last Sunday, and he was delighted." "Oh, I dare say," said the bishop, "he fiddles."

THEY tell a story of Strauss, which he claimed was true. It is to the effect that an old lady admirer of the Strauss music, a Viennese, ordered in her last will and testament that a Strauss waltz should be played at her funeral, for which each member of the orchestra should receive a ducat. The heirs objected at first on religious grounds to carry out this plan, but the provisions of the will were distinct and could not be violated without endangering their own claims; so Strauss and his musicians were engaged and placed in a circle around the grave, and while the coffin was being lowered they played the favorite waltz of their late lamented ad-

THE GAME NOW SEASONABLE.

Some of the Points About Foot-Ball as Being Played.

Now that the foot-ball season is in full blast, a few points about the game may be interesting to those who do not understand it and yet take an interest in the fine work of the Leal and the Bicycle Club teams of this city.

Some insight is required to appreciate thoroughly the fine points of the sport. An idea some people have about the game is that a party of active young men arrange themselves on a field and waste their vital powers by kicking an inflated and harmless ball. The foot-ball of today is not a ball; it is egg-shaped, made of rubber, and has a lasting leather covering.

Although the ball is often kicked, its experience, for the most part, is in being pressed to earth under a ton of human flesh. It is made for such work, and can stand all strain with firmness.

A foot-ball team consists of eleven men; two teams are required to play a match. The object of one team, as it appears to a novice, is to get the ball through their opponents' goal. The goal consists of two posts, set in the ground eighteen and one-half feet apart. The posts are twenty feet high, and a cross-bar ten feet from the ground completes the outfit. To score a goal the ball must go over the cross-bar, between the posts, and it makes no difference how high up in the air. From goal to goal is 330 feet, and the width of the playing field is 160 feet. The distance from goal to goal is marked off in five yard lines, which show the progress of the play.

The various points that can be scored in a game are as follows: Goal by touchdown, six points; goal from field kick, five points; touchdown failing goal, four points; safety, two points.

A touchdown is scored when a player gets possession of the ball, manages to get across the opponents' goal line, and touches it down. That counts four points. A touchdown entitles the side securing it to a kick at the goal. The ball is taken in front of the goal, and usually held by one of the side making the touchdown, while another kicks it. If it goes through the goal according to rule, two more points are scored, making six for the touchdown and goal. In case the ball is kicked through a goal from the field while in play, it counts five points.

A safety is where a player touches the ball down in his own goal, and scores two points against his side.

The kick-off is a place in the centre of the field, where the ball is started from at the beginning of the game, and a goal cannot be scored from that point, even were a player strong enough to land the ball through the goal posts.

The spectators here have noticed a common thing at foot-ball games, and that is the frequent tumbling in a heap on the leather, and cries of "down." It is hardly necessary to inform the onlookers of this fact, as the sight of a mass of men on the ground is evidence enough. However, when the referee says "down," it means that the ball is dead, and that the player holding it has the privilege of again putting it in play by means of snapping or kicking. The latter is considered risky and the former method is usually adopted.

The centre rush of the side entitled to the ball lays it on the ground, puts his hands on it, and then flips it between his feet and back of him, where another of his side, the quarter-back, seizes it, but cannot run with it, the rules requiring that a third player must handle it before a run can be made. The rules also mention that a team having three downs, and not gaining five yards or losing twenty, must give the ball to their opponents.

An interesting part of the game is the tackle. It is quite exciting to see a swift runner, ball in his hands, sprinting for the opposition goal, and while at high speed seized by an opponent and thrown quickly to the earth, both men rolling for a few seconds. In tackling, a player cannot be seized below the knees, and no tackling can be done unless the player has the ball.

The double umpire system is used in foot-ball. A referee decides all questions about the ball, and an umpire decides on all points between the players.

No Democrat Cares to Run Against Mr. Ackerman.

To James Clark, Esq., Plainfield, N. J.:

MY DEAR SIR:—Much to my surprise I learn that I have been nominated for Councilman from the Third Ward.

While I thank you for the courtesy shown me, which I greatly appreciate, yet I cannot well accept the nomination, as I expect to be absent from Plainfield a great deal during the coming year. My business necessitates my presence in different parts of the country on very short notice, and under these circumstances I could not undertake to perform official duties with which my business would interfere very seriously.

Believe me, very sincerely yours,

E. WOLTMANN.

Plainfield, N. J., Nov. 15, 1890.

Another Artistic Treat.

Those who have seen some of the exhibitions already given by the Plainfield Camera Club will need no urging to repeat their visit next week, for they know what excellent and artistic work the Club is doing. And those who have never seen pictures made by the Plainfield amateurs have a great treat in store. This exhibition will certainly exceed in excellence of work, as well as in numbers, any heretofore held.

Notes of Theatrical Interest.

There is a deal of money for the enterprising manager who will come along and announce an out-and-out, downright, old-time minstrel show. Nowadays minstrel organizations are straining painfully after artistic effects to the almost entire exclusion of the homely negro characterizations which charmed theatre-goers a decade or two ago. Give us the old-time minstrel show, or exclude the word "minstrel" from current exhibitions.

At the end of the present season "The Old Homstead," at the Academy, New York, will have been presented nearly 1,200 times, a record unparalleled in the whole history of the world's theatricals. If the enormous prosperity which has followed the play since its initial production four years ago continues until the end of the current season, the profits at that time will be considerably in excess of one million dollars.

A striking instance of what pluck and perseverance will do for a man is found in the case of Charles E. Locke of the theatrical firm of Locke & Davis, New York. For years Locke struggled manfully to establish in favor The American Opera Company, coming up serenely after defeats that would have quieted forever the ambitions of many another man. Despite all his efforts, however, the organization finally collapsed. Undaunted, the plucky manager turned his energies to other enterprises, but luck, that large and combative element in theatrical business, continued to go against him. Then, in conjunction with Charles E. Davis, with whom he formed a partnership, he took hold of the interests of the Emma Juch Opera Company. This venture was scarcely launched before Miss Juch was taken ill. Just at this time Locke had closed a contract to exploit Minnie Palmer in "Suzette," a new comic opera. "Suzette" opened Herrmann's new Gaiety Theatre, Broadway, New York, but failed to hit the fancy of the public. When this last misfortune came home to the indomitable manager he was engulfed head and ears in preparations for the production at Niblo's, New York, of "Claudius Nero," a new dramatic spectacle. Everyone interested in the man marveled at his perseverance, and the initial presentation of "Nero" was looked forward to with extraordinary interest. If it failed Locke would be literally and hopelessly buried 'mid the ruins of his enterprises. "Nero," however, proved absolutely the greatest spectacular sensation ever offered the metropolis, and is crowding Niblo's as it has never been thronged in all its eventful history. The profits already have been enormous, and now, with characteristic pluck, Locke & Davis are reorganizing their various forces, and every one of them is now on the road enjoying prosperity.

Of Interest and Entertainment to Everyone.

The closing of the American Institute Fair on Saturday evening, November 29, will bring to a conclusion an exhibition which is now and always has been recognized as an important one to American inventors, manufacturers and the public. What the benefit of the Institute Fair is is demonstrated by the fact that year after year something new is added in every department, and standard exhibits are always to be found. The small price of admission, 25 cents, was made a condescension upon the part of the Board of Managers in order to place the American Institute's exhibitions within the reach of everyone. They appeal to the best class of people, to the thinking classes, and the amusement to be derived from a visit to the fair is acknowledged by all who are familiar with its characteristics. With good music every afternoon and evening, with the building in which there is no space unoccupied by exhibits of importance, and with the fair open from ten in the morning until ten at night, all that can be done to make it attractive is accomplished. The fair of 1890 has been a success in every way. An additional attraction for the closing will be an exhibition of homing pigeons on Nov. 24, 25 and 26, in which some of the best birds in the country will be found.

Democratic Pluralities in the State.

The official returns from the various counties in New Jersey, as filed with the Secretary of State, shows a Democratic plurality of 13,595, against 14,253 in 1889, and 7,149 in 1888. The total vote compared with the preceding years is as follows:

	Rep.	Dem.	Pro
President, 1888....	141,334	151,493	7,904
Governor, 1889....	123,392	138,245	6,853
Congress, 1890....	114,900	128,480	7,946

The Congressional pluralities were as follows: First district, 2,769, Rep.; Second, 1,171, Rep.; Third, 4,556, Dem.; Fourth, 4,671; Fifth, 1,361; Sixth, 1,743; Seventh, 5,114. The Democratic candidates carried but one county in each of the First and Second districts, and those by only small pluralities. On the other hand, the Republicans carried but one county in the other five districts, and that by a still smaller plurality.

Famous Women.

It is a significant fact that most of the women who have achieved fame in art, literature, or "affairs," have enjoyed vigorous health. This shows that the mind is never capable of the severe and continued application necessary to creative work, unless the body is at its best. The woman who aspires to fill an exalted place among her associates, must be free from nervous debility, etc. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will banish these, and it is warranted to restore those functional harmonies which are indispensable to health. As a specific for all those chronic ailments peculiar to women, it is unequaled.

MEN AND WOMEN OF AMERICA.

MARY ANDERSON has the largest foot of any stage beauty. She wears No. 5½ shoes.

GENERAL BENJAMIN F. BUTLER is engaged in writing his autobiography at his home in Boston.

AUSTIN CORBIN has imported a lot of German wild boars for his game forest in New Hampshire. They are said to be the first of their species ever brought to this country for breeding purposes.

A MAMMOTH loaf of bread two feet square and one foot thick, weighing fifty pounds, was received recently at the White House. It came as a gift to the President from a yeast manufacturer and a baker.

SENATOR JONES, of Nevada, is one of the best story-tellers in Congress. His fund of stories seems to be inexhaustible, and it has become one of the traditions of the Senate that he has a new story every morning.

HENRY WATTERSON gave promise in early youth of developing into a great pianist, and his father had a notion of sending him to Europe to be trained by a great master. But the boy soon became enamored of the music of the printing press, and that plays best in America.

MISS ELIZABETH BISLAND, who made a trip around the world, beating the time of the mythical Phineas Fogg, has gone to England to live, it is said. This is strange, in view of the fact that she was promoted to a very responsible position on the Cosmopolitan after her return from her journey.

AMONG the things saved from the rubbish when the home of the late Henry Ward Beecher was broken up at his death were two leather bound books in which he had kept his farm accounts, and right in among the tables of dollars and cents, corn and potatoes, turnips, cabbages, etc., will be found descriptions of flowers or trees. In one instance several pages are given up to lamenting the death of his farmer.

ROBERT BONNER, who loves to talk about his wonderful trotters almost as much as he does to drive them, says that he never expects to see the time of Maud S.—a mile in 2:08¾—lowered. Dexter held the record for years, and Mr. Bonner thinks Maud S. will do the same. Even Sunol's quarter mile in twenty-eight seconds does not alter his opinion, for nothing like that speed could be kept up for a full mile.

A. T. STEWART was not, as has so repeatedly been said, a penniless boy when he began life in New York. On the contrary, his opportunities for a successful business career were unusually good. When he was twenty years of age his entire fortune, amounting to over twenty thousand dollars, was placed in his hands, and his first purchase was a large consignment of Irish linens in Belfast. The sale of these goods nearly doubled his fortune, and when he was twenty-one he had forty-thousand dollars in cash and was well established in the business which afterwards brought him such magnificent revenues.

ADVICE TO PARENTS.

THE future destiny of the child is always the work of the mother.

THERE is no better diet for children than milk, not cream, which is apt to be a little too rich for the stomach. As a soporific nothing equals a glass of milk taken just before retiring.

DR. EDWARD JOHNSON states from personal observation that a diet of lean meat for children is injurious, and that they do best on purely vegetable and farinaceous diet, with perhaps the single exception of milk; that the one grand object in the feeding of children is to see that they do not eat too much.

CHILDREN must be interested. The persons and places where they find the keenest interests are those to which they will attach themselves. If the parent and teacher fail to pre-occupy the field, the dangerous outside influences are sure to do it. We must pre-occupy the field if we would save the children.

THERE can be no appearance more hopeful and promising in childhood and youth, than a tenderness of conscience respecting small things. A child who is never inclined to plead excuses for what is known to be wrong, by saying: "Is it not a little thing?" who resists an improper thought, forbids a hasty word, who fears the slightest deviation from the truth, bids fair to rise by gradual but certain steps to true excellence.

THERE is one period of life at which overwork is apt to be very disastrous—namely, between the ages of twelve and sixteen. During this period, rapid mental and physical development is taking place, and great strain is thrown upon every part of the organism. The boy is changing into the man, the girl into the woman. There is certainly no period in the life of any individual so fateful as this in its influence on his or her future career.

IT seems a truism to say that the dyspepsia of adulthood is formed in childhood, yet the parents that appreciate the priceless blessing of a good digestion for their children sufficiently to regulate their diet during the years of their early growth are none too many. The foundation of the habit of overeating is laid in childhood, and it is unquestionably true that nearly all persons eat much in excess of what they should. An eminent British physician is quoted as saying that "one-fourth of what we eat goes to sustain life, while three-fourths go to imperil it."

WRITING of chest development in young persons, Dr. Berry, of the New Hampshire State Board of Health, says that by one hour's daily exercise for eight months, twelve men from nineteen to twenty-eight years of age gained an average of nearly three inches in chest expansion, the greatest gain in a single individual being five inches. He recommends, as an exercise for chest expansion, forced breathing, by deep, slow inspirations, holding the breath as long as possible; long walks, and the use of home exercises. He thinks that such exercise, begun early, would do much to diminish the frequency of chronic disease of the lungs and increase the capacity of mental and physical work.

DRIFT WOOD.

A PEARL worth $5,000 was recently found in the Pecatonica river near Argyle, Wis.

EDWARD MCDONALD, of Allentown, Pa., thinks he owns the smallest dog. It is five months old and weighs four ounces

A WIT, who was asked what he would rather be during the three stages of life, replied: "Till thirty, a pretty woman; till fifty, a successful General; the rest of my life, a priest."

SOME men never lose their presence of mind. A Milwaukee man threw his mother-in-law out of a window in the fifth story of a burning building and carried a feather bed down-stairs in his arms.

A YANKEE has invented a chicken hobbler, consisting of a spring attached to a hen's leg, which, when the hen attempts to scratch, will move her onward, and will, in fact, walk her right out of the garden.

A MAN distributing bills around Chicago has an educated pup to do the work for him. The man carried the bills and folded them as he walked. Every time he came to a house he would give one to the dog, who would jump over the fence and gravely deposit it on the doorstep.

A COUNTRY publisher who is dissatisfied with the circulation rating of "exceeding 250" given his paper in a newspaper directory, writes a scathing letter to the publishers of the latter, which concludes as follows: "If we had the power we would compel you to run off our edition on a hand press."

AN ingenious photographer possesses a camera which he boasts cost him but $1.20, 35 cents of which went for a broken-down opera-glass, from which he got his lens. His outfit of working tools comprised saws for 25 cents, hammers for 15, auger stocks for 25, bits for 10 and jack-planes for 35.

A LOG cutter found a bottle containing $1,000 in gold dust near Sly Park, El Dorado County, Cal. He was sawing a tree down when he struck something. He could not imagine what the saw could be striking in the middle of a tree three feet thick. After the tree was down and an examination made a bottle containing $1,000 in gold dust was found in the center of the tree. It was probably put in there many years ago by some old miner.

THE far-reaching influence of a wink was well illustrated at a Conneautville (Pa.) fair the other day when two strangers appeared on the scene and, with a sly wink, quietly called the attention of the agriculturists to a large number of bottles in a basket labelled "cold tea." The wink did the business, and the "cold tea" was soon bought up at fancy prices. It proved to be cold tea in fact, and nothing more, but when the discovery was made the young men had "tipped each other the wink" and disappeared.

A RAT got caught by the leg in a store and squealed loudly for mercy, says a Maine exchange. The proprietor of the store watched the rat, which continued the squeal. Finally another rat crept cautiously out and walked up to his unfortunate companion, and evidently took the situation in, for they seemed to talk with each other, and arrived at the conclusion that the captured rat's chances were desperate, for the second one began to gnaw the unfortunate rat's leg off, allowing it to escape, which it did, jumping away on three legs, the other leg remaining in the trap. It almost seemed as if they had deliberated over the case, and had reached the only possible means of escape.

AFTER THE HONEYMOON.

MRS. CAUDLE (concluding a curtain lecture)—"Remember I am telling you this for your own good." Mr. Caudle (speaking for the first time)—"Is that so? I thought it must be for your own amusement."

SMALL BOY—"Papa, what does 'monotonous' mean?" Father (wearily)—"Wait till your mother begins to talk dress with your aunt, my boy; then you'll realize the full meaning of the word."

DISGUSTED HUSBAND (eating breakfast on fifth floor of flat)—"Maria, what do you call this?" Wife—"That is a loaf of Boston brown bread of my own baking, John." John opens window and throws loaf of bread out. It kills a street-car horse. Great excitement. Missile inspected by local scientists and unanimously pronounced an aerolite.

MRS. NEWHAND—"What! twenty cents a pound for mackerel? Why, the man across the street only asks sixteen cents." Fishmonger—"Very good, madam; but you must remember that my fish are hand-caught, those you see opposite are caught in nets; that makes a difference, you know." Mrs. Newhand—"Of course, how stupid of me. You may give me that large one there."

YOUNG WIFE—"There's a gentleman in the library, dear, who wants to see you." Young Husband—"Do you know who it is?" Young Wife—"You must forgive me, dear, but that cough of yours has worried me so of late, and you take such poor care of your health, and—and, oh, if I were to lose you, my darling!" Bursts into tears. Young Husband—"There, there, dear! Your fondness for me has inspired foolish and unnecessary fears. I'm all right; you mustn't be alarmed. But I'll see the physician, of course, just to satisfy you. Is it Dr. Pellett?" Young Wife—"N-o, it is not a doctor; it's—a life insurance agent."

"I CAN'T see what is the matter with this cake," the young wife said. "I've put in the eggs and the sugar, and the corn starch and the flavoring, just as the recipe says, and it's a horrible mess. I don't believe I can make any thing out of it at all; it's too bad." "You haven't forgotten any thing, have you?" inquired the husband, looking up from his newspaper." "Nothing. It says: 'With one quart of sour milk and a teaspoonful of soda make a batter in the usual way. Then add the other ingredients.' I added them, but it doesn't seem to me to look like a batter. It's just a mess of eggs and sour milk and things." "Where's your flour, my love?" "Flour, Horace?" exclaimed the sweet young wife; "do they put flour in cake?"

IN THE CONSERVATORY.

Brimblecorn (fiercely)—Do you love me, Deborah?

Miss Bruce—Really, you are so impetuous!

Brimblecorn (with a groan)—I reckon you'd be impetuous if you were kneeling on a cactus! Yes, or no?—Judge.

Unfortunate.

Brown—Yes, poor Jones got drowned when the vessel was wrecked.

Smith—But he was a good swimmer!

Brown—Yes, but everybody got catching hold of planks and spars and jumping overboard with them. In the excitement Jones jumped overboard with the anchor and it pulled him under.—The Jury.

The Hustler.

"The meek shall inherit the earth," quoted a minister to a parishioner not noted for his meekness.

"Yes," replied the layman, "but the hustler is contesting the will very vigorously."—Harper's Bazar.

WE ARE SURE

This Will Be of Interest to You ALL.

During the past week we have added largely to our higher grades of shoes.

Men's shoes, made by Hathaway, Soule and Harrington, strictly hand made; they are the best shoe that can be made; we don't care how much you pay for others.

In Ladies' we have put in a line of E. C. Burt's welts, and Holbrook & Co., Lounsbury, Matheweson & Co's. fine shoes; and in Children's and Misses we have got the best that can be found, including some of the manufacturers. We have them in St Goat, French Dongola, with or without welts.

And here is something for School shoes that New York people are advertising so strongly: It is made of calf-skin—made to imitate kangaroo, and has a protection welt. If you will come in and let us show you this shoe, we can explain it to you better. It is something altogether new; you have never seen it before. We will guarantee it to wear longer than any shoe you ever bought for your child; you should buy this shoe by all means, as it is impervious to water.

WILD BOB'S FAST RIDE.

A Memorable Night's Work for an Amateur Fireman.

T WAS in '83 that I made my first trip over the road as a locomotive fireman. From a school boy up I had followed an engine with wistful eyes and my highest ambition was one day to be master of one of the mighty creatures. To occupy an engineer's box, with the power of putting life, strength and speed into that inanimate pile of iron and steel was my fondest hope, and today, were it not for other ties, my life would be in an engine cab. When a boy my seat at school was frequently vacant, while the happy occupant was perched on a place of vantage watching with eager eyes the backward and forward trips of a switch engine. By and by I began to make advances toward the switchmen and engine men. Several sharp rebuffs and warnings failed to daunt me, and finally the men became accustomed to seeing me around. I became somewhat of a favorite, and at last the proud moment came when I was allowed to share the fireman's seat on a trip from one end of the switch yard to the other, a distance of about three miles.

From that moment my life of toil began. Early and late I was on the engine, as it was vacation then, and I soon became a fixture. The fireman was inclined to shirk a little and from "wiping" the engine and cleaning the fire I gradually took his place with the shovel. It was then I learned how to put in a fire and it gave me the privilege in after years of participating in a thrilling run.

As I grew older my parents succeeded in diverting me from my purpose and I entered other work, but kept up my railroad acquaintance. One day I chanced to be at the depot when an engineer, who was an old acquaintance of mine, came in aboard of a passenger train. A little surprise had been planned for him at the end of his trip, and I had been selected as an accomplice. His wife and children were to board the train at the station and without his knowledge accompany him to the end of the run, where the surprise was to be sprung. As luck would have it the fireman had taken sick coming in. As I walked towards the engine, after seeing my charges safely out of sight in the train, I was met by the engineer, who was known to every one as "Wild Bob" on account of the fast runs he had made.

"Well," said he, "I'm in a fix. My fireman is sick and there isn't a man here that I would trust on this run. I don't know what I'm going to do."

Here was the unlooked-for opportunity. My old love for an engine came back with a rush and almost before I realized it, I was asking Bob in a timid sort of a way whether or not I would suit him.

"You?" he exclaimed, "why, that's so; you're a fireman. I had forgotten it. Of course I'll take you and be mighty glad of it."

I rushed back to notify my charges, dropping an excuse to Bob, and returned to the engine. Bob had already obtained permission to take me, as his judgment was relied upon, and in less time than it takes to tell it, I had divested myself of superfluous clothing and covered my "boiled" shirt with the sick fireman's blouse, ready for work. We were out of the station on the double quick as the train was ten minutes late and Bob was on nettles until he had made up the time again. It is no easy matter to "fire" a passenger engine and I was little used to hard work, but my old training served me in good stead and I managed to "keep her hot."

We had run about fifty miles with a couple of stops and had reached an important station where we were to get orders against a special. When the conductor brought the orders to the engine

"I'M IN A FIX. MY FIREMAN'S SICK."

I could see there was something wrong. His face wore a troubled look as he handed the order to Bob in silence, and he remained standing near the engine instead of signaling us out and boarding the train. The instant Bob read the order his otherwise pleasant face clouded, and in a short, sharp tone he asked the conductor what the dispatcher meant.

"I don't know," replied the conductor, "there's the orders, and it's for you to say whether we'll go or stay."

Bob glanced at his watch, then at a time card and again at the sheet of tissue paper.

"I'll go," he said; "get on."

"We've got a train full," said the conductor, nervously, "but we had better obey orders."

"All right," was the reply, and we started.

I was too busy just then ringing the bell and putting in a fire to ask the cause of the apparent doubt in Bob's mind. It was nearly dark, and after I had lighted the lamp in front of the steam gauge I could plainly see Bob's face. He was evidently worried. Instead of letting the engine "pick up herself" as we left the station he pulled the throttle wide open, and, with a glance at the gauge, simply said: "Give her another fire!"

I had hardly regained my seat before he called again: "Give it to her! We've got to be lively!"

We were running then at a tremendous rate of speed. Bob's watch was swinging near the gauge lamp where he had placed it, and his gaze was divided between the gauge, the watch and the track ahead. He had left his seat, and was standing over against the reverse lever, which was within a notch or two of the center, with one hand gripping the throttle and the other on the lever, his body bent forward in a strained attitude, as though he would push the machine along. Every second, almost, his eye would rest on the steam gauge, and in sharp tones he would call out for fire.

I was shoveling away for dear life, as it were, and I began to feel hurt at his persistence. My back was aching, there were big blisters on my hands, and at one time I felt as though I would give up. One look at Bob's set face, which was now strangely white, convinced me that he had no thoughts of my fatigue, and I kept up out of sheer desperation. I was beginning to feel frightened myself, too, and that aided me.

We were running at a fearful rate. The mighty machine rocked and swayed from side to side as it bounded along, cutting what was now inky darkness with the one gleam of light from the headlight, and it was no easy matter to keep my feet while in the gangway. A red stream of fire trailed from the smokestack and once as I glanced back from the cab window the glowing sparks seemed to have no end. The steam-gauge was close to 150 pounds, and my continued exertions kept the needle from dropping farther than 145.

It seemed hours to me since we had left the last station, but it was only a few minutes. As we ran Bob became more agitated and constantly his voice rose above the din of the engine, as he hoarsely cried:

"More coal!"

I thought it would never end. The jolting of the engine, combined with my incessant shoveling and scrambling to keep my feet, had made me sick. I gasped for breath as my feelings grew into terror, and I worked madly at the shovel and the door chain, seeing nothing, hearing nothing but the hoarse and terrorizing cry of "More coal!" which came from between Bob's set teeth as he stood with staring eyes now riveted on the gauge with never a look ahead.

"MORE COAL!"

Blinded by the glare from the seething furnace in the fire-box and weak from exertion and fear, I could bear up no longer. In a weak voice I attempted to attract Bob's attention as I sank to the floor of the cab, overcome.

As I dropped, Bob gave a wild yell and closed the throttle with a mighty thrust. His cry partially aroused me and I managed to regain my feet and stagger against the seat box, barely missing going out the gangway, in time to see a myriad of red, blue and green lights, changing swiftly from one color to another, while directly ahead of us was the broad glare of a headlight. A switch was turned within twenty feet of us and we rushed into a siding with a lurch that threw me from my feet and came to a sudden stop.

With a "Thank God!" Bob sprang over my prostrate body, opened wide the extra tank valve and then the injector. I raised myself and followed him from the engine to the platform and then I learned what had been done.

There had been a misunderstanding between two of the operators, and we, in obeying orders, had run forty-seven miles in forty-two minutes, reaching this station just as the special train was pulling out. The yard men had seen us coming and had thrown the switches in time to avert what would have been an awful catastrophe, as we had fully two hundred people in our train.

I had forgotten Bob's wife and children until now, and when I managed to tell him of them he almost fainted. His massive frame shook like a leaf as he cried faintly: "Great God! man, why didn't you tell me? I wouldn't have tried it."

To this day I have been thankful that I did not know the real situation, as I would surely have told him after we had started, and, as he has often remarked since, he would have lost his head and not been equal to the occasion. The run made him famous, however, as the newspapers took it up and a great stir was made over the matter.

It was a long time after that before I again entered an engine cab.—Kansas City Star.

—Air flows into a vacuum at the rate of 1,338 feet per second, and steam at the rate of 2,000 feet per second. It would take a column of steam eleven miles high to produce a pressure of fifteen pounds.

IN THE BUGLE OFFICE.

How a Green County Editor Lost Two Excellent Subscribers.

"You have had pretty dry weather out your way, haven't you?" said the country editor, speaking to Uncle Josh, who had just come in to renew his subscription.

"Wall, now you better reckon we have. Ain't seed the weather hotter nor dryer out my way for the last forty-odd year. You know the Perdue spring, I reckon?"

"Mighty well," the editor replied.

"Dried up."

"You don't tell me!"

"Yas, I do—dry as a bone. You know the old trout hole whar the boys uster go in swimmin'?"

"As well as I know where I live."

"Dried up."

"You don't tell me!" the editor exclaimed.

"Yas, sir, as dry as a bone. Tell you I never seed the like."

"Well, that is bad. How's the corn getting along?"

"As well as mout be expected under the circumstances."

"Wheat turn out well?"

"Mighty sorry."

"Oats were all right, I suppose?"

"Not more than a third of a crop."

"That's bad. How is—is—the turnips?".

"Turnips! W'y, we ain't sowed them yit, you know."

"Oh, to be sure. I meant—meant—oh, by the way, how is your son getting along—the tall one with the black hair?"

"W'y, don't you know he's in the penitentiary for forgin' a note 'way down yander in Alabam?"

"Oh, yes, but I thought he had got out."

"W'y, he was only put in thar two months ago."

"That's so. All the rest well, I reckon?"

"Yas."

"Aunt Nancy is busy with putting up her preserves, I suppose?"

"W'y, she died about three months ago."

"To be sure she did. What could I have been thinking about?"

"Is your daughter well?"

"Now, look here, you've gone fur enough. You know mighty well that she run away with a feller an' ain't been hern of sense. Give me back them two dollars an' scratch my name offen your list. I don't reckon you air smart enough to run a paper."

"'LOWED, I DID, THAT I'D COME IN AN' TAKE YOUR PAPER."

When the old fellow had gone, the editor mused: "One subscriber gone to the dickens. Wonder if that old fool thinks that I can keep up with his family history. I reckon that the safe plan is not to talk to those old jipes about their families. Confound 'em, I know every family in the county, but get 'em mixed. Why, come in, Uncle Doyle (an old man had appeared at the door), come right in and make yourself at home. How are—" he bethought himself of the breaks he had made with Uncle Josh.

"What was you goin' to say?" Uncle Doyle asked.

"Oh, nothing particular. How is every thing?"

"All right, I reckon. 'Lowed, I did, that I'd come in an' take your paper for another year."

"Thanks," said the editor, receiving two dollars and making a mark on a piece of paper. "Having some pretty dry weather, ain't we?"

"Mighty dry. Cattle air sufferin'."

They sat for half an hour or more, talking of the crops, but the editor made no inquiry with regard to the old fellow's family.

"Don't be in a hurry, Uncle Doyle."

"Yas, I got to go. By the way, Mr. Editor, my wife an' chillun talks about you putty nigh all the time, an' here I've been with you more'n a hour an' you ain't even asked me how they air. If you don't kere nothin' fur us, I don't reckon we oughter kere nothin' fur you; so I guess you better give me back them two dollars an' scratch my name offen your books."

When he was gone the editor mused: "Two more dollars gone to the dickens. Keeps on this way and I can't get my paper out of the express office. I reckon the safe way is to sorter feel around a little and find out how the family is without running the risk of asking or of not asking."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Bromfield, A. N. A. (who is finishing a study for his next exhibition picture, "Waning Summer")—Yep.

Kimball's Hired Man—He says it's hand-paintin' he's doin'.

Liddy Ann Kimball—Guess he's makin' it for one o' them picture papers, ain't you, mister?

Bromfield, A. N. A.—Nop.

Abs'lom Kimball—You might know it ain't for no picture paper; they don't have pictures of nothin' but fires an' accidents, an' houses fallin' down.

Liddy Ann Kimball—May be it's for one o' them funny papers, then—looks kind o' funny, don't it?

Cap'n Loveridge—Tell him if he wants to put me in, with my ole hoss 'n' buggy, I'll let him dew it cheap—ho, ho, ho!

Kimball's Hired Man—Mebbe he's goin' to put us all in—haw, haw, haw!

Liddy Ann Kimball—He's doin' off that piece o' stone wall now—do you have to git in every one 'o the stones, mister?

Bromfield, A. N. A.—Nop.

Abs'lom Kimball — He's got more'n forty different kinds o' colors in that there box. I wisht—

Kimball's Hired Man—Keep yer hands out o' them paints, Abs'lom—prob'ly he don't want ye to tech 'em.

Abs'lom Kimball—Can't ye give me some o' that yaller you're squeezin' out, mister? I want to paint my stilts with it.

Bromfield, A. N. A.—Can't spare any.

Kimball's Hired Man—Lijer Wright went up to the city a few years ago to learn the kerridge-paintin' trade—makes purty good wages at it, I b'en told. He comes down here once in awhile to see his folks, all dressed up. Ever b'en introduced to him, mister?

Bromfield, A. N. A.—I never happened to meet him.

Liddy Ann Kimball—If you want to put in our cows, mister, I'll go up yender 'n' drive 'em down. One of 'em's a hookin' cow; but we won't let her git near you.

Bromfield, A. N. A.—Much obliged; but I'm afraid I shan't have time to put them in.

my head jest when the folks was comin' out o' church. Gosh! wouldn't it be fun?

Kimball's Hired Man—I wouldn't like nothin' better than settin' down all day, daubin' off picters like that. It's what ye might call a soft job, ain't it, Cap'n?

Cap'n Loveridge—I call it a purty lazy, shif'less kind o' job fer a strappin', healthy man. If my boy Bill ever showed any signs of takin' to sech a trade as that I'd yank him out to the barn an' lather him till he'd walk pigeon-toed fer a week. They don't hardly make enough money at it to keep 'em alive. There wuz a man along here last spring sellin' some kind o' colored picters or other. He wanted two shillin' fer the small size an' forty cents fer the large ones, frames an' all. Ask that feller how much he expects to git fer that one he's makin'.

Bromfield, A. N. A. (with an inward prayer for forgiveness)—Tell him it's sold in advance for six thousand dollars —and, by the way, ask him if he can change this fifty-dollar bill, will you?

Kimball's Hired Man—He says he's sold it already for six thousand dollars, an' he's got the money in his clothes—an' he wants you to change a fifty-dollar bill for him, if ye kin! (To Bromfield.) That'll settle him, mister; he's stingier than all git out.

A pause of five or six minutes, during which nothing is heard but the rattle of a distant mowing-machine.

Cap'n Loveridge (clearing his throat) —Sorry I can't change the bill for ye, mister; didn't bring much change with me. But I wish ye'd come down an' eat dinner to my house, this noon. I'd like to talk with ye 'bout makin' some arrangement to have my boy Bill l'arn that there trade o' yourn. I'd be willin' to pay ye what's right if ye'll take him fer a 'prentice.

Bromfield (completing his triumph)—I regret that I can't accept your invitation, as I must be back in town before banking hours are over, in order to see about selling some bonds. As regards your son, I have two apprentices already, at three thousand dollars each, and I shall not be able to take any more for the next three years. Good morning.—F. Opper, in Puck.

Two Dollars Worth of Goods for One Dollar.

In no previous time have we exerted ourselves so much to outdo all our former efforts as we have on this occasion. We are determined to create a big sensation in the Tea, Coffee and Grocery trade of this town. Owing to the enormous growth in our business, and requiring additional room for a large shipment of California Canned Fruits now in transit, we have resolved to clear out our stock of Crockery regardless of cost.

This week we will give for One Dollar the following goods, together with several pieces of handsome Crockery, one pound of our Famous Special Mixed Tea; one pound of French Breakfast Mocha and Java Coffee; one pound of "Pride of Plainfield" Baking Powder; one pound of Choice New Currants; one pound of Best Carolina Rice; one-half pound of Ground Pepper.

Come early and make your own selections. Don't miss this opportunity; it won't occur again. We undersell all competitors. Goods delivered free to any and all parts of the city. On Saturdays till 9 P. M.

WALL STREET PLOTS

The Standard Oil Magnates After Henry Villard.

IN LEAGUE WITH JAY GOULD.

A Scheme on Foot to Secure Control of the Northern Pacific.

No More Failures Reported in Wall Street—London's Financial Condition Improving—A Brighter Outlook in Philadelphia—Bankers in Boston Secure Relief—A Run on Two Banks.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The greatest piece of news in Wall street is that John D. and William Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnates, have acquired control of the Northern Pacific Railroad, which practically means the ousting of Henry Villard. They are known to have been heavy buyers of Northern Pacific preferred during the late decline in values. The North American Company, by ownership of securities, had control of the Northern Pacific, but much of the first-named company's assets have been closed out during the past few days in liquidation of its loans.

The Rockefellers bought in Northern Pacific at the request of Jay Gould. They have a great amount of surplus money for which they are seeking advantageous investments. The earnings of the Northern Pacific are now the largest in the history of the company. The company, however, has been suffering from entanglements with the Villard corporations, and the purpose of the Rockefellers is, as stated, to remove it from them.

The Rockefellers have not hitherto engaged in railroad operations. Their wealth is so great that, once having embarked in railroad affairs, it is in their power to dominate them. There is a scheme on foot to provide connections for the Northern Pacific which will make it an uninterrupted rail line from the Atlantic to the Pacific. By its alliance with the Wisconsin Central it already reaches from Puget Sound to Chicago, and its route thence, it is said, will be by way of the Baltimore & Ohio.

NO FAILURES REPORTED.

The Situation Again Becoming Normal in Wall Street.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—With the exception of the appointment of a receiver of the North River Bank there was nothing to stir the placidity of the financial center in this city.

Evidently surprised that there were no further failures, the manufacturers of rumors made some themselves. It was industriously whispered around that one of the younger trust companies was in a bad way and would fail before the day ended. It didn't fail, and investigation revealed no cause for the story.

J. Edward Simmons and other financiers said that the situation was again becoming normal, and that their advices from London were of the most reassuring nature.

The Barings and the Bank of England.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The Bank of England is practically in charge of the Barings' affairs. It is probable that the firm will be resuscitated with fresh capital. The statement that bills drawn on the Barings by correspondents after Saturday last will not be accepted is wrong. They will be accepted as usual. A much better feeling exists in the market, and prices are recovering. The total influx of gold to the Bank of England for the week has been £3,300,000."

Depositors Get Their Money.

NEWARK, N.J., Nov. 20.—The run on the Howard Savings Institution continued during the day. Frederick Frelinghuysen, president of the bank, stood behind the counter, smiling and urbane. As fast as the depositors asked for their money they got it. He said emphatically that the bank was abundantly able to pay every depositor in full and still have $1,000,000 left. He thought the run was caused by recent financial crashes.

Run on a New York Bank.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—A rumor was started in some unaccountable manner that the Citizens' Savings Bank, corner of Bowery and Canal street, was in trouble. This caused quite a run on the bank, and the police had to be called to keep the excited depositors in order. President Quintard said about $100,000 had been paid out. He said the bank was all right and could meet all demands. The books of the bank show a surplus of $1,400,000.

Improvement in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—The money market shows some improvement. The action of the banks in the matter of issuing Clearing House certificates tended to allay the apprehensions, and the brokers feel that they will have less difficulty in securing the necessary funds from the banks and trust companies.

Relief for Boston Banks.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—Six or seven banks have applied to the Clearing House Loan Committee and have received certificates to the amount of $1,300,000.

Will They Fight a Duel.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 20.—Two students of John Hopkins University, it is said, will settle a little trouble between them by fighting a duel near Druid Hill Park early Saturday morning. The difference grew out of an apparently innocent remark dropped by the Southerner regarding the sister of his opponent, who is, in a few months, to make her debut in fashionable society. The challenged is a Southerner of good family and the challenger belongs to one of Baltimore's best known families.

DEAD FOR TWO DAYS.

An Eccentric Old Man Unconscious of His Wife's Demise.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—In a queer old house on Capitol Hill, within a stone's throw of the Capitol, an old woman last night was found dead. She had been dead at least two days and the old man, her husband, who nursed her constantly, did not realize the fact, but continued to put before her things to eat and drink and wondered why she made no effort to take anything. The old woman was 71 years of age and her husband, whose name is Robert Avery, is 83.

The next-door neighbors saw the old woman at the window about a week ago. She was looking ghastly, but was determined not to have medical assistance. Last night old Mr. Avery called on Col. Bumpus, one of his near neighbors, and asked him to go and look at his wife. "I don't know what's the matter," he said. Col. Bumpus went into Mrs. Avery's house and found Mrs. Avery sitting in an armchair dead. The woman was not only dead, but the corpse was putrid and the air was foul with the odor. The old man could not believe that his wife was dead. Even when the doctors came and confirmed the statement, he insisted that "there must be some mistake," and remarking, "perhaps you know best," gave himself up to his grief.

The body will be taken to Norwich, Conn., for interment.

HORSEWHIPPED A DOCTOR.

The Wife of a Woburn Letter Carrier Resents a Wrong.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—An evening paper prints a Woburn dispatch stating that Dr. Conway, a leading physician of that city, was horsewhipped and pretty badly marked by the wife of a letter carrier named Haggerty, an athletic young woman, and all that is known of the case is the husband's statement.

"If the case comes up in court my wife will plead guilty. She did horsewhip Dr. Conway and is not ashamed to admit it. He had done her wrong by things that he had said about her and she settled it."

The encounter is said to have taken place in the doctor's office, and it is said that one of the reasons why the affair may never be ventilated in court is the fact that a leading official in the city government was made involuntarily a witness of the affair and would be summoned to testify.

The Envoys Stand by Parnell.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Mr. T. P. Gill, M. P., stated that the Irish delegates in this country had cabled to their colleagues in Ireland to the following effect: "They stand firmly by the leadership of the man who has brought the Irish people through unparalleled difficulties and dangers, from servitude and despair to the very threshold of emancipation, with a courage and success unequalled in Irish history. And they do so not only out of gratitude for these unparalleled services in the past, but in the profound conviction that Parnell's statesmanship and matchless qualities as a leader are essential to the safety of the Irish cause."

Children Poisoned by Milk.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 20.—Fourteen children in North Braddock became violently ill after being fed with milk bought from a strange milkman. Drs. Clifford, Schooley, Price, Stewart and Dean were the physicians called in attendance, and they were unanimous in the opinion that the symptoms were those of poisoning. The children partook of the milk at dinner, and shortly afterward were attacked with fits of vomiting, the sickness being so violent in some of the cases as to almost throw them into convulsions.

Struck a Flowing Gas Well.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Nov. 20.—Dispatches received here from Newton Hamilton, Mifflin County, 14 miles east of this place, state that a large flow of natural gas was struck by the drillers in the new artesian well on the grounds of the Juniata Valley Camp Meeting Association at that point. The well is 600 feet deep and the gas came out with such force as to throw the water 30 feet high. Great excitement prevails in the vicinity.

Miss Marlowe's Condition.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—The condition of Miss Julia Marlowe is not perceptibly changed. Her physicians held a consultation last evening and decided that resort to surgery was not immediately necessary. Another consultation will be held to-day. The only hopeful feature of her case is the fact that there have been no unfavorable developments. She continues to take nourishment.

Her Private Opinion Publicly Expressed.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 20.—Mrs. Lease, the "queen" of the Farmers' Alliance, in a published interview says: "If an Alliance representative votes for Ingalls I pray God I may be permitted to pull the other end of the rope which swings him into eternity."

Workmen Appeal to the Clergy.

MARLBORO, Mass., Nov. 20.—The Central Labor Union has sent out a circular letter to the clergy of this city asking them to discuss the labor problem from their pulpits.
